$2,500 IS GOAL SET FOR LOCAL CHEST DRIVE

Conservative Estimate Set To Take Care Of Most Destitute Cases Here

Although only $1300 was raised for the Chilton County Chest Fund of 1930, the goal for this year has been set at $2,500, which is $1,500 less than the goal set last year, and a more desperate appeal is to be made for practically anything that will be of use to take care of the most destitute cases in the county this winter. Anything, including cash, clothes, food and credit slips good for trade at stores will be appealed for, during the drive which is scheduled to begin in the county Monday, January 12th. The need for this appears to be much greater now than last year.

The finance committee, after making a rough estimation of the needs of the county and looking over past records, have set a very low goal of $2,500. It is true that the goal of 1930 was $4,000, but was not reached. If the goal of $4,000 last year had been met the Child Welfare Department would have been able to have done more real constructive work in building up child life than was done, but on account of only about $1,300 being raised many calls for real help had to be refused. Due to the condition of the country and nation, we will be compelled to have a low budget for 1931 and will have to

Robinson Dept. Store Badly Damaged, Fire

The Robinson Department Store, one of Clanton's largest and most popular dry goods and ready-to-wear stores was badly damaged last Tuesday morning by an early morning fire, origin of which was not determined at this time.

The alarm was sounded about two-thirty Tuesday morning and at that time the rear of the building was a mass of flames inside, a tin roof keeping the flames from showing until they had gained considerable headway. Several lines of hose were stretched out and used by volunteer firemen who showed some real courage in their efforts to get the flames under control.

The fire was confined to the rear of the large building which housed the millinery department of the Robinson Department Store, gutting that department entirely. The stock in the front of the store was also damaged by the heat and smoke. The building is the property of Renfroe Mullins. The estimate of the damage was not learned as we go to press.

"My Best Girl" Here Today

One of the latest serial stories of the year begins in this issue of the News. It is "My Best Girl," by Kathleen Norris and is an up-to-date tale of ordinary people who are so like folks you know that you will be interested in everything they do, and we believe this is one of the best serial stories we have ever offered our readers.

The author, Mrs. Norris, stands in the front rank of American writers and "My Best Girl" is regarded as one of her greatest works. "Maggie" works in the five-and-ten, and so does her boy friend, Joe. Maggie's father is a letter-carrier, her sister, Liz, works in a beauty parlor, and the girl's mother has seen better days. It's good, start with the first installment in this issue.

COUNTY-WIDE MEETING TO BE HELD HERE 10

Will Discuss Conditions Of Needy And Make Plans For The Future

A county-wide meeting has been scheduled to be held at the courthouse in Clanton on Saturday afternoon, January 10th for the purpose of making plans with the County Welfare Department for the coming months.

The meeting will open at two o'clock and representatives from all parts of the county are invited and urged to attend this meeting. Reports of the conditions of needy families over the county will be heard, and conditions as found by the Welfare Worker placed before the gathering.

This meeting is said to be very important due to the fact that conditions of many families over this county are grave and immediate attention is absolutely necessary. TWO ARE SHOT DURING XMAS IN CHILTON CO.

Foster Miller And O'Neal Glass Victims of Gunshots In Past Week

Foster Miller and O'Neal Glass are in the Central Alabama Hospital here suffering from gun shot wounds in the legs. Glass is from Jemison and Miller, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Miller, resides near Clanton.

According to the story gathered by the News, Foster Miller had gone to the home of Steve Hilyer, in the Collins Chapel community on the night of Wednesday, December 24th, about seven-thirty o'clock. Not finding anyone at home he started to leave the house and just as he emerged from the yard, which is inclosed by hedge, he said a man rose from behind the hedge and shot him, the bullet from a pistol entering his left leg just above the knee on the left side and emerged just below the knee on the right side of the leg.

Miller stated that he managed to get into his car and reached a place nearby where he got a friend to bring him into Clanton to the hospital, where attendants state he will be able to be out sometime this week. Who his assailant was, could not be learned at this time, and no arrests have been made in connection with the shooting. Rumors state that Miller had been threatened before, and warned to stay away from the Hilyer home.

O'Neal Glass, age 17, was accidentally shot in his right leg by C. F. Hoehn, while the two were out hunting Friday, December 26th. The charge entered the calf of his leg. He was brought to the hospital here where he is said to be betting along all right. He is the son of Mrs. Will Glass, of near Jemison, Alabama.

FIRE DESTROYS BALDWIN HOME AT VERBENA

Local Firemen Answer Call And Pump Water From Creek Onto Flames

A fire which cast a red glow so clearly that it could be easily seen in Clanton, destroyed the old Baldwin house in Verbena, Alabama, early last Monday morning. The alarm was sounded in Clanton, about two o'clock Monday morning and the local volunteer firemen answered the call, making the trip from Clanton to Verbena in record time. Many people from Clanton also drove down.

A Mrs. Davis was occupying the large two-story home at the time, and information stated that very little of the furnishings were saved from the flames as the house was a mass of flames when discovered. The house stood on the northern edge of town, directly across the railroad from the Sid Gobson home, and a stiff northeast wind carried large and dangerous sparks to practically all parts of the town, but a close watch was maintained by Verbena citizens and damage to other homes and buildings was averted.

Although the house was burned to where the frame was standing, the local volunteer firemen did some good work in extinguishing the blaze as it was. There being no fire hydrants at Verbena, the powerful pump on the truck pumped water from the creek which flows nearby, and a steady stream of water was supplied. The origin of the fire nor the estimate of the damage could not be learned at the time of this writing. The home was said to have been one of the oldest in Verbena.

A New Year With New Opportunities

Making New Year's resolutions is an ancient custom, handled by some in a serious manner, by others in a jovial manner, becoming the subject for many jokes. The New Year is here, bringing with it new hopes, new ideas, new inspirations and is being welcomed by a people who have acquired much learning from a recent condition referred to a a "financial depression."

Definite plans, not resolutions in regard to business are needed at this time. Resolutions are made to be lived up to, plans are made to work by and with. So often during the first part of the past year one could hear the remark. "If I can only pull through this year." Those who were heard to say that have done more 'pulled through' this past year, in the majority of cases, and now have a new year in which to start, with new hopes and new inspirations. Possibly it is true that 1930 was a hard year, but how many of us really suffered? Yes, perhaps we did have to do without some things, luxuries no doubt, that we had been enjoying, but are none the worse off for that. Is it not true that there were more bank and other business failures during 1929 than afterwards?

We will say that somehow we feel that conditions are going to improve, or, we should say, are now on the road to recovery and properly adjusted. It is true that this time last year we knew we were in for some hard times, but we did not anticipate its severity, due to the fact that we did not foresee the damaging drought nor the big decline in the price of cotton. Local conditions are in a large way dependent on crop outcome in the county. We have no large industries such as steel mills, flour mills and railroad shops employing thousands of workers, those who could be put without work on account of a slump in consumption of products of these plants. Chilton County is an agricultural county. The towns located in Chilton County are dependent largely on business from farmers in the county, and the farmers are dependent on the outcome of their crops and the price paid for their products. It would be quite a different story if the farmers were restricted to raising only one crop or one product, but fortuitately, they can raise a varied line of products suitable for their own consumption.

Then is it true that if local farmers had received a fair price for their cotton, that if the recent drought had not occurred, and that local farmers had raised more money crops, other than cotton—conditions in this county would have been far better than they were? Some place the recent depression blame on the stock market crash, others place it most anywhere, and taking Chilton County into consideration, what effect on the majority of the farmers here, did the stock crash have, other than possibly affecting the price of cotton. Were the farmers of Chilton County speculating in stocks? The answer to that question can readily be found in the negative.

Summing the situation up we find this: Our county is an agricultural county; the farmers here are industrious and willing to learn; they can raise products on their farms sufficient to feed their families and livestock and have means by which to convert raw food into products suitable for use; the recent drought curtailed expected production of all crops in the county, hitting some sections a terrific blow; farmers received an extremely low price for their cotton and strawberries. Now, the drought is over, crops, such as they were have been gathered and lands are now ready to be put in preparation for crops for another season. The merchants in the various towns of the county enjoyed a fair business during recent months. There have been no bank failures in our county as in many others. The Wall Street market has "crashed," hit bottom and can now be classed among those things in the past, 1930 is gone, leaving us facing a new year, another chance—a chance to prepare ourselves for the future, our farmers have a new season facing them, and with their recent experience should profit by it. The history of panics in the past fifty years shows they have only averaged from ten to eighteen months in duration—history repeats itself. In view of that, our recent "panic" has come to its finish.

So, now is the time for plans to be made—plans that will enable us to pull through smoothly in the future with nothing less than a bright outlook facing us. Let us so arrange and outline our plans for the coming year that we will be able to live without allowing the outside world with its stock crashes, bank failures to interefere. No bank nor business failure brought on the drought that struck such a devastating blow to Chilton County the past year. That too, is over now, so let's be sensible and look ahead, plan for the future of our county. To conclude, we will quote from Roger Babson:

"People should understand that before prosperity can return there must be a renewed interest in the spiritual life by both individuals and nations. Nations should realize that the world has always possessed raw materials and labor; but has been prosperous only when the people have been actuated by a religious faith to use these resources for advancement and service. This is the law of life and now is the time when it should be taught in churches, schools and colleges. Think it over."

Mullins-Talley Wedding Solemnized Sat.

The following account of the marriage of Miss Moren Talley of Anniston, to Mr. Burton Mullins of Clanton, and Eufaula, was taken from The Anniston Star, of Sunday, December 28:

Miss Moren Talley
Becomes Mrs. Mullins

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Talley announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Moren, to Mr. Burton Mullins, of Eufaula, the ceremony having been beautifully solemnized on Saturday afternoon at five o'clock, at the home of the bride on Montvue Road. Rev. Samuel E. Hodges performed the wedding rites in the presence of a number of relatives, close friends and out-of-town guests. The home was charmingly arranged for the nuptial event with a profusion of palms, Southern smilax and ferns, with an improvised altar as a setting for the wedding party.

While awaiting the appearance of the bride, Mr. Elbert Parsons sang, "All For You," with Mrs. Luther Liles accompanying. Mrs. Liles also played softly during the plighting of the vows. The bride entered the presence of the guests with her father, Mr. Herbert H. Talley, by whom she was given in marriage. She was a lovely bride attired in a creation of lace chiffon, a Mery Popora model of shell blush and her accessories were Mignonette green, while she carried a bouquet of Joanna Hill roses and valley lilies. The bride had as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Ormsby Dawkins, of Louisville, Ky., who wore for the occasion a Mary Elizabeth model of yellow sun-gold chiffon, with accessories of beige claire. Her flowers were Talisman roses. Little Miss Doris Ormsby, of Louisville, acted as her aunt's flower girl and was daintily dressed in shell pink chiffon. The bride was met at the altar by Mr. Mullins and his best man, Mr. Reese G. Mullins, of Clanton, and the ceremony was impressively read.

An informal reception followed the marriage and the bride's table was a beautiful one in pink and white. The wedding cake held the usual favors and burning tapers cast a pretty glow over the scene.

The bride changed her wedding dress for a traveling costume of Arosa blue with gray accessories and departed in the late afternoon for Florida. She and Mr. Mullins will be at home after January first in Eufaula.

Among the out-of-town guests for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. C. Reese Mullins, Mr. W. L. Mullins, Mr. Claudie Pipes, Mr. Samuel Upchurch, Mr. Edwin Mullins, Mr. Barney Burnett, Dr. and Mrs. Joe Edgar, Miss Sophia C. Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. Hosea F. Downs, of Clanton, Mrs. J. M. Shepperd of Memphis, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin B. Small, Mrs. J. M. Jackson, Mr. W. B. Small, Mr. Reese Mullins, Jr., Miss Gladys Jackson, of Gadsden; Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Walker, Miss Margaret Walker and Mr. Norman Pilgreen, of Birmingham.

Pale and Weak

"I THINK Cardui is a wonderful medicine, for I improved greatly after taking it," says Mrs. A. W. English, of R. F. D. 4, Roanoke, Va. "When I was just a girl of 13, my mother gave this medicine to me, and it did me a great deal of good. I was weak and run-down. After I had taken Cardui awhile, I felt much better.

"In 1924, my health was poor. I felt miserable, and hadn't enough strength to do my housework. It took all my willpower to keep up. I was pale and weak.

"I got Cardui again and took it. My improvement was wonderful. I can recommend Cardui to others, for my health was so much better after I had taken a course of the Cardui Home Treatment."

This Week in WASHINGTON

BY RADFORD MOBLEY
AUTOCASTER WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, D. C., Dec. 29—(Autocaster)—Additional legislation concerning the federal farm board appears sure during the short session of Congress beginning Dec. 1. When the board submits to Congress its appropriations estimate for the year, it will also request certain changes in the law which created it. Just what form these changes will take is as yet unknown, although it seems pretty well assured that some of them will deal with present credit restrictions. This will be a signal for renewed agitation regarding the debenture plan, equalization fee or some similar subsidy" scheme. Present prospects are, however, that little prospect remains for enactment of any of these into law; at least not before the new Congress convenes in December of next year.

Two Minnesotans who never appear in public prints are among the most vital cogs of the farm board. They are Chris L. Christensen, secretary, and Edgar Markham, director of information.

They don't form any board policies, exactly, but they nevertheless play a very large and real part in the functioning of the board; what is more they are more in contact with the visitor to the board's offices than any one member of the board. Christensen, the six-and-a-half footer who is always so busy used to be in the agricultural economics bureau of the agriculture department and is one of the most expert of all federal agricultural experts. Markham, former Washington correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press, is almost the real secretary to the board, attending all meetings and having wide discretion, while many of Christensen's activities are those you would expect members only to perform.

Two hundred post office employes probably wouldn't agree with you if you think the American people are not so stupid, after all. They are the ones who annually handle 25,000,000 dead letters or pieces of undelivered mail. Most of these are wrongly or illegibly addressed; and about four-fifths must be destroyed because it is impossible to discover to whom they are addressed.

"In many states the farmers are now working two days a week to pay the cost of government." This is the key statement in a report on farm taxes issued here by the Rawleigh Foundation, a foundation maintained by a wealthy Illinois manufacturer. The report states that direct state and local taxes now equal 31 per cent of the net rent of farms; that farmers now pay more than four times as much in taxes as they spend for seed; two and a half times as much as they spend for fertilizer; and one and a half times as much as all farm improvements cost. It has been sent to all state legislatures, 42 of which convene in January.

A plant protector for the aid of young plants has just been patented here embodying several new features. It consists of a corrugated rim to be party pushed into the earth, and a top which is detachable but wedges into the rim in the ground. This top is a dome of wire with a rim around the bottom which fits into the ground rim. It is patented by John L. Stevason of Indianapolis.

Approximately three-quarters of a million files of abandoned patent applications will be destroyed in the next six months, as a result of a recent act of Congress. This act gave the commissioner of patents authority which had been lacking before. For 20 years these ancient files had been accumulating at a rate of from 30,000 to 40,000 a year. Congress has finally acted to allow for their disposal before the Patent Office moves to its new quarters in the gigantic new Commerce Department building here.

An Answer To A Merchant

AN EDITORIAL FROM THE SUSQUEHANNA, PA., EVENING TRANSCRIPT

A Susquehanna business man was heard to complain about lack of trade yesterday. We reminded him that he never advertised, and he replied that he used circular letters and postcards to tell the people about his goods.

We asked him if he ever announced births, deaths, or weddings in the circular letters and handbills he sent out? If he ever told what the town council does, or reported the hundred and one things taking place here? If he mentioned the goings and comings of people? If he mentioned the parties held, and what the schools are doing? If he included an item or two about the basketball games? If he printed church notices in the letters and handbills?

"Of course not," he replied. "All that is for you to print in the Transcript."

We admitted the responsibility, and then asked him if he did not think it wise to include his business appeal in the Transcript, that the 6,000 readers might take notice of it while they read the news of the community.

He was candid in his admission that he had never looked upon newspaper advertising in that light before.

If you want to talk to the people of this community direct, the Evening Transcript offers the best medium—the advertising columns. And the cost is far below what the postage and printing alone costs to mail out circular letters. Of course, all people do not read the ads. All the people who pass a store do not enter. All the good people do not go to church. All visitors to a store do not buy, either. But if you want your business message in a place where it is more apt to be read than any other place, then put it in the home-town paper.

Don't say business is poor until you have tried advertising long enough to build up confidence, and establish a reputation for serving the public in a modern way.

One drop of medicine does not cure a sick person. One ad will not cure a sick business. Even a sheriff's sale has to be advertised three times to be effective. — Susquehanna (Pa.) Evening Transcript.

AIR MAIL TO ASIA

What is perhaps the most ambitious air mail project ever considered is to connect the United States and Canada with China and Japan, if plans tentatively made by officials of the two North American countries can be put out into effect.

These plans were discussed on a recent visit of Assistant Postmaster General Glover to Canada, and upon his return to Washington he expressed confidence in the feasibility of the project. The proposed route would begin in the United States, cross Canada, Alaska, and the eastern edge of Soviet Russia, and terminate in China and Japan.

All the territory to be covered by the route has been flown over experimentally, and there appear to be no serious physical obstacles to the establishment of regular schedules, which would reduce the time of mail in transit as much as two weeks in some cases.

This route, Mr. Glover said, would be in keeping with the world-wide trend of the air mail, for which regular trans-Atlantic service is also being definitely contemplated.

ALABAMA'S COAL INDUSTRY

Spends Millions Yearly For Alabama Farm, Factory and Forest Products

WHAT Alabama needs most today is a bigger and a better home market. What Alabama is now actually facing is a shrinkage in the market already here.

For many years, Alabama's coal industry has been Alabama's biggest cash customer for Alabama farm, factory and forest products. Its purchases have aggregated many millions yearly. It has been a steady customer for almost everything that grows from Alabama soil—corn, hay, oats, produce in vast quantities. It has been a regular consumer of Alabama livestock, dairy products and poultry. It has been a big buyer of supplies and equipment made by scores of Alabama industries. It has been the principal contributor to Alabama's railroad freight revenues. It has built its villages and tipples from Alabama brick, lumber, and cement, and wherever possible it has given preference to the products Alabama makes and grows.

More than any single industry, Alabama coal and coke have been responsible for the prosperity which Alabama has enjoyed. During the nationwide depression of 1920-21, Alabama did not fell the full effects of hard times because Alabama's coal industry was running almost full time.

One of the big reasons why Alabama is now feeling so severely this depression, is because Alabama coal mines are now running only one to three days a week. The big buying power of the coal industry has been cut down by outside competition—natural gas, and electricity (even though produced in Alabama) which employ but little Alabama labor in proportion to coal mining. It is not alone the coal producing counties which have suffered. Every section of the state has been blighted by the back-fire.

Every time the Alabama coal and coke industry loses a customer to Natural Gas or Electricity, an Alabama farmer loses some portion of his biggest and his best home market. Every time an Alabama plant replaces Alabama coal with another form of fuel or power, it is limiting its own home market and its own future growth.

For one hundred years, the welfare of the Alabama coal industry and the welfare of our state have been irrevocably linked. To continue to forge forward they must travel hand in hand and side by side.

A CENTER OF CULTURE

In a recent letter a young woman student at the University of Wisconsin gives an enthusiastic account of the French House—La Maison Francaise—maintained in connection with the language department of the university.

The French House, first of a number of similar institutions now in existence, was established in 1918, for the purpose of giving students an opportunity to speak French and come in contact with French culture outside the classrooms. It is a sort of combination dormitory, boarding house and club for women students, but men may also take meals in the dining room.

The striking characteristic of the house is that only French is permitted to be spoken there, hence students are obliged to acquire a practical mastery of the language, instead of the mere smattering which they obtain in the average classroom. French folk songs are sung at the dinner table, French lectures are given and the French Club meets there for the study of Gallic culture and for entertainment.

This appears to be a most practical arrangement, and one which might well be adapted to the use of any college which takes its language department seriously.

"Yes," replied Calabash. "Who is this?"

"This is Johnson, Johnson, Johnson and Johnson lawyers."

My Best Girl

BY

KATHLEEN NORRIS

FIRST INSTALLMENT

"Gee, that is pretty!" said Mary Margaret Petheridge Johnson, in an awed whisper. Small, shabby, alone, and shuddering with pleasurable excitement and chill, she hung upon the gate of the paternal residence and paid to the miracle of paling and brightening lights and colours in the gray world about her an involuntary tribute of delight and reverence.

Behind her shabby little back, and the draggled strings of her shabby little kitchen apron, and the carelessly massed ringlets of her tousled little head, the sun was rising.

The Johnson cottage stood at the very top of a steep city block. It was a meek, self-effacing little dwelling, disreputable, lacking paint. Behind the cottage was a low row of miserable outbuildings, none able to stand alone, each one yet managing to afford a wretched support to its neighbor.

On this cool winter morning, a light from the kitchen window lay warm and yellow across the brightening yard, and a cat, huddled disgustedly against the closed kitchen door, mewed occasionally in a protesting and affronted fashion.

The two figures that were at the street gate, however, saw and heard nothing of this. One of them was a small cur dog. The other figure was that of Maggie Johnson.

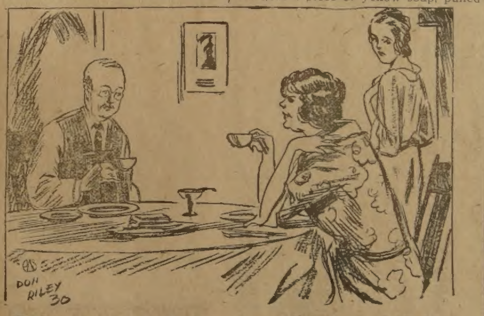
"It's pretty," she said aloud, in a dreamy voice, as the gold flashed on distant windows and dripped through trees, and the familiar silhouette of the city grew more and more recognizable. "It's like it was a big tide—washin' everyone along before it!"

For, as she hung there, tranced, whistles far away and nearby shrilled the quarter before seven o'clock, and the early workers in factories and in the big machine shops began to gather visibly in the streets. For a few minutes, their shadows moved, long and red, ahead of them. Then it was day, ordinary, commonplace, work-time again, and Maggie, rousing herself with a guilty start from the luxury of dreaming, returned to her household cares with the velocity of a little dynamo.

The sense of beauty and adventure was still strong upon her as she caught up the bottles that supplied the Johnsons with their breakfast milk and cream, and fled back to the neglected kitchen.

There was everything, domestically speaking, to be done in the kitchen, but nobody in Maggie's seventeen years had ever done it, or even half done it, and the wild disorder troubled her not at all. At seventeen, a peculiarly youthful and innocent seventeen, she was not analytical. She had spent every night of her life under this low, old-fashioned cottage roof and the dirt and disorder that Ma and Liz created in their wake and spread about them instantly were one of the simple and unavoidable conditions of her life.

Maggie had to push aside the sugar bowl and the blue plate of stale and broken soda crackers, to find room on the cluttered table to cut the fresh loaf; she had to unearth the coffee-pot from the confusion of the sink and rinse away the cuff of black ground from its spout before she could mix fresh coffee and set it on the stove to boil.



This done, she seized an instant to run into the adjoining bedroom and whisper into the ear of the man who lay asleep there:

"Seven, Pop! Lissen—seven o'clock!"

The man, a small, huddled, insignificant figure in the close gloom of the ugly little room, roused himself alertly. The double bed's other occupant also roused, groaned, and Maggie's mother stirred reluctantly and asked anxiously, apparently out of deep slumber:

"Maggie, how's the Mayor?"

"I didn't have time to look, Ma. But don't get up," the girl urged her, concernedly. "I'll bring you in some breakfast, and the paper too!"

"It don't seem right you should," Mrs. Johnson said perfunctorily. "Is 'Lizabeth up?" she asked. "You make her do her share! The worst of housekeeping," Mrs. Johnson, who had a very slight acquaintance with the subject, resumed, sighing, "is dividing up the work so one don't get it all."

Maggie, too well accustomed to these rambling dissertations to waste time in listening to them, had returned to the kitchen. She poured her father, who came noiselessly out in his postman's gray, a cup of smoking coffee, poured herself a glass of milk, and put the toast and butter between them.

Len Johnson sat down cautiously, sent an interrogative glance to the bedroom door. He was a small, timid man, with strands of silky hair brushed damp and neat across the shining bald dome of his head.

"Mad?" he asked, without sound.

Maggie set down her glass, looked straight at him, looked at the bedroom door, and shook her head.

"You wakin' her up——" Len Johnson breathed almost inaudibly.

"She didn't care!" Maggie shaped the words, with her lips, rather than said them.

Mrs. Johnson, lured by the appetizing odours kitchen-ward appeared majestically in the doorway.

A worn and spotted kimono was wrapped about her, her rich dark hair was in disorder, her eyes were fixed steadily upon her husband's shrinking form. Maggie leaped to her feet, and as her mother, who was an enormous woman sank heavily into the vacated chair, she busied herself with the coffee-pot and sacrificed, without a second's hesitation, the toast she had made for herself.

While she spread fresh slices on the oven grating, she watched both parents uneasily. Her father, pretending to eat and to act naturally, was smitten as a mouse might have been under the eyes of a cat; her mother, automatically stirring her coffee and reaching for sugar and cream, never moved her gaze from him.

"I could laugh at this," she said presently, in a clear, rich, rolling voice, every word enunciated. "I—a Petheridge—eatin' in my kitchen! And waitin' on me—is my daughter! This don't seem funny to Maggie. Len, but considerin' the home you took me from, and the way things was there, I should think it'd seem funny to you! Don't it?"

Len Johnson started nervously as the last word was shot at him.

"Indeed it don't my dear! You're quite right, I think we get along reel well—considerin'."

"Considerin' what?" the woman asked with quiet menace.

"Considerin' that your sister is entirely b yond our control, and don't pay no more attention to the father and mother that bore her than the babe unborn—considerin' that you are slaving away the best part of your life in a five-and-ten store," Mrs. Johnson took up the challenge with deadly readiness, "and considerin' that your father, who was supposed to have a fine future in a bank when I married him, as God is my judge, and as I set here this minute——Maggie," she broke off the automatic and quite unattended tirade to ask suddenly, "what are them cotton gloves like, at the Mack?"

"I didn't hear you Ma, I was talkin' to Pa," Maggie said.

"Pop, I'm workin' tonight. It's Saturday. Are you on late?" It was hardly above a murmur, it did not interefere with the majestic monologue of the lady of the house.

"Shall I wait for you like I useter, dearie?"

"No—you get comfortable an' read your paper after dinner. Murphy comes right to this corner—it ain't so far, anyway. You'll be on for the Christmas rush next week, anyway."

Maggie washed her hands at the faucet with a piece of yellow soap, pulled a small and shabby hat, once her older sister's tightly down over her thickly coiled hair, and hung up her disreputable apron. She was slipping her arms into a thick, clumsy coat—also a discard from her sister—when, reminded perhaps by the garment of its important first owner, a change came over her face, and she said in consternation:

"Oh, heavenly day! It's five past eight, and Liz says to wake her at ha'f-pas' seven!"

"For heaven's sake, what is it, Maggie?" Mrs. Johnson screamed agitated a moment later. "Don't come flying out of rooms that way—you'll have me in a faint on the floor. What's happened! What is it!"

"What's happened is that Liz Johnson and all her bedclothes are down on the floor!" Maggie answered, voice tearful with rage. "And the next time she wears only my silk stockings, I'll have her arrested—that's what's the matter! I went without lunches four days for those stockings, and she's got 'em full of runs, and I want to tell you ——Where's Pop?" She interrupted herself, suddenly calming. "Has Pop gone?" she demanded blankly, her angry face taking on an almost ludicrous look of concern and disappointment.

"Maggie, I wish you wouldn't be so sharp with 'Lizabeth," her mother said, protestingly; "it's common to have two sisters always squabblin'. If she borrowed your stockin's——"

"Borrowed! You might as well borrow a waffle," Maggie burst forth scornfully. "You might as well borrow a bath! How long ago did Pop go?"

"I can catch him—good-bye, Ma!" Maggie called, her voice coming back on the wave of cold air that was admitted by the opening kitchen door.

Mrs. Johnson sat on dreamily, munching and pondering. Maggie and the man of the family had to punch time clocks at half-past eight. But Elizabeth, the older daughter, could saunter down to the beauty parlour where she "demonstrated" a complexion cream, at any time before ten.

She came out now, tousled and sleepy as her mother had been, and wrapped, like her mother, in a soiled kimono.

"Oh, Lord, I'm dead!" she said simply.

"Have good time last night?" her mother asked, rattling sheets of newspaper.

"Time of my life. Oh, Lord, I'm dead. I got a cold, anyway. Helen's got her death of cold. Chess Rivers was just in from Denver, and he's just about dead!" Elizabeth said simply, obviously undisturbed by these mortuary details.

"Ma, you ought to get a Jap in here. This place looks something awful!"

The older woman continued to crunch and read, unruffled. Her fistborn could do no wrong.

"I know it, 'Lizabeth. But two dollars a day! My God, you wonder what next! 'Two dolalrs a day for what?' I asked one of them. 'A few dishes,' I said, 'and to sweep a cottage of five rooms—why,' I said, 'it's child's play. When I first was married,' I told him, 'I could get a girl for fifty cents a day!' "

"It seems like Maggie thinks of nobody but herself," her mother said, out of a long pause, "and that's the truth!"

But fortunately for Maggie, it was only on rare and terrible occasions that her mother and sister agreed in criticizing her. Now Elizabeth came indifferently to her defence.

"Oh, poor kid, she doesn't get many breaks!"

"You'd stand up for her, of course," Mrs. Johnson commented in reesntment.

"Well, she don't get many breaks!" Elizabeth repeated absently.

"Poverty is a curse, all right!" Mrs. Johnson presently responded vaguely. But her daughter had heard this remark so often that it made no impression, except, perhaps, that of deepening the formless discontent that was one of Liz's most marked characteristics.

Maggie had danced along the frosty winter street beside the bent, meek little figure of Len Johnson, postman, chattering, with her usual eager rush, of everything in general and of themselves in particular.

Len Johnson made almost no response. She was always like this, her eyes, her voice, her feet eager in the rush of joyous vitality that marked, for Maggie, the rise of every new day.

But even he took Maggie largely as a matter of course. 'Lizabeth was the family beauty, aristocratic and exacting and discontented, like her mother, and poor Minnie—well, she hadn't made much of a match when she had chosen Leonard Johnson, and she had never let him forget it. They had had a few years of real unhappiness.

Leonard junior had died, 'Lizabeth had been critically ill for months, bills from doctors, undertakers, nurses, hospitals had accumulated like autumn leaves, and poor Minnie's anger that there was to be a third child had added pair.
the last touch to her husband's des-

In that same dark tumbled bedroom off the kitchen from which she had impressively emerged this morning, Minnie had quite unexpectedly brought her second daughter into the world, a sickly girl, born too soon, and promisign to quit the world as unceremoniously as she had entered it.

Who indeed could have dreamed that that gasping mite, that ilttle "drowned rat," was going to turn in a few years to definite, companionable, loving Maggie?

After the general collapse of the family fortunes and the loss of her only son, Mrs. Johnson had made no further efforts to plant and foster her husband's business ambitions, or to hold up her own head in the world.

What A State Seal Means

At this time, when certain people, or certain groups of people in our state, seem to have become dissatisfied with our State Seal, and are planning to propose a substitute to the next legislature, it seems fitting that we should take time to consider the meaning of a State Seal. It appears that the chief objection to the present one is the claim that the words, "Here We Rest," thereon, do not truly represent the progressive people of Alabama. That in some peculiar way that phrase is a reflection upon the industriousness of Alabama's citizens. But we dare to say that whatever the words, pictures, individual parts, or the seal as a whole, none of these can inherently give a true portrayal of the ideals, ambition, industry, and tradition of Alabama's people—it would take many books to do this—and even then the picture would be incomplete. But on the other hand, however meager the intrinsic value of the seal, or however expressive of high ambitions, in the final analysis it is the citizenship of the state which gives it its true meaning.

From the very beginning of our state, and even before its admission as a state, its people have had certain characteristics, have conceived ambitions, and gone forth to make these ideals a reality. They have pointed with pride to past glories and looked forward with great hope and immeasurable courage to the future. The State Seal, chosen arbitrarily or perhaps on some fact of minor importance, was never meant to portray a specific portion of the many things that go to make the state. It was, and must always be an emblem—a composite emblem of all of the composite parts of the great state of Alabama—made to mean what it does today by the great heroes of yesterday and of the present, the good and the bad, the poor and the wealthy, something in which every living soul, and dead, of Alabama has had a part.

In this meaning of the Great Seal of our state, it has stood for glorious things in the past. Our great men of industry, education, statesmenship, medicine, and in other fields of accomplishment have wrought things which are to us at once a source of pride and a challenge to live worthy of such forbears. These are the things our present seal means to us—not expressed in a phrase, or a picture—but a living ideal in the hearts of those who would accomplish great things. What is there for us to gain by putting away the old standard when we can never by a mere design make it mean more. If change our emblem we must, let us change its meaning by heroic lives, and worthy deeds.

Two Great Men

There will be few who will scoff at the award of the prize of $10,000 for the greatest "current achievement in the field of science" to the two eminent medical men who discovered the cure for pernicious anemia. Only three years ago physicians knew that every victim of that terrible disease was doomed to early death as certainly as if he had been sentenced to the electric chair. In the best hospitals only two or three out of every hundred cases of pernicious anemia admitted ever left the hospital alive. Now the whole picture is changed. Many physicians have reported 100 per cent of cures; some of the hospitals have had a similar experience.

The man or men who makes a discovery like that, which lengthens life and relieves suffering, is surely entitled to honor above the mere inventor of a machine, no matter how useful the machine may be. He is doubly to be honored, for his work is unselfish and without pecuniary reward. Under the code of the physician, he may not take money for his discovery, except as it may come in such form as the prize just awarded to Dr. Minot and Dr. Whipple. The medical man may not patent his discovery, or take a fee or percentage from its sale, directly or indirectly. He must publish it to the world, for the benefit of his fellow-practitioners and the public whom he serves.

The inventor of a new machine is entitled to make all the money he can from its development and use. It may revolutionize the world, but the motive back of the invention was a selfish one. He is entitled to honors, but not to the degree to which the medical discoverer is entitled to them.

Does Advertising Pay?

Inquire of the Advertising Manager of some of our largest and most successful businesses, and they will tell you that they could not exist for a single season, nor build up anything like a volume of business if it were not for advertising.

It is evident that hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent annually for advertising. Good advertising is a continuous, well planned, carefully thought out message, full of information and description of the merchandise you have for sale.

In concerning economic conditions today, people have learned that advertising gauges the strength and prosperity of business. Advertising builds confidence, not only in products, but in the conditions of business as a whole. It animates purchasing power, which is the soul of prosperity. Today there is a tug-of-war between the public and the merchant. Advertising is the merchant's persuasive argument toward saving the day.

The modern merchandiser who will consistently plan, and print a good live, peppy ad in the paper each week, about his store and the merchandise he has for sale, can build up his trade, and bring much more business to his door.

One sure means that I and many others will remember that Christmas has passed is the bills coming around on the first—as usual. Looked as if somebody was wrong about there not being much money in Clanton and Chilton County. I saw more twenties and tens on Christmas Eve day than I've seen the whole year. That in itself may be a solution to the shortage of money during the past. Folks have just been saving it all for Christmas. If they did, they sure put one over on me, cause I did not save any for Christmas, and had to stand on the sidelines and watch others enjoy themselves.

Speaking of life's happy moments, here's one, often read about but never experienced—when you go into a store on the first of January to pay the merchant a bill and he says, "that's all right, wait another thirty days."

Judging from appearances of some of our friends round town last Friday morning (the morning after the night before) I concluded that everybody had a grand and glorious time, and all had the Christmas spirits, just like they had in ye goode olde dayes.

Again I'm working on a subject. Doing a little detective work. It's kind of a delicate subject to handle, and I might just decide to let somebody handle it, because after emerging from several misunderstandings already, I'm somewhat shy of women, school teachers, Spanish, young mules, mistletoe, C. Canadian Imports from U. S. Drop Nearly $200,000,000

Washington, Dec. 29—Canada's trade with the United States fell off approximately $300,000,000 for the 12 months ending October 31, according to figures obtained from Ottawa by the New York World. The exact decrease was $297,295,703. Of this nearly $200,000,000 was in imports from the United States and $100,000,000 in exports. Canada's total world trade slumped over $600,000,000 in 1930, according to the figures published, and more than $130,000,000 of this was due to decline in wheat exports.

"It is predicted that for the present fiscal year (1931) Canada's unfavorable trade balance with the United States will show a reduction of $200,000,000," says the dispatch.

Canada has been one of the United States' best customers. The expanding trade between the two neighbors was hard hit by the Hawley-Smoot tariff and the new high tariff imposed by Canada, allegedly in retaliation for the American Act.

Assistant G. O. P. Senate Leader "Calls Down" Leader Watson, Administration Defender

Washington, Dec. 29—Lack of cooperation between Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader of the Senate, and Senator McNary of Oregon, assistant Republican leader, was in evidence recently in the debate on the drought relief bill. Senator Watson, who was defending President Hoover's recommendation of $25,000,000 for farm relief, deplored the criticism of the President, and stated that the Agricultural Committee had seen fit to increase that amount.

Senator McNary quickly interposed, saying: "It is not fair to say that the Senate Committe increased the appropriation to $60,000,000. The joint resolution which I introduced was sent to me by the Department of Agriculture two weeks before action was taken. It called for $60,000,000 and I had reason to believe that the President knew what his right hand (Secretary of Agriculture Hyde) was doing."

When Senator Watson complained that there was a lack of cooperation by the Democrats on this bill, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, gave the Indiana Senator another "call down" to the effect that the special committee set up by the President to make the drought survey had recommended $60,000,000.

An explosion in the Senate followed a day later when Senator Watson attempted to insert in the Record a letter from Secretary of Agriculture Hyde denying that he had sponsored the $60,000,000 bill with the provision for loans to farmers with which to buy food. Senator McNary declared he would not be "put on a spot" to relieve the embarraccment of the administration and threatened to tell the "inside story" of this bill. Senator Watson announced later that he had torn up the Hyde letter, so the "inside story" of how this bill first had administrative support and then opposition has not been revealed.

The Conference Committee finally agreed to appropriate $45,000,000 when Democratic leaders announced there would be no holiday recess until the bill was passed.

Hoover Fails to Cooperate with Senate, Says "The World"

Washington, Dec. 29—President Hoover's curt letter to the Senate in reply to the request of that body for a report of the Emergency Commission on Unemployment is cited by the New York World as an instance of the President's failure to cooperate on unemployment legislation.

"Mr. Hoover's reply to this request," says the World, "is a brusque note in which he states that the commission has made no report; that he has talked from time to time with the chairman of the commission, Colonel Woods; that he has received certain 'notes and verbal suggestions' from Colonel Woods; but that such notes and suggestions 'represent that confidential relation of the President with government officers which should be preserved.'

"This is an unskillful letter. Mr. Hoover could easily have written a better one. He could have told Congress that no information which bears in any way on the problem of unemployment can conceivably be regarded as 'confidential' at the present time. He could have offered to send to the Senate any information at his disposal, however ample or however meager. . . . .

"The President seems to be convinced of the importance of cooperation between the executive and legislative branches of the government during the short session but consistently fails to cooperate when an opportunity is offered him. Whoever advises him in his correspondence with the Senate continues to advise him badly."

New York G. O. P. Congressional Delegation Serves Patronage Ultimatum on Hoover

Washington, Dec. 29—Whether Republican Administration patronage in New York State is to be dispensed by President Hoover or by the new Republican State Chairman, Mr. Macy, was made an issue in a recent statement by the New York Republican delegation in Congress, with the sole exception of Mrs. Ruth Pratt. The significance and portent of the statement is commented upon by the New York Times, which says:

"The delegation will nobly stand by the President so long as he undertakes to follow its advice and recommendations with respect to New York appointments. . . . The New York Representatives frankly state that they are prepared to stand as one man behind the new State Chairman 'on all matters of appointment,' and they significantly add, 'particularly with regard to the names which have already been submitted to the White House.' Nothing could more directly point to the controversy over the successor to Mr. Tuttle as Federal District Attorney in this city. Nor could there well be a plainer intimation that the organization has been rallied against the proposal to send in the name of Mr. Hoover's personal friend, Mr. Fox. Representative La Guardia darkly says that Chairman Macy will receive 'more than moral support if a situation arises to demand it.'

"This seems to threaten a break with the President's policies if the President's patronage is not satisfactorily distributed."

In connection with this quasi-judicial appointment, President Hoover's letter to the Republican organization in Florida declaring that the Federal Judiciary must be placed above partisan politics is recalled. The issue made by the Republican delegatiin in the House is generally construed as whether or not the appointment to the Tuttle vacancy shall be made on merit, as the President has insisted, or at the demand of the Republican State political organization of New York.

o-o-o

The office of United States District Attorney for the Southern District of New York has been vacant for three months while the Republican Old Guard of that State has been picking Mr. Tuttle's successor.

G. O. P. House Members Revolt On Administration Move to Suspend Rules

Washington, Dec. 29—A revolt among House Republicans against the efforts of the Administration to limit drought relief to the purchase of seeds for next year's crop broke out while the Republican Senate leader and Assistant Republican Senate leader were at loggerheads on the same bill. Sixteen Republicans, all from agricultural states, voted against the motion to suspend the rules under which it was proposed to pass the administration limited drought relief bill. The insurgents were: Browne, Cooper, Hull, Kading, Nelson and Schneider of Wisconsin; Campbell, Iowa; Christgau, Minnesota; Craddock and Finely, Kentucky; Garber, Oklahoma; Garber, Lankford and Shaffer of Virginia; Lambertson, Kansas, and Leavitt, Montana, whose votes defeated the motion. Lack of cooperation with the administration program on this particular day, in both Houses, it is pointed out, was largely with elements in the Republican Party, which are usually regular.

TEN FARMER PLANKS

In a recent booklet the American Farm Bureau Federation gives, among other valuable information, its platform for American agriculture. The ten planks of this platform, in condensed form, are as follows:

1. The support of sound and economical production practices.
2. Placing in the hands of producers the control of the sale of farm products.
3. Equality for farmers in the standard of living enjoyed.
4. Adjustments to give the farmer parity with others in purchasing power.
5. Development of schools, roads, rural electrification, churches, health agencies and all other factors contributing to an ideal community environment.
6. Farmer representation on all important public boards and commissions.
7. A national agricultural policy based on a free and independent farm people, as contrasted with foreign peasant systems.
8. The creation of new and enlarged markets for American farm products.
9. Maintenance of that economic system which protects private ownership of property and provides a just reward for individual effort; public protection through regulation; it opposes communism.
10. Providing an organization to supply facilities for group action in building a permanent, prosperous, free, independent American agriculture.

This appears to be a sound platform, worthy of the support of everyone who is engaged in the country's most important of all industries—agriculture. It might well be supported by all other industries, also.

Cut In Passenger Rates Is Foreseen

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 26—A movement by Alabama railroads to reduce their coach fare passenger rates to two cents per mile in 1931 is indicated in a report issued Friday by J. H. Alldredge, traffic expert of the Alabama Service Commission.

The rate, which has not been operative in the state for 19 years, until granted to the Frisco Railroad several days ago, will apply only to coach fares and will have no effect upon Pullman rates, Alldredge said.

The report for the 10-month period ending October 1, 1930, showed all lines in the state had a substantial decline in net revenue with an average loss of 45 per cent.

The number of bus lines in the state, the report showed, has not increased materially during the 10-month period and the loss in railroad passenger revenue was attributed largely to the increased use of private automobiles and "social lifts."

The Way of Life By BRUCE BARTON

Only A Few Ideas

Twenty years ago I heard a famous editor deliver a talk on advertising befor the Chicago advertising club. I was just out of college and had seen very few great men, so the talk made a deep impression. I remember the editor said that "reputation is repetition," and he told some stories to illustrate the point.

The other night in New York I heard the same great editor speak on the same subject. To my surprise it was the same speech.

Another speaker was a celebrated banker whom I had heard on two previous occasions. He, also, repeated himself. As we left the dining room one of my friends who had noted the repetitions remarked on them gloomily. "Rather discouraging to see that even the big minds have so little in them," he said. "Makes you wonder if human ingenuity is coming to an end."

"They say that though the stars appear so numberless, you can not count more than a thousand," he said. "Well, there are few thoughts. Count the books and you would think that there was immense wealth; but any expert knows that there are few thoughts which have emerged in his time. Shut him in a closet and he could soon tell them all. They are quoted, contradicted, modified, but the amount remains computably small."

It is a good thing for humanity that this is so. Nature apparently designed the game of human progress to last a long time, and provided that only a small advance should be made in any one generation. Suppose one mind should suddenly discover everything. How it would take the zest out of the game!

Moreover, it is decidedly heartening to us average folks to know that only a very little difference separates us from the smartest. Lincoln remarked on it. "I have talked with great men," he said, "and I can not see wherein they differ from others."

Generally speaking, the great achieve their greatness by industry rather than by mere brilliance. The editor whom I quoted is said to be the highest paid in the world. But if you divide his salary by the more than two hundred newspapers which print his editorials, he is the lowest priced worker whom each of those papers employs. He produces more than anybody else and works long hours to do it.

I was glad that I went to that dinner. It reminded me how little wisdom and genius really rule the world; how far industrious effort can stretch the few ideas, or even one idea.

Best Spellers Will Be Picked Soon

Plans are now underway to select the best spellers in the Chilton County Schools to take part in a spelling contest to be held at Jacksonville, Ala., according to information from the Superintendent of Education's office here.

The spelling contest to be held in Jacksonville will take place sometime in March, it was stated, and will include contestants of all counties in the Jacksonville district.

Each school in each county in this district is to hold a contest of their own with pupils up to and including the ninth grade participating, in order to determine their two best spellers. After this is done, there will be held in ach county, a contest between the best spellers from the various schools in the respective counties, to determine the two best spellers from the county.

The two spellers who are selected from each of the counties of the district will then go to Jacksonville to take part in the contest there.

The local superintendent's office stated that each school in Chilton County would shortly be furnished with definite instructions, and publication will be made in the county papers to this effect, as soon as a definite date is set.

Alabama's Apiary Business Growing

Nearly Half-Million Revenue Is Realized During Year: Industry Praised

Alabama honey bees have brought their owners a revenue of $450,000 this year, it has been estimated by E. F. Phillips, professor of bee culture at Cornell University. Prof. Phillips has made several visits to Alabama and has maintained close touch with apiarists of this state.

Queen bees to the number of 200,000 were shipped from this state to remote markets, while bee shipments reached 22,000 two and three pound containers, mostly to Northern states and Canada.

Prof. Phillips has this to say of the bee industry in Alabama:

"It is well established that the use of bees in orchards at blossom time in northern fruit regions increases fruit production. If a man is a good orchardist we recommend that he buy package bees from the South, put them to work during the blooming time and then burn them as a matter of economy. This is of immense advantage to Alabama package bee growers who can sell their bees in the North during May when production is at a high rate. Bees can earn more pollinating orchards than they can in making honey."

Thomas Atchison, state apiarist, strikes another encouraging note in his report that disease among bees in the state showed a decrease during the past year. Here's his contribution:

"During the past year I traveled almost the entire state and visited about 170 beekeepers. I inspected 22,000 colonies and found only 72 infected with American Foul Brood as compared to 139 in 1926. All infected colonies were burned and quarantined until the disease can be eradicated. No bees are shipped from our state unless certified by me as being disease free.

"There is no remedy for American or European foul brood. Diseased colonies must be promptly destroyed to prevent spread and destruction to the entire apiary. The departmental inspection service keeps the disease in check and insures buyers getting their healthy bees."

CAPITOL OF NORTH DAKOTA IS DESTROYED BY FIRE SUNDAY

Articles appearing in the daily papers Monday from the Associated Press stated that the capitol of the state of North Dakota was completely destroyed by fire last Sunday. It was stated that Official records and documents of almost every department of the State housed in the four story brick structure were consumed by the flames which were said to have started on the upper floor. The origin of the fire was not determined.

The building was erected in 1884 when North Dakota and South Dakota were one unit of government under the title of "Dakota Territory." The account of the fire stated that Gov. Shafer said, "Loss of the records will result in the greatest confusion in the State's history and years will elapse before it is untangled." The capitol is located at Bismarck, N. D.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

WINTER EPIDEMICS

I claim originality in this saying that, "infections work behind closed doors." I carry the thought with me daily, as I go about my work. The first duty, if you would dislodge the enemy, is, openthe door, be it of wood, glass, or human tissue; get at the unwelcome invader and destroy his works.

The worst epidemics—small-pox, measles, diptheria, scarlet fever, and infantil paralysis, take place at a season when our houses are tightly fortified against winter inclemencies of weather. One of the worst epidemics of small-pox that I ever experienced, ceased promptly when spring breezes were permitted to enter bedrooms and living-rooms to "air out" residences in every remotest corner.

The worst case of small-pox I ever attended was in a family that kept every crevice of the dwelling plugged for fear outside air would enter. The patient recovered—but it was an accident!

It follows then, that if free ventilation ends the epidemic, it must be valuable as a preventive of diseases of infectious nature. I instruct my families to see that the residence from top to bottom, is thoroughly aired at least once a day; if the sun is shining, an hour or two is not too long for the internal air-bath. I do not like to enter a dwelling where the first thing to greet my nostrils is the odor of meat and vegetables cooked at yesterday's dinner. Yes, it's "old stuff" I'm writing, but it's daily experience in this advanced age—and I don't live in the backwoods either—so there!

The family doctor must be just as dead against foetid air indoors, as he is against the deadly stream of night-air, pouring through an open window, over the bed where children and aged folks sleep.

Common-sense is my rule. Keep the house sweet, pure, and comfortable. It is not so, if foul with the odor of beef, cabbage and tobacco-smoke. Heathen? No; just average Americans all over the land.

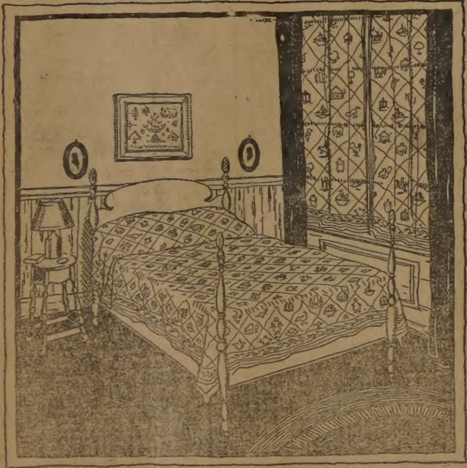
Curtain and Coverlet Ensemble



The quaint charm of this early American bedroom is accentuated by its net curtains and harmonizing coverlet reproducing the sampler figures.

DECORATIVE unity between bedspread and window curtains is this year's style development in bedroom furnishing.

If the spread and overdrapes are flowered chintz or cretonne, a floral motif is an appropriate selection for Milady's glass curtains. On the other hand, for the masculine room, where simplicity is desirable, a plain or small geometric-figured glass curtain will be better.

With the vogue for furnishing in periods such as the Colonial, Georgian, French, and other "schools," new designs in net curtains and harmonizing coverlets are keeping pace, and patterns authentically styled to period rooms are appearing.

For the bedroom in the early American manner, there are Colonial net curtains, reproducing sampler figures typical of the "raught" needlework of old, and created especially to companion them are coverlets designed in pastel colorings. Some reproduce sampler figures similar to those in the curtains. The woman clever with her needle can carry her bedroom ensemble still further by copying these designs for dresser-scarf and runners. Other designs are drawn from the hand-blocked patterns or simulate tufted candlewick spreads.

In tune with the more elaborate English-style of furnishing, there are spreads which carry rich embroidery designs on a natural background. These spreads are reminiscent of the embroideries on linen popular in the early 18th century, and harmonize with new Georgian designs in net curtains, which also find their inspiration in needlepoint and embroidery motifs.

The coverlet should harmonize with, rather than match, the curtain according to general preference.

THE LOST CHORD

By Adelaide Anne Procter

Seated one day at the organ,
I was weary and ill at ease,
And my fingers wandered idly
Over the noisy keys.

I do not know what I was playing,
Or what I was dreaming then;
But I struck one chord of music,
Like the sound of a great Amen.

It flooded the crimson twilight,
Like the close of an Angel's Psalm,
And it lay on my fevered spirit
With the touch of infinite calm.

It quieted pain and sorrow,
Like lover overcoming strife;
It seemed the harmonious echo
From our discordant life.

It linked all perplexed meanings
Into one perfect peace,
And trembled away into silence
As if it were loath to cease.

I have sought, but I seek it vainly,
That one lost chord divine,
Which came from the soul of the Organ
And entered into mine.

It may be that Death's bright angel
Will speak in that chord again,—
It may be that only in Heaven
I shall hear that grand Amen.

Let Hot Sandwiches Add Zest to Your Breakfast

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

A HOT sandwich, with a crisp salad, and a beverage, makes a splendid luncheon or supper course. In fact, the sandwich has developed in so many directions and adapted itself to such greatly varied needs that its recent appearance on the breakfast table is not at all surprising. The breakfast sandwich recipe given below shows how appropriate and delicious such a sandwich can be.

Hot sandwiches can be made in an almost endless number of ways. They may consist of a snappy filling between slices of plain or French toast; of white or whole wheat bread with a filling, covered with a hot sauce; and very attractive ones may be made from hot biscuits or toasted crackers.

You will find these hot sandwiches especially good, and no doubt they will suggest many other combinations:

Breakfast Sandwich: Buttered toast thin cuts of cooked sausage; Grated American cheese; Strips of bacon.

Butter 1 slice of toast for each person to be served. On each slice place thin cuts of cooked sausage, cover with Tomato Sauce, and sprinkle with grated cheese. Lay a strip of bacon on each sandwich, and bake in a hot oven until the bacon is crisp.

Tomato Sauce: 2 tablespoons butter; 2 tablespoons flour; 1 small can Cream of Tomato Soup.

Melt butter and blend with flour. Add Cream of Tomato Soup, and stir until thickened.

Fried Oyster Sandwiches: 1 pint large oysters; 2 beaten eggs; ½ teaspoon salt; Dash of pepper; ½ teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce; Cracker crumbs; Slices of buttered whole wheat bread; Tomato Ketchup or Chili Sauce.

Dip oysters into beaten eggs, seasoned with salt, pepper and Worcestershire Sauce, and then into cracker crumbs. Fry in several tablespoons butter until crisp and deliciously brown. Place oysters on slices of buttered whole wheat bread and sprinkle generously with Ketchup or Chili Sauce. Cover with another slice of bread, cut in half, and serve with Preserved Sweet Gherkins.

Variety Sandwiches: ½ lb. assorted cold meats; ¼ cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing; 1 teaspoon Evaporated Horseradish soaked for ten minutes in 1 tablespoon cold water.

Chop meat together and moisten with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing, to which has been added the Evaporated Horseradish. Spread a generous layer on hot buttered toast, and serve. Garnish with Spanish Queen Olives.

Savory Sandwiches: Graham or whole wheat bread, toasted; Fresh Cucumber Relish; 1 teaspoon Evaporated Horseradish (soak in 1 tablespoon cold water for 10 minutes); Sliced bacon.

Butter toast and sprinkle with Fresh Cucumber Relish and a small amount of Evaporated Horseradish. Top with slices of crisp hot bacon and serve at once.

Hot Biscuit Sandwiches: Make plain baking powder biscuit, and while hot, break apart and butter the halves. On one half place a thick slice of tomato and spread with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing. Sprinkle with crisply cooked hot bacon. Cover with the other half of the biscuit, press lightly together and serve at once.

Boy Scout Activities of Clanton

Dan Smith, Troop Reporter

Last Tuesday, December 23, a group of Boy Scouts met at Lamar Calloway's house at nine o'clock to go to the woods and pass some of the requirements of the Second Class test. These requirements were: 1. Build a fire in open with only two matches, of course this means without paper or kindling. 2. Cook in open without any utensils, a quarter pound of meat and two potatoes. 3. Demonstrate the proper use of the knife and hatchet. 4. Track a half mile in 25 minutes.

The Scouts present were Dan Smith, Grady Reynolds, Morgan Reynolds, Hal Broadhead, Joe More, Arnold Poe, Wesley Danforth, Herbert Neighbors, Joe Hall Johnson, Lawrence Gerald, Jr. We were accompanied by Lamar Calloway who gave us the test.

We left Mr. Calloway's home about 9:30 a.m. and hiked to a pine grove near Clanton, as soon as we arrived every fellow began picking out a place to build his fire, and also began to gather wood. Some Scouts had pretty good luck with their fire, and they had to use only one match, while others used both of theirs. After each fellow had passed on his fire building they started on their meat and potato cooking. The two largest fires were used for all Scouts. To see if the meat and potatoes were cooked properly Mr. Calloway had to taste each fellow's meat and potato, and it was wondered by the Scouts whether he was sick that night or not.

After cooking our meat and potatoes we started on tracking requirement. Mr. Calloway and Dan Smith left to leave the trail and the rest were to leave two at a time at intervals of 2 minutes. After all the Scouts had tracked the half mile, which ended at Mr. Calloway's home, we all went home.

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

Remember that next Sunday is the first Sunday of the year 1931. What are you going to do with that day? Start the year right by taking your place in God's house. Take your family and go to Sunday school.

The Holy Communion will be served at the Methodist church, following the opening worship. Then a short sermon will be preached by the pastor after the communion. Be on time.

This pastor has observed that there are many people in Clanton who are not attending any church or Sunday school. Folks, how on earth can you get your consent to live without the church in your life? You may say that you believe in churches, but when you do not attend, your actions speak louder than your words.

We are looking for you at Sunday school at 9:45 A. M. at 11 A. M. and at 7 P. M.

OVERHEARD AT 3 O'CLOCK AT VERBENA FIRE MONDAY A.M.

—o—

Having become warmed by the fire at Verbena early Monday morning, a News reporter became interested in some of the things he overherad there, at that early hour and put it on paper.

When the water began shooting from the fire hose with Clanton firemen at the nozzle, a lady was heard to ask, "Where in the world are they getting all that water?"

"Even the Mayor of Clanton answered the call, I see."

"There's one thing about it, Verbena can certainly have a good sized fire sometimes," from a Verbena resident.

"Look at John, he must have made a rush down here from Clanton."

"Have you seen my husband around here anywhere? I have the hardest time keeping up with him."

"Well, Cordelia, I wish you could find you a husband, and quit worrying about the one you got."

"Blame that smoke, it follows me everywhere I go."

"That is the first time I ever heard of a well burning."

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

Girl And Boy Scouts Assist Welfare Dept.

—o—

The Girl Scouts and the Boy Scouts of Clanton played a big part last week in assisting the County Welfare Department in collecting food and clothing to be distributed to the needy over the county.

The Girl Scouts made Christmas wreaths of holly and mistletoe, selling them in order to get money to purchase fruit for the unfortunate families over the county. The Boy Scouts aided mostly in collecting the food and clothing and in dividing, assorting and making deliveries designated by the Welfare Department. Much interest is being taken in these two Scout organizations in Clanton and the outlook for a much larger organization is very bright.

Others who assisted the Welfare Department in delivering clothes and food during Christmas were Miss Mary Ellis, Charles Moore and Jack Burks.

$2,500 Is Goal Set For Local Chest Drive

confine relief to emergency situations. However, indications of demand for relief will be greater in 1931 than during the past year.

The county worker under the supervision of the state worker is called upon to preserve home life for children whenever possible. The home is the bulwark of the nation; the child needs his own home and wants his own home and has a right to his own home. The county worker must draw on the county resources to help meet the needs. If it had not been for the aid of the Chest funds during the cold winter months of yast year, the four small children of sick, feeble-minded parents would possibly have died of hunger and cold. Proper food and medicine secured thru the Chest funds greatly aided in saving a little girl's life. No greater service to humanity has been done to anyone, than the food given toward three sisters, all around 70 years of age. Two of these are blind and one of these is deaf and the other has lost her mind. Their great love for each other and for their church is holding them together. A young mother with five sickly children, with feeble-minded and epileptic father, have been fed from your gifts to the Chest fund.

One of the saddest plights of our county, are the homes of little children with immoral mothers. The community sees the mothers' sins and refuses to help, but are often times glad for someone else to help, as they can not "dirty their hands" with them. These children with immoral mothers love their mothers as devotedly as if she was a good woman. They get just as hungry as a child with two fine parents. They get just as ragged as the average child. They long for little friends and playmates more than the child who is not pointed at. We have some such families in Chilton County, who have immoral mothers, from the lack of training in their younger days, lack of proper home life while growing up, lack of education, lack of recreation, lack of mental ability and sometimes for a lack of funds for caring for their children. With the crowded conditions of the orphanages, lack of state funds for boarding children, etc., these children, in many instances, have been left with their mothers and are given meager aid, not only with the hopes of keeping them alive, but with the hopes of building up their moral nature and possibly getting the mother to have a better vision. The child is the greatest gift to humanity and only in providing for childhood may we expect an improved civilization.

Mary Willie and Lottie Scarbrough returned to their home in Birmingham Sunday after spending the holidays with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Foshee.

Our Sunday School is doing fairly well although we wish more people were interested. Let's begin the new year right by making a resolution to go to Sunday School every Sunday unless hindered by reasons approved by a good conscious.

Another wedding of interest to people of this community was that of Miss Myrtle Littlejohn and Mr. Herschell Maddox. The wedding took place at the home of Rev. A. L. Foshee Christmas Eve evening.

Mrs. Maddox grew to womanhood in this community, but moved near Thorsby a few years ago. Everybody who knew her loved her quiet, peaceful disposition. Mr. Maddox is an employee of the L & N Railroad, working with a bridge crew.

The couple left Christmas morning by train for South Alabama. From there they are to go to New Orleans. When they return they will make their home in Clanton.

Those spending the day with Mr. and Mrs. Grady Cooper Sunday were Mrs. Maggie Foshee, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Littlejohn, Mr. and Mrs. Zack Lowery and children, Marvin, Earl, Margaret and William. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Littlejohn and Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Ward joined the crowd in having a good time.

Friday Tomlinson reappeared at the prison and wanted "in."

"Times have changed," he told Chief Clerk Snow. "I don't know but few folks in the old home town in Chambers County. All my folks are dead. I couldn't find any work. So if it's all the same I'd like to take up here where I left off."

And Mr. Snow opened the door.

CAPT. LAY HOLDS OWN IN SERIOUS ILLNESS

—o—

Captain William Patrick Lay, who has been ill for several weeks, has suffered some relapse and is not doing quite so well Tuesday, though resting better than on Monday.

It is the condition of his heart that is causing concern, this member not functioning as it should; a condition attributed to the very active life of Captain Lay, even up to the time when he was forced to take to his bed. A man of tireless energy, he is said frequently to have overtaxed himself without being conscious of the fact.

The members of the family are with Captain Lay, his sons in California having come here during the past few days.—The Gadsden Times.

LEGION PLANS FOR RECEPTION ARE COMPLETED

Local Post Hears Interesting Speaker At Meeting Last Monday Night

Members and friends of the Chilton County Post American Legion were entertained for sometime last Monday night when Massey Edgar, past Post-Commander of the Chatom Post of the American Legion spoke to them on forest preservation and reforestation, at the meeting at the courthouse.

A resolution was drawn up and adopted by the Chilton County Post of the American Legion at the Monday night meeting, recommending that the State Government, by necessary legislation and appropriations provide for the adequate promotion of the proper use of forest lands. Following is the resolution as adopted by the local post:

Whereas, the members of the American Legion, through their service in time of war and as citizens of the commonwealth, have been, and are committed, by principle and practice, to the welfare and maintenance of our country in matters of defense, development and economic advancement; and

Whereas, among the means of achieving these ends, the proper use and management of the land of the State is of extremely great importance; and

Whereas, the growing timber by Forestral methods on Alabama's twenty-three million acres of woodland will result in annual yields of commercial forest products valued at many millions of dollars; and

Whereas, public, private and associational agencies have done much to advance progress in mining and agriculture, but thus far have not made corresponding progress in the proper use and development of forest lands as a necessary and integral factor in a well-balanced system of the economic and industrial development of the State; and

Whereas, the Forest industries and the manufacture of forest products form an important part of the business activties of this community and the existence of woodlands and forest provides substantial incidental benefits of watershed protection and hygenic influences.

Be it therefore resolved, that the Chilton County Post of the American Legion does hereby express and record its urgent recommendation that the State Government by necessary legislation and appropriations provide for the adequate promotion of the proper use and development of forest lands

Mell Martin, president of the local club, announced today.

The first club was organized in Detroit in 1915. On January 21 of that year the first meeting was held. The service organization has grown rapidly and today there is a membership of approximately 100,000. Raymond M. Crossman, of Omaha, is the International president. "The Clanton club is now three years old," said Mell Martin, "and we have enjoyed the growth and development that has come to the international organization of which we are a chartered and active unit. Our program for the anniversary meeting will be in charge of the Committee on Kiwanis Education, which is composed of: Cohen E. Stapp, Raymond Smith and Mack Wyatt.

"The major work for community activities for 1931 will be emphasized at the meeting and there will be reports of the work accomplished by the local club during the past year. COUNTY WIDE MEETING HERE NEXT SATURDAY

Meeting Is For Purpose Of Making Plans To Aid County's Needy

A county-wide meeting was announced in last week's issue of the Chilton County News. This meeting is to be held at the Court House at 2 p.m. Saturday, January 10th, at which time it is hoped that people from every community in the county will be able to report on the destitute families in their communities. Plans will also be made for funds in aiding these destitute families.

During the past year approximately $1300.00 was raised in cash for such work. The "wolf was scared away from the door" of hundreds of families through this fund. The conditions of many families over the county are grave and immediate attention is absolutely necessary. The need for help has never been so great.

The reports of the conditions of needy families over the county will be heard, and conditions as found by the welfare worker will be placed before the gathering. Mrs. A. M. Tunstall, State Child Welfare Director, will attend this meeting Saturday, and everyone who can, is urged to attend.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, LAST DAY TO PAY TELEPHONE FEES

Saturday, January 17th, has been set as the final day for the payment of central fees to the Peoples Telephone Company. The central oprator, Mr. Lomer Giles, is giving good service, and if the people will fix up the lines and pay the fee, the service is here for you Of course, service cannot be given with the lines down and buried in the mud.

The above date gives two Saturdays; so this is enough time for all to pay up. Don't put it off until the last day, for you may not be able to come to town then. Attend to it at your first convenience.

No one who has not paid his central fee will be let through the central after January 17th. The fee is very reasonable this time, and everyone can surely arrange to pay by Saturday week. If you do not pay by that time, please be so kind as to cut your phone from the line until you do pay; and do not sponge on your neighbor by asking him to do your telephoning.

Green Also Sees Bank Improvement

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 6 — State Superintendent of Banks D. F. Green, heartily endorsed yesterday, the optimistic statement regarding banking conditions throughout the nation that has been issued by President Rome C. Stephenson of the American Bankers Association.

In this statement, issued in New York, and appearing in morning newspapers Monday, Mr. Stephenson was quoted as staying that "we will have the strongest banking system we have ever enjoyed and one worthy of the highest confidence of all our people," as a result of the elimination of "undeniable weaknesses" in the country's banking structure in 1930.

"I am in thorough accord with the statement of Mr. Stephenson, which appeared in the press this morning," Mr. Green said, "and I feel assured that the banks of Alabama are in the best condition they have been in for years. Alabama banks have cleared up more old debts in the past 12 months than they have in a like period for many years back. The bankers have worked hard to get their affairs in the excellent shape they are in now and deserve the confidence and patronage of all citizens."

Farmers Meeting Is Scheduled For 20th

On January 20th, at 10 o'clock there will be a county-wide meeting held at the Courthouse in Clanton, Alabama.

The object of this meeting will be to discuss a safe farming program for 1931 and to have a discussion by a representative of the Bureau of Economics of Washington on the farming outlook for 1931. County Agent Stapp attended a conference along this line at Auburn, December 29th and 30th and reports that the outlook discussions would indicate very little possibility of farmers making more than a mere living in 1931 and this being true every farmer should begin planning to make plenty of food for the family and feed stuff for the livestock.

Farmers, merchants, bankers and all others interested in the agricultural outlook for 1931 are urged to attend this meeting on the 20th and see what the probable cotton price will be next year.

This one occurred on the Selma highway at the intersection of Eighth Street and the highway, near the home of Dr. V. J Gragg, Sunday afternoon about two o'clock, taking as its toll James C. Prim aged 81, who died shortly afterwards.

According to the information reaching the News, Prim with his son-in-law, Henry Raybon, had just drove down from their home near Thorsby and had left Mrs. Prim and Mrs Raybon at a relative's home in Clanton, a block from where the accident occurred. The Prim car was emerging into the Selma highway when it was struck by another car said to have been driven by T. M. Yawn of Ensley Yawn's car struck the Prim car near the rear, turning it completely around throwing Prim and Raybon from their seats. Raybon, who was driving was not seriously injured. A Martin's ambulance was summoned but Prim died before reaching the hospital, it was stated. Yawn was held and questioned by Officer John Boockholdt, later being released on an appearance bond. Neither car was badly damaged.

Funeral services for Prim were held Monday afternoon at the Congregational church in Thorsby, with the Rev Joseph E. Each officiating. Interment followed in the City Cemetery in Thorsby with Martin in charge.

CLANTON GETS TWO MORE FIRES IN PAST WEEK

Volunteer Dept. Answers Four Calls Within Six Day Period

The volunteer fire department of Clanton answered four calls during the past week, three of which were in Clanton and one in Verbena. Last week's issue of the News carried accounts of the first two fires, the Baldwin home in Verbena and the Robinson Department Store fire in Clanton.

Early Wednesday morning, December 31, the home of John Burton Higgins, in Chandler Terrace, west of Clanton, was gutted by fire. The alarm was turned in about five-thirty o'clock Wednesday morning, and due to there being no water connections out so far from town, the firemen were greatly handicapped in combating the flames, although they used all chemical apparatus available. Very little of the furnishings of the attractive stucco bungalaw were saved, and it was stated that the family barely saved themselves from the flames, as they had gained considerable headway before discovered. The estimated damage done, according to information given the News, was approximately $9,000. The origin was undetermined at this time

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Roberts on Fifth Street barely escaped being completely destroyed by fire late Wednesday afternoon. The records of Chief Loren Smith show the time at 5:20 p.m. The fire is said to have originated from a flue of a heater in the home. Some furniture was saved from the flames. Some insurance was carried it was stated. The house was the property of Dr. N. S. Johnson.

Gun Play Over State Brings Death To Four

Capital Newspaper Man Among Toll Claimed In Fatal Shootings

Three white men and a negro were shot to death in widely separated parts of Alabama during the week end. The dead include Tim Bandy, 36, Athens; John D. Clay, Montgomery; Roan Whitfield, Troy, and Charles Bennett, negro, Adamsville.

Bandy, police said, was shot to death by Charlie Black, Athens merchant. Black told officers noises in his store after closing hours attracted him from his nearby residence. On investigation he said he found a man in the place with a sack containing merchandise in one hand and a gun in the other.

Merchant Not Held

Black told police that when the man refused to raise his hands, he (Black) opened fire with an automatic pistol. Bandy is survived by his widow and five children. Funeral service will be held Monday afternoon. No charges Sunday night had been placed against Black.

Clay, a Montgomery newspaper employee, early Sunday was found dead with two bullet wounds in his body. His body, found on a street car track, was lacerated and authorities were uncertain whether Clay died from bullet wounds or injuries he may have suffered when run over by a street car.

Shots Heard

A proof reader for The Montgomery Advertiser, where he had worked two years, Cay left friends at 4 a.m. to go home where his wife and five children awaited him. A negro woman living near where the body was found, told police she heard shots fired between 4:30 and 5 a.m. Sunday.

Police say they could discover no motive for the slaying, but believed robbery was most likely, although they were told Cay had but little money on him. Cay was a native of Tallahassee, Fla., where burial will take place.

Farmer Shot By Wife

Winfield, a farmer, was shot to death by his wife, police stated.

Mrs. Augusta Winfield, 27, brought to Pike County Jail for questioning in connection with the investigation of the slaying, told officers she and her husband had been quarreling all night. Authorities reported that she told them that when Winfield said he was "have to kill you and then kill myself" she obtained a pistol and shot him through the neck, killing him instantly.

Daughters See Shooting

Mrs. Winfield said that her daughters, aged 9, 7 and 3 were sitting on the bed crying and screaming. She stated that they all were frightened, and that she hardly knew what was happening, police said. A son, 11, was away from home at the time the shooting took place.

Paul Click, 26, Sunday night was jailed here on a charge of murder in connection with the investigation of the slaying of Charles Bennett, negro, at Adamsville Saturday night.

Henry James and an unidentified negro were wounded. The unidentified negro is believed to have been critically wounded, police stated.

Argument Reported

Click was arrested by Deputies Homer Badger, Rufus Dudley, Earl Wilson, and Charlie McMullin, following an all-night investigation. Deputy Badger said the Adamsville shooting occurred during an argument between seevral white men and a group of negroes.

Click denied being implicated in the affair, maintaining he was at home when the shooting took place.

Last Friday morning we had a very interesting chapel program. Rev. Jones, the pastor of the Baptist church, gave a short talk on how and when we should make our New Year resolutions. This was followed by a humorous program given by Mr. Turner's session room. We are always glad to have our pastors and friends join us in our chapel exercises.

The basketball games of the past week end have been a success. The boys went to Isabella and won over them by the score of 27 to 7. The girls played Calera Junior High, on the home court, and won by a close score of 18 to 16.

Saturday afternoon both teams played Tompson High of Silura. Both games were "thrillers" for the girls won by the score of 13 to 12, and the boys won 20 to 17.

The boys will invade Birmingham Wednesday afternoon for a game with Phillips High.

Everyone is preparing for the mid-term tests, which will begin Wednesday of this week, and end Friday.

The Junior III Home Economics Class is now studying the yards and how to plan the home and its surroundings.

They have just completed the study on Home and Its Care. Most of the pupils are now beginning their project work for the school year. Before this course was completed the class visited many of the homes to see the different types of home arrangements. We visited Miss Elizabeth McNeill's beautiful new home on January the first.

The school kitchen is divided into four groups. Each group painted its kitchen utensils a different color. The colors being blue, red, yellow and green. The class has made new curtains for the Conway Dining Hall. We are planning to make new draperies for the sewing room. There are twenty-three pupils in this class, and it has Miss Leacy Newell as its Home Economics Instructor.

WHAT PRICE HEAT?

REGARDLESS of the kind of fuel you use, HEAT is what you actually want and actually buy, whether fuel to produce that HEAT is delivered to your HOME in a truck or thru a pipe line.

Just as distance is measured in inches and weight in ounces, HEAT is measured in B. T. U.'s (British Thermal Units). In order to compare the cost of COAL AND COKE with Natural Gas, compare the cost of the Heat or B. T. U.'s as furnished by each fuel.

Here is a very simple table by which you can easily determine what the same amount of HEAT you are now getting from your COAL OR COKE would cost you, if you substituted Natural Gas in your home.

COST OF NATURAL GAS TO EQUAL HEAT UNITS IN A TON OF COAL OR COKE

Heat Units Per lb. of Coal or Coke	Heat Units Per Ton of Coal or Coke (2000 lbs.)	Number of Cubic Ft. Natural Gas to equal Ton Coal or Coke	Price * Natural Gas Per 1000 Cu. Ft.	Cost of Natural Gas to Equal Ton Coal or Coke
13,000	26,000,000	26,000	@ 60 cents	$15.60
13,500	27,000,000	27,000	@ 60 cents	16.20
14,000	28,000,000	28,000	@ 60 cents	16.80
14,500	29,000,000	29,000	@ 60 cents	17.40
15,000	30,000,000	30,000	@ 60 cents	18.00

*Sixty cents is minimum rate for Natural Gas for household use approved by Alabama Public Service Commission.

To figure what it would cost YOU to substitute Natural Gas for Coal or Coke in your home heating plant, call your dealer and ask him how many B. T. U.'s per pound are contained in the Coal or Coke you are using. Then find this figure in the left hand column, and you'll find the comparative cost of Natural Gas in the last column on the right. Compare this cost with what you're paying now for Coal or Coke.

FOR EXAMPLE: If the Coal or Coke you are burning contains 13,500 B. T. U.'s per pound, it contains (2000 times 13,500) 27,000,000 B. T. U.'s per ton. To produce 27,000,000 B. T. U.'s will require 27,000 cubic feet of natural gas. With Natural Gas at 60 cents per thousand cubic feet you will pay $16.20 to get the same heat from Natural Gas as from one ton of the Coal or Coke you are now using. To find the difference in your home heating costs for the WINTER, merely multiply the cost per ton of your coal by the number of tons you use; then multiply $16.20 by the number of tons you use and subtract the cost of Coal or Coke from the cost of Natural Gas.

WHAT A SAVING! THAT'S WHY WE SAY—UNLESS YOU HAVE MONEY TO BURN, BURN COAL OR COKE.

THE MINISTRY OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

Luke 3:7-17

When John was thirty years of age the spiritual summons came to begin his work as the Forerunner of Jesus Christ. This man had grown up in the midst of nature.

Others might conduct formal prayers in a synagogue. John made a rock his pulpit in some wilderness arena and thither the people flocked to hear him. They could not stay away from such utterances. He dared to tell them about their most inner self, what they thought about that was vile, the things that they did which were contrary to all law and decency. He called them characterizing names such as "O generation of vipers." He demanded they give up saying all kinds of well-sounding platitudes and "bring forth fruits worthy of repentance." When some one would fall back on the fact that he was a Jew, and thus one of God's chosen people, he was told that they could no longer clothe themselves in garments which they would call righteous. Henceforth they must evidence their professions by worthy works.

A new kind of philanthropy was demanded. They must share their extra possessions with those who were in actual need. If a man had a job from which he received wages, he was to stop complaining with his meal ticket and settle down to work as he rendered service for pay received. Further, they must testify of their penitence for past sins and express a solemn purpose after new obedience in the form of baptism. Then multitudes came to him to be baptized as he stood in the waters of the Jordan river. Such a person was thought of as the long promised Messiah. At once John the Baptist declared that he was just preparing the way for the one "who shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire."

Five cases of undulant fever were reported to the department in December, two from Jefferson County.

My Best Girl

BY

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter carrier, is the domestic drudge of the humble home where her mother does little except bemoan the fact that she has "seen betted days" and her sister, Liz, who works in a beauty shop, lies abed late. Maggie has to get the family breakfast before she starts out to her job in the Five-and-Ten-Cent Store.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Life scrambled along somehow in the Washington Avenue cottage, and almost every day there was a funeral somewhere worth seeing.

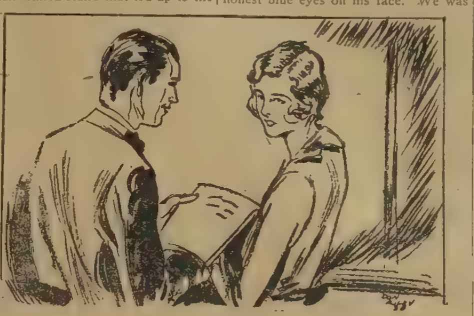
Minnie Johnson, forty-six years old, liked funerals.

"Mamma'll give up the funeral of her oldest friend, if there happens to be a bigger one on the same day!" Maggie asserted delightedly. And yet she considered the dismal tendency as rather admirable in her mother, and when there were defective black gloves or ribbons or veils marked down for below cost. at the Mack, she always brought her mother fresh supplies of them.

This morning she parted from her father, as usual, before the swinging doors of the general post office, to the much more inviting scene presented by the Mack.

There were life, animation, gaiety here. Maggie, penetrating to an odorous basement room that smelled of disinfectants and face powder and wet towels and highly scented soap found some forty of her associates surging about, changing their clothes, powdering their faces, gossiping, laughing and quarreling.

In the passage at the top of the flight of brick-walled stairs that led up to the store was a nail, and Maggie took from it, with the expertness of long usage, a handful of scraps of paper and began without further preamble the business of the day.



"Say, did they get a new boy in here in Jimmy's place? Where is he? Are you the new boy? What's your name? Joe, huh?" she had brought up with a bump against a tall young man, and now she raised her blue eyes from her memoranda and smiled at him as she went on, "I guess you're the new boy? Joe Grant, huh? Were you workin' in a department store before? You weren't? Well, see here—these are the stock orders. Ink, see? And salt boxes, see?

He stood looking at her, bewildered, his puzzled, mutinous eyes far above her small head, bent to study her notes.

"We might as well do the candy first since they want 'em for the window, I'll hand 'em down to you and you check 'em off. Don't be any dumber than you can help, becauz they're always in a rush for the night orders!"

Enveloped in her preposterous apron, her small hands fairly flying, her crown of chestnut braids becoming slightly dishevelled, and her cheeks getting red with her exertions, Maggie Johnson was all superbly indifferent to what he might be feeling or thinking.

"Here—be careful with those boxes, Joe. If you spill this stuff you pay for it. What's the next? Matinee Habit'? Oh, those are chocolate bars—didn't you ever eat one? Gee, you are dumb!"

It was noon on the same day. There was a forty-minute interval for lunch, and the new boy was lounging, bitter, disgusted against a strip of dirty, disfigured brick wall that had once been painted white.

Far abov his had, the boy could hear the healthy one-o'clock roar of the store, beating rhythmically, like the sea upon a deep shore.

He was away from it all for the forty minutes of his lunch "hour," but it seemed all to be with him still—the noise of it, the confusion, the horrible smells.

A gong, above him, behind him, somewhere up the wide, dirty, utilitarian brick steps that rose steeply between two marred and grimy white brick walls, rang twice. That meant that the second lunch shift was due to report upstairs and relieve the third. The boy heard it, but he did not move in its direction.

Instead, he took from his pocket a small folded yellow envelope of stout brown paper and looked within it. It contained money—three dollars, some cents. He had been working a day, or he would have been working that long, when the store closed to-night. His pay was at the rate of twent-two dollars per week.

He had dropped the torn envelope and was putting the money into his pocket when a sound in his neighborhood made him turn suddenly, at the foot of the stairs. He was not, apparently, the only occupant of the basement.

Backing cautiously out across the heavily wrapped bundles that were a dozen times the size of her small body was what he at first supposed to be a child. Once fully in view, he recognized her at once. It was Maggie.

"That was a job for you!" she said panting, explanatory, raising to his eyes as beautiful a pair of blue specimens as he had ever seen.

"What was?" he asked.

Her own eyes became slightly suspicious.

"Weren't you waitin' for them ideel leaflets?" she asked.

"I don't know what you're talking about!" the boy answered.

"Didn't you hear the gong?"

"Sure I heard the gong!"

"Well, don't you know you'll get fined if you're not in your place when that rings? Here—take these," the girl said expertly, plunging into an opened crate, securing some dozens of small frying pans, all tied together by the eyes in their nickled handles and cramming them into his arms. "We'll say we were after stock," she explained rapidly.

She had loaded herself with kitchen brushes; now she started toward the stairway. "Follow me, an' I'll get us both out of it!" she promised, confidently. "Don't you say a word, Joe, I'll run it!"

Joe, who was tall, found himself smiling as he followed her small, flying figure. She went up the stairs almost at a run. He kept close behind her with his own load of jangling frying pans. She stopped only once.

"Mr. Smith," she said in a businesslike tone to a floorwalker who arrested her with a sallow hand "me an' Joe here was gettin' out some stuff for the house furnishin's when the gong rung—will you check us in?"

Mr. Smith eyed her with suspicion.

"I thought I had you this time, Maggie," he observed drily, displaying a wrist watch.

"No, sir!" the girl answered sturdily, honest blue eyes on his face. "We was gettin' out stock."

"All right, all right," he said challengingly, "but who asked for them brushes and pans?"

"I don't know, sir. Someone just yelled down when I was finishin' my lunch."

"Well, I guess I'll just step over to the house furnishings with you, Maggie," the man said unpleasantly, "and we'll see if we can identify the order. How'll that do?"

When they reached that churning, convulsed department that was devoted to house furnishings: Maggie shouted.

"Say! Which of you girls ast for fryers an' brushes? Me an' Joe've got 'em here, anyway!"

"I done it! An' bring them in here, and next time don't set around down there doin' cross-word puzzles while you think it over, Maggie!" she said, rising at once to the girl's aid.

Smith, only half convinced by all this cheerful glibness, fired a parting shot.

"Looks like you've got thirty or forty of them pans here now, Mrs. Cullen."

"Well here's the way of it, Mr. Smith. There was a school-teacher in this mornin'" Kate responded "an' all was that she says her class in domestic signs—whatever they are!—wud need a hunder' of them———"

"My God!" Eugene Smith said under his breath, departing. It was never any use to go against Kate Cullen; he had never really scored against Maggie Johnson, either. The two of them together——!

Joe meantime stacked brushes under the counter, while Maggie, arranging the frying pans compactly alongside, exchanged the time of day with Mrs. Cullen.

"Pop's takin' that stuff that never had no label on the bottle; the stuff Ma got at an auction," said Maggie, in answer to the older woman's kindly inquiry. "They wear real well, you'd be surprised!" added Maggie, of the ten-cent window weights, to an inquiring customer.

"If they wear at all, you bet your life I'll be surprised," the customer, disenchanted, responded sourly.

Maggie, was fired into sudden interest. Her eyes danced with a blue battle spark.

"We don't guarantee them for us as weights in private stills, madam, nor to fire at the old man in case of a fam'ly difference!" she explained, to the unconcealed pleasure of everyone within hearing.

"Get out of here, Maggie," Kate Cullen said. "An' you move along too, Joe. The girls are very fresh nowadays," Kate added placatingly to the panting customer. "She'll get fired for that to-night!"

"Well, I'm glad to hear it," the woman said, mollified.

"What'd she do? Joe began to demand blankly. But Kate Cullen's significant wink silenced him.

The boy went away. He found Maggie again in the fevered congestion of the teeming aisles. He gathered she was not a saleswoman—she was technically known as a "feeder," one of the several little drudges who flew back and forth with messages, carried notes, ran for fresh suppliese of thread and combs and soap and toys and sheet music and bottles of ammonia and perfume and cod-liver oil and beads.

"Maggie!— Maggie!— Maggie— get Mr. Smith to sign this, tell him the lady's in a rush—it's an even exchange. Maggie! see if you can find them rubber puppies and lions—bring up a whole lot. Where's Maggie? She was goin' to——"

She got more tired, more pale, more miserably draggled-looking as the endless afternoon wore down to winter dusk, and the lights flamed up everywhere. But she never stopped. She was merely a pair of willing feet, a pair of tireless hands.

Only once did she speak to Joe that afternoon, and then it was merely to say: "Don't be such a dumbbelll, you poor dumbbell!" As the gong struck six, she appeared beside him at the top of the basement steps, and said:

"That's dinner. We have forty minutes. Did you bring anything?"

"Dinner I mean," Maggie explained patiently, kindly. "We stay open until ten Saturdays, in December."

"Oh, my—goodness," Joe said simply.

"Lissen," said Maggie, "Go over to the fountain and get a bottle of milk—it won't cost you nothin'—we can have all we want Saturday nights, becauz it sours, do you see? Then come down where I was this noon."

Joe found her in the basement, a few minutes later, when he went down carrying his own bottle of ice-cold, beaded milk, into whose deftly opened top the soda-fountain girl had stuck two straws.

"We ain't supposed to come down here," said Maggie, "but come in thru here, an' I'll show you what I found out the other day."

Joe moved cautiously after her toward a large open window that was concealed in a dark corner on a shaft.

Maggie went through it like a rabbit, and he followed, into a small cemented place, down at the foot of some twenty stories of rising shaft, laced, after the first floor, by the open balconies of fire escapes.

Opposite them there was another window, also open, and into this Maggie scrambled, without so much as a backward glance or word for him. Joe followed here. There was no witness—he and Maggie were apparently unobserved and forgotten.

She had preceded him to a sort of room built by the walls of piled mattresses, mounting in stacks up almost to the roof of this neighboring basement. The girl seated herself comfortably, her small legs stretched out before her and the bottle of milk and cardboard box of supper she had been carrying conveniently arranged to hand

"Isn't this grand?" she asked, with a long sigh of satisfaction

Three walls were made of mattresses, rising high about them. The fourth was that space of brick punctured by the high area window. Joe, grinned an appreciative agreement

"This is the basement of the Diggins Deepsweet Mattress Company; it backs on to the Mack," Maggie explained. "We're on Eight, they're on Ninth—this is one of their storerooms. I found it last summer. If I should drop off to sleep for God's sake wake me up! I mean it, I'm not swearin', Joe." There's a lot of sandwiches and broken biscuits there that was in the bottom of a bucket. Stale bread is better for you anyway. We oughter have a green vegetable, but you can't balance your diet on Saturdays———

"How do you mean, balance your diet?" he asked in amazement.

"Don't you know about diet?" she demanded.

"Well, something," Joe admitted with his mouth full. "But I didn't know that you did."

Buying Feed Leads to Poverty

The wagon or truck that comes to town loaded with cotton and returns to the farm laden with hay, corn and similar products that should be raised at home, continues to be seen in the South—and continues to be the most suggestive symbol of the existing economic state of agriculture.

Nothing has been proved more clearly in the school of practical experience than that the farmer can not hope to raise cotton exclusively and realize enough out of it to buy all the other necessities for the farm.

This truth has been emphasized with peculiar force during the past year and agricultural leaders all over the South are urging an about-face in the practice. They are repeating, what this paper has so often proclaimed, that the way to prosperity lies in the full smoke-house and overflowing barn. The hundreds of millions of dollars going into other sections for things that could be produced here represents cash that must be kept at home if agriculture is to come into its own.

Buying feed for the farm is as profitless as carrying coal to Newcastle.

The Tragedy of Plenty

By Merle Thorpe, In December Nation's Business

A year ago we had a stock market crash. It was not a cause of our present depression; it was a result of overconfidence. Today we suffer from overcaution, and I don't know which of the two is worse for us.

A year ago we peddled wild rumors of failures, disaster, panic. We told each other of two millions unemployed, but said nothing of the 42 millions on the job. We whispered to each other that the nation was "broke," that buying power had vanished, but said nothing of the 50 billions the banks had on deposit, and of the 15 billions, for example, which we could borrow on our "savings" in life insurance. In awed tones we spoke of fewer carloadings, but said nothing of the 900,000 freight cars which were being loaded each week.

We talked ourselves into a state of fear. And we are still talking.

We find a perverse pleasure in seeking grounds for pessimism. Nothing reassures. We ignore the absence of those things which usually accompany panics. There is no scarcity of money. National credit was never so good. No suspension by banks of full cash payments. No sale of certified checks at a discount. No great failures. No disorders of currency.

And the irony of it.

Here, millions who desire things, food, shelter, clothing; other millions who desire greater conveniences and comforts of life; others, the luxuries. Not a single individual from Billionaire Ford (just back from a European vacation) on down, who is content, whose desires are satiated. All stand willing and eager to exchange their labor and services for the fruits of the labor and services of others.

Here, a surplus of foods, building materials, of cottons, woolens and silk. The gigantic factory plant of the nation with steam up, ready to go; agencies geared up as never before to furnish art, books, music and travel.

A people, intelligent and powerful, helplessly milling around, unable to exchange labor and services and goods. Business in a stalemate.

The tragedy of plenty!

Meanwhile the shelves of the nation, both in stores and in homes, are becoming bare. Some day, just as the bubble of overconfidence burst a year ago, our present overcaution will vanish and then we shall all join a mad scramble to buy. Factories will not be able to fill their orders, and when we hear of that, we shall become more excited to buy, demanding deliveries NOW. Our insistent demand will cause prices to go up and up and up.

That has been the course of every depression. Prices on the down grade. The consumer is king. The dollar commands greater and greater values. Sentiment changes: thrift comes to be a matter of wise saving. The American people have never been and never will be content indefinitely with a hand-to-mouth existence.

And because of this, from every depression comes new names, new faces, new fortunes, new business leaders. There are always a few who do not wait for opportunity to repeat her knock at the door—and show credentials. There are always a few—even as there are a few today—who with foresight and common sense go quietly into a low-priced market, stock up raw materials, lay up supplies of every kind—even to household and personal supplies—and get ready for the inevitable upturn.

If you look about you, you will note that most of the big fortunes of today, and the successful men, came up out of times like these. Not blind buying, but intelligent buying, based on a complete picture of one's business in full view. Not a worm's-eye view alone, but the view of a man who on a clear day sees 10 years ahead.

Never fear, from this tragedy of plenty there will come new names for the business headlines of tomorrow. They are in the making now.

Societies to suppress noise are being formed, but out in the country they organize to suppress the quiet.

"ROUND TOWN"
---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

"Make yourself an honest man, and then you may be sure that there is one rascal less in the world."—Carlyle.

The quotation above kind of leaves the same impression with me as the old saying, "Sweep around your own door." Perhaps it is just a little milder way of putting it for those sensitive persons. But how grand it would be if each person in Clanton would apply that quotation to themselves. Well, possibly I should say, those who need it.

Well I hope my selection of the 1930 Who's Who of last week pleased a few persons. Haven't had an opportunity to feel around to see yet. By the way, have you started reading the new serial story in the News? The second installment is in this issue. The story is "My Best Girl," by Kathleen Norris, and it is a corker. The characters are so human, just ordinary folks and true to life. Might be a chance of connecting them with some folks you know round town. If you haven't already started reading it, it is not too late yet, and tell your friends about it. Adding this serial to the News is just another forward step in my opinion. Another good column is "Main Street Looks at Broadway" by Ernest Camp, Jr. Ernest is one of those young fellows who came from a hick town like somebody else did, I know of who writes a column each week, and he has been taking cracks at Broadway, that are extremely humorous. Something else interesting in the C. G. N. each week is Bruce Barton's writings. I like them because they pertain so closely to life, as I see it. That reminds me, I must look up the word, Idealist.

Tonight, while I write this column, I am in something of a serious mood, and am afraid I will not pass on to you gentle readers any jokes. There's something bothering my mind, and I can't get it off my mind until it leaves town, which fortunately for you, will be in a day or two from tonight. This fellow Henry Ward Beecher of several years ago, once said, "Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with tenderness. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them and while their hearts can be thrilled by them." Now, that is something like a fellow's idea about folks sending flowers to his funeral. He wonders why they can't send them while he can see and smell them. Something to that maybe, after all.

Folks, this fellow George W. Willis, one of those good natured and well liked farmers living out north of Clanton has got the right spirit about doing things. He says when things look tight he just hitches up Old Beck to a plow, and they both back their ears and go to it. That's the kind of spirit I like, and that's the spirit that has made Mr. Willis a darn good farmer, too. I'm going out to see him sometime soon.

Just thought of another thought. Rosseau once said, "Men and nations can only be reformed in their youth; they become incorrigible as they grow old." Not a bad saying for an old man like Rousseau. Maybe that is the reason all those old countries over across the waters are having so much trouble. If that is the case, then somebody had better get busy on this United States of ours right away, before it gets old and incorrigible, because we don't want to be trying to overthrow the government or anything like that. It is kind of like that story I heard once.

A little boy was getting to swearing, so his mother told him she would make him leave home if he did not stop swearing. He agreed to the idea. However, one day he let it slip, so his mother made him pack his clothes and leave the house. He did, and his mother watched him walk away, and kept an eye on him, so that he could not go too far before she could bring him back. As she watched, the little fellow sat down on the curb, placed his chin in his hands, in deep thought. That was too much for the mother, so she started out to where he was. Just as she was about to walk up to his back, an old gentleman was crossing the street directly in front of the lad, so the mother drew back in hearing distance, just in time to hear the old gentlman ask, "Little man, could you tell me where the Suttles live?" The reply from the little fellow, as he looked up, was, "Go to h—l, I've got troubles of my own."

I'll just have to keep on giving our firemen a pat on their backs, because they are still showing some splendid work. Especially have they shown their courage in recent fires here. They have just got to where they ain't got much sense. Seems all they think of is that there's a fire and they've got to put it out. And they really do it. A fire ain't got much chance when our boys get to it. I'm going to get their names and see if I can't get the editor to publish them, so you folks will know who our firemen are.

Some fellow had the nerve to inquire not so long ago why I did not write some sense sometimes. I've been wondering about that myself, and also wondering what he would have me write. Perhaps if he were better acquainted with me he would see the reason. But to try to reply to that question, and I hope he sees this, I'll just quote a saying of Mark Twain: "Let us be thankful for the fools. But for them the rest of us could not succeed." Draw your own conclusions.

Folks, times are HARD. Why, I'll tell you what I've heard in my recent trips round town. I even heard something about another bank opening. Maybe we're having a hard time keeping our money. Some folks spent more money the past Christmas than any Christmas before, for presents, luxuries. There are more swell parties and blowouts being pulled in Clanton now than ever before. And they cost more money than ever before. You bet, we are having a hard time, trying to keep up—appearances.

Don't expect your home town business to give you many favors if you don't favor it by giving it your patronage.

It is claimed that overproduction caused the recent business depression, and the overproduction of talk certainly helped do so.

We read that few gunmen drink. The accuracy of their aim seems to confirm that statement.

Oddly enough, when we send it by ship it is a cargo, and when it goes by car it is a shipment.

In the old days a young fellow got a thrill drinking from his first Christmas moustache cup.

It's harder to love your neighbor as yourself when his loudspeaker keeps you awake far into the night.

Judging by the husbands some of them pick out, it seems that the ladies are not so hard to please after all.

Excerpts From L & N Employes' Magazine

The largest single shipment ever handled on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, according to the L & N Employes' Magazine for December, was that of a petroleum refining cylinder recently forwarded from Boyles, Ala., to Baton Rouge, La. The cylinder was 90 feet long, 12 feet 5 1-2 inches wide and weighed 114 tons. Three heavy duty flat cars were required for the

On January 1, 1930, the L & N Railroad Company had outstanding bonds and other funded obligations aggregating $234,659,721, upon which interest coupons to the amount of $10,664,904 were paid to many thousands of holders in all parts of the world. In acquainting its readers with the function of the New York general offices of the company L & N Employes' Magazine for December points to these figures. It also reveals that on July 15, 1929 (the latest date for which the information is available) the L & N paid dividends on its $117,000,000 capital stock to 6,696 stockholders. In the calendar year of 1929 L & N revenues amounted to $132,055,983, operating expenses $104,546,674, and taxes $7,566,457.

After a total service of 21 years, Mrs. Laura F. Taylor, 160 North Campbell St., Louisville, Ky., has retired to the pension roll of the L & N Railroad Company. Other employes of the L & N whose retirement to the pension list was announced in the December issue of the L & N Employes' Magazine include: Conductor John B. Vail, age 63, living at 1312 S. A tie company of Winchester, Ky., adopting what the L & N Employes' Magazine for December describes in effect as a novel method of showing its creditors how the bread is buttered, attaches to each check it issues a sticker containing the following: "We are able to pay this money to you because the railroads have paid it to us. It was paid to the railroads for the transportation of freight. If this arrangement is to be continued your shipments should move by rail, the shipments of your shipments should move by rail, and the shipments of the merchants and manufacturers whom you patronize should move by rail."

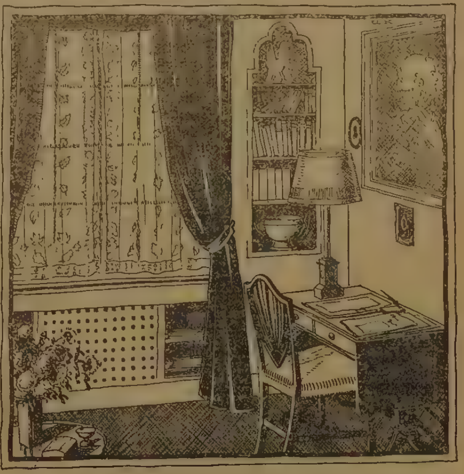
Style Trend For Windows



Net curtains in a new Georgian period design here soften the formality of the over-draperies and reflect the gracious atmosphere of the room.

THE well-dressed window, like the well-dressed woman, keeps pace with style. And in style details make up the correct whole. In curtains these all-important points are design, color, mesh and arrangement. With these satisfactorily solved, the window becomes, literally, well-dressed.

Heretofore glass curtains have been a difficult problem in carrying out the "period" room treatment. The fact that net curtains are hung straight against the pane stresses the design. If the motif is alien to the furnishings and wall-treatment, it spoils the unity of the room. If it is "just something neutral," the room becomes commonplace.

Net curtains authentically styled to period interiors are now seen in the shops in a considerable variety of designs. The ever-popular Colonial interior, for instance, will be enhanced by curtains featuring historic motifs. A variety of such timely designs have appeared "raught" in a natural color that simulates the unbleached tints associated with those early days. Or for the home in the English country house manner, there are designs in a new shade known as "pongee" to recreate the charm of Georgian days.

The new patterns seem sufficiently varied to meet all tastes and lighting requirements. Where wallpaper of pictorial interest is used, for instance, a more set pattern is required for contrast. For the room where daylight is precious, there are designs in light tracery. Still other patterns grow heavier in design toward the bottom so that an objectionable view may be concealed.

The usual mesh is ten point; that is to say, there are ten threads to the inch.

NEWS FROM CHILTON CO. HIGH SCHOOL

C. C. H. S. Wins First Basketball Game From Isabella High

By John Ponder Lawrence

Last Thursday afternoon our boys played the Isabella high school boys on our local court for a game of basketball. In the first half of the game the Isabella boys out-witted us a little, taking the score for Isabella 9, and C. C. H. S., 4. At the second half, our boys came back with the spirit to hold up the name "Tigers." Every boy played his best. The final score was Clanton 24, and Isabella 14. Due to the fact that the team had not selected a captain, Paul Cox filled the position during the game.

Senior III English Class Does Some Interesting Work

The Senior English Class, under the direction of Miss Wells, made a careful study of the origin and development of ballads. After having completed the study, the entire class was called upon to write an original ballad. The following was selected as the best.

"The Little Log School House"

By Homer Carroll, author of ballad

In a little log school house where I once was a scholar,
A tragical drama occurred:
'Twas composed of three boys, Joe Green, Bill McNoyes,
And I, least important, was the third.

Joe Green was a lad who had ever been known
To be timid and awkward in class;
He never could spell nor read very well,
That's why he never could pass.

Now the schoolroom floor near the teacher's desk
Was not completed just then;
sort of place
Was left for the cold to come in.

When the teachers had called for the pupils to spell,
And placed them all in a row,
Joe's number was four—near the hole in the floor
He stood all primed to go!

When at last came his turn and the word was pronounced,
He awkwardly stepped back a pace;
Then again came a word—and at last came a third,
He was nearing the floor's open —space.

Now Bill was a boy who ever in fun,
From laughter he could never refrain;
If someone should pull a joke in school
He would laugh until he suffered with pain.

As he looked at Joe Green he could clearly discern
That a scene was about to occur;
Then a smile and a grin wrought his face up again,
And his countenance began to stir.

I saw that the grin had spread o'er his face,
Was about to burst with a roar,
And he giggled with glee, as he whispered to me,
"What if Joe should fall through the floor?"

The hole in the floor was now only a step
From where Joe stood with a frown—
He tried to begin and failed once again,
And fell through the floor to the ground.

Bill clasped his hands to his sides as a fit
Of laughter seized him once more;
He laughed and he cried, while I earnestly tried
To drag him out at the door.

Day after day and night after night,
I watched at the side of the lad;
For not long after he was through with his laughter,
I saw his condition really was bad.

And now ever since he laughed once too hard,
He has walked and laughed never more;
Of the two boys, you see, I'd much rather be
The one who fell through the floor.

It might be of interest to some to know that the author of the above little bit of originality and playful attempts with the muses is Homer Carroll, a young married minister in our school this year, who is making an enviable record in his school work, and otherwise a splendid asset to the school and student body. He enters Howard College next summer where he will pursue work further along his chosen line. We wish him well in every activity of his life.

NOTE:—This was received a few minutes too late for last week's issue.

Work Resumed After Holidays

Most excellent health was enjoyed by everyone during the holidays, and everybody seemed ready to go back to work Monday morning when the eight o'clock bell rang out its familiar call to books.

Semester examinations begin January 15. The student body as a whole seems to realize what this means. These semester examinations are not only a high school regulation, but is a law made by the State Department of Education requiring each pupil registered in high school to stand semester examinations at mid-term and at the close of school. These papers are kept on file for six months after each examination. Any pupil who has made a general average of 90 per cent in each course is exempted from writing the examination in said course.

Our school appreciated a visit from Mr. Haskew and his son, Lawrence. last Tuesday. Mr. Haskew conducted chapel exercises, after which he gave some splendid suggestions about new year resolutions. A most interesting talk was made by young Mr. Haskew, who explained some life applications, from a visit he had made recently to a marble quarry in Georgia. "The process of chiseling letters in stone is made by placing a rubber sheet next to the marble with the letters stenciled in the rubber. Then a strong blast of sand is forced against this stencil. The imprint is made against the marble by the sand, but the rubber gives back." The speaker stated that we as people should give to the world pleasantly and agreeably without hurting or leaving scars to show as the rubber, and not as the sand against the stone.

We admire the holiday spirit of our school when called upon to bring old clothes, etc., for the poor. Quite a collection was made, which was turned over to Mrs. Stapp.

The teachers of C. C. H. S. desire to thank Mrs. Hugh Jones for her splendid reception which was enjoyed at her home last Monday afternoon.

The evening was looked forward to and spent with much pleasure. All were pleased with the after Christmas effect, that dominated the atmosphere, and were convinced that Old Saint Nicholas was there on Christmas Eve.

The Methodist Church of Clanton

Rev. D. W. Haskew, Pastor

At the conclusion of the lesson period next Sunday all the children will gather in the auditorium of the church for a short sermon by the pastor. The pastor caught the picture of a thief as he entered his church and he wants the children to help him identify him.

We want to urge that you hear Dr. N. B. McLeod of Selma Sunday night at seven o'clock. The young people of the church will be in the choir in their choir robes, and the service is going to be beautiful and helpful.

We have prayer service each Wednesday night at 7 o'clock.

Better Farming Plans Are Made

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 7—A program which embodies the main fundamentals of successful farming was projected by the county agents and other agricultural workers at the meeting in Auburn on December 29 and 30, called by Director L. N. Duncan to consider the present agricultural situation and outlook data for 1931.

Two days were spent studying the situation and outlook. Facts presented showed that cotton acreage should be reduced in 1931 in order to allow consumption of the unusually large surplus now on hand as a result of underconsumption. In conjunction with less cotton more acres should be planted to feed and food crops, other cash crops added, and every effort made to reduce production cost to the lowest point, not to sacrifice efficiency and economy.

With these objectives before them, the county agents are preparing to hold in January county-wide meetings of bankers, farmers and merchants, at which time the facts will be presented and a safe, sound, and profitable farming program for the county worked out and adopted. Most of the counties expect to print these programs as a guide to better farming in 1931. Business interests and clubs will cooperate.

Low-cost production is of paramount importance. With it must be combined farm production of food and feed so that these will not have to be bought.

County meetings are being scheduled under the direction of District Agents J. T. High, Emmett Sizemore, and R. G. Arnold, who will attend many of them together with specialists from Auburn and from the State Department of Agriculture and Industries at Montgomery.

Mt. Springs News

Dr. F. P. Ensminger and Rev. A. W. Sparks will preach at Mt. Springs next Monday night. Services will begin at 6:30. Everybody is invited to attend and hear Dr. Ensminger and Rev. Sparks next Monday night. Don't forget the date—Monday night, January the 12th.

A. C. NELSON, Pastor.

Create A Market
With Advertising

There is a story told of the man and his wife who wanted to sell their home. The man went to considerable care in preparing an advertisement, calling attention to the wonderful location of the home, its fine neighborhood, paved streets, modern conveniences, and all of those things about the home which would appeal to the prospective buyer. According to the story he succeeded in advertising his home so well that when his wife saw the ad. she decided not to sell after all.

It may not be that you could convince your wife to that extent, but if you have goods, you can find new customers by telling your prospects about the quality, service, price, etc. of your merchandise. When you place your ad with this newspaper, you may rest assured that it will receive careful attention from the typographical and printing standpoint, and further, it will be read by the people in every part of Chilton County.

Advertising is as necessary in modern merchandising as any other factor. Business today is dependent upon selling so much that is not necessities of life that the customer must be "sold" on the article. Well prepared advertising is creating new markets and holding regular customers for many business firms in this territory. Are you one of them? Call 147.

There is no substitute for merchandising ability --- and there is no substitute for Newspaper Advertising - especially when sales are most difficult.

Are You Raising The Best Cotton Variety?

Farmers of Alabama are growing the shortest staple cotton grown in the Cotton Belt, and Chilton County farmers are growing more than their share of this short staple. The Chilton county cotton is so short that cotton buyers are refusing to buy it. Indications are that Chilton County farmers, who grow short staple cotton, will be penalized more this year than in the past. For information along this line, County Agent Stapp suggests that farmers in doubt about the penalty on short staple cotton might talk to Geo. Polk, Renfro Mullins, Gulledge Bros. and Cal Foshee. In fact any of the cotton merchants of the county are aware of the serious penalty placed on farmers, who persist in growing short staple cotton.

The Alabama Experiment Station advises that D. P. L. cotton is the highest yielder of good staple and should be planted by all farmers, whose land is not heavily infested with wilt. If it is necessary to plant heavily infested wilt land with cotton, the Experiment Station advises the use of good wilt-resisting cotton County Agent Stapp has arranged with the Farm Bureau at Clanton to secure for farmers of Chilton County sufficient seed of D. P. L. and Rhines Wilt Resisting variety to take care of the farmers needs.

County Agent Stapp, advises that now is the time to clean up home orchards and get them in good shape for producing fruit this year. The trees should be pruned and sprayed with oil Emulsion for scale and general health of the tree. One good application of Oil Emulsion now would be sufficient to control the scale and put the trees in good vigorous growing condition. Every farmer should try to take care of the orchard in order to provide fresh fruit for canning this year. Any farmer who will follow the recommendations in the Home Orchard Bulletin at County Agent Stapp's office can have good fruit.

Boy Scout Activities of Clanton

Dan Smith, Troop Reporter

Friday night, January 3, was a night to be remembered by all of Clanton's Scouts. A real court of honor was held. The members of this Court of Honor present were Prof. L. C. Warr, Mr. W. M. Wyatt, and Mr. C. E. Stapp. Mr. Lamar Calloway, a fellow who has undoubtedly put this troop where it is, was also present and gave our test. Mr. Calloway has always been a friend to the troop, and has always been glad to assist us in many ways, especially in giving tests. Last Friday night was Mr. Calloway's last meeting with us and I say in behalf of Troop 47 of Clanton, Ala., that we appreciate his help in bur Scout work greatly and are sorry to see him leave.

I could write all day on the help that Mr. Calloway gave us but I know you want to know what we did at this meeting. Well, I will begin just as we did at the meeting.

When the Court of Honor assembled, the first thing we did was to review on tenderfoot questions, and things all Scouts should know, but let me say before I continue, the test that we were to pass at this meeting is the Second Class test and you have noticed in preceding articles that we have already passed some of our requirements and the reason for having the Court of Honor was to see if we passed those requirements satisfactorily, and to pass other requirements. Now, I will continue with the meeting.

After Mr. Calloway reviewed us on Tenderfoot requirements, and in tying knots, we began to get ready for the Second Class stuff. Since I can not remember who appeared and when they appeared before the Court of Honor, I will have to tell as much as I know.

The Court of Honor would ask any Scout any question on first aid he cared to and after each Scout had been asked different questions, tried their skill at naming the points of the compass and showed proof of having deposited at least one dollar in public savings bank, the Court of Honor decided whether they had done this satisfactorily. The last requirement was to prove that the Scout had practiced daily the Scout laws and oath. This was settled by the Court of Honor after all the Scouts had left.

Since I was unable to get the names of the Scouts who passed the Second Class test I will have to give you the names of these boys next week.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, billousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. COUNTY CHEST FUND APPEAL IS WELL STARTED

Meeting In Clanton Last Sat. Brings Out Large Crowd Of Interested Folk

The Second Chilton County Chest Fund Appeal is now underway, according to information from the office of the County Welfare Department, having officially opened last Monday, January 12th.

At a county-wide meeting held at the courthouse in Clanton last Saturday, Mrs. A. M. Tunstall, State Child Welfare Director, clearly brought out the fact that the need for everyone working together during the present times with conditions as they are, is very necessary. She also stated that with laws as they are now standing, the only method of obtaining money for relief work is through public subscription and that each community must accept its own burden and all pull together until brighter outlook can be seen.

There were approximately over two hundred people who attended the meeting last Saturday in Clanton to hear Mrs. Tunstall and other speakers, and at which time the County Welfare Superintendent. Mrs. C. E. Stapp, made a

Miller Inaugural To Be Broadcast

The inaugural exercises of Governor B. M. Miller will be broadcast over WAPI in Birmingham and WSFA in Montgomery. The two stations will present the same program, the announcers using a balcony one story above the portico on which Governor Miller will stand to deliver his inaugural address and to take the oath of office.

Official announcement of the broadcast was made by P. O. Davis, general manager of WAPI, after conference with those who are in charge of the inaugural plans. It will be the first Alabama inauguration to be broadcast.

By the use of radio hundreds of thousands of people who will not be privileged to see the inauguration will hear it, Mr. Davis commented. The broadcast will begin at eleven o'clock on the morning of the 19th of January and continue through the inaugural address and the oath of office. Perhaps other features will go on the air but definite announcement can not be made at this time.

Judge Miller and other candidates were given the use of WAPI for campaign purposes at no cost to them because WAPI is a state and city of Birmingham institution. Candidates used also WSFA and other commercial stations. Governor Miller gives radio much credit for his victory at the polls for it enabled him to deliver his messages to tens of thousands at one time.

After the inauguration WAPI will be available to Governor Miller for promoting the work of his administration, Mr. Davis added. Most of this will be done from the state capitol studio in Montgomery, but the studios at Auburn, Birmingham, and Montevallo will be available and used when needed.

CITIZEN'S TRAINING CAMPS START WORK

Major S. R. Tupper, U. S. Army, Birmingham, Officer in charge of Citizens' Military Training Camps enrollment in Alabama, has begun activities preliminary to the 1931 enrollment period which begins soon.

Major Tupper announces that Alabama's allotment this year is 675.

Any young man of acceptable character and between the ages of 17 and 24 may apply for these camps. If he can pass the required physical examination and is of god moral character, as certified to by a reputable citizen, who knows him, he may attend these camps.

Attendance at these camps means no obligation for future military service. Those who attend are no more likely to be called to the colors in time of war than any other man. However, if they volunteer or are selected, they are more likely to secure rapid advancement and be able to serve their country more effectively. Military training is not the primary object. The training at these camps stresses citizenship, self reliance, initiative, good fellowship and how to work and play hard and effectively. The moral and religious influences are kept at a high standard.

All necessary expense covering transportation, camp facilities, food, clothing laundry, medical examinations and attendance and services of instructors, is furnished free by the government.

Dr. Frank Willis Barnett of the Birmingham News was present and made a splendid talk on the necessity of cooperation of the farmers and stated the desire of the News was to work more closely with farmers than in past years. J. F. Hill of Portland, Tenn., was present ready to give the benefit of his long experience in growing and marketing sweet potatoes. There were others present who made speeches, inclding Prof. P. O. A number of fertilizer people were present and they appeared to be at a loss as to the probable price of fertilizer for spring use.

Subjects Important To Farmers To Be Discussed Here Tuesday

Special Committee Has Been Named To Draw Up Program Of Work And Recommendations To Be Presented At Tuesday Meeting

Much interest and enthusiasm is being shown over the county concerning the meeting scheduled for next Tuesday morning, January 20th, at ten o'clock and its outcome, judging from reports coming in from various parts of the county.

The purpose of this meeting, which will be held at the courthouse Tuesday morning, is to discuss a safe farming program for 1931. A representative from the Bureau of Economics of Washington, is expected to be in Clanton to attend this meeting and conduct a discussion of the farming outlook for 1931.

Proof that this subject is of wide interest was shown by the large number of farmers, bankers, merchants, and other business men who attended a meeting at the office of the county agent last Monday night. At this meeting, plans were discussed that are to be as subjects for the county-wide meeting next Tuesday morning. Among those present at the meeting Monday night, who made helpful suggestions were W. L. Popwell, Horace Popwell, J. N. Dennis. J. R. Mullins, S. J. Ezell, J. D. Collins, J. C. Page, J. P. Montgomery, H. R. Oden, Earl Thomas, C. C. Conway, E. E. Edwards, J. P. Payne, H. M. Nix, T. F. Patterson. W. C. Robinson, E. R. Piper, C. R. Foss, E. B. Tucker, H. B. Oliver. W. A. Gulledge and F. J. Callen.

A committee composed of C.E. Stapp, J. N. Dennis, H. R. Oden, J. C. Page and J. R. Mullins, was named to draw up a program of work and recommendations to be made at the county-wide meeting Tuesday morning.

Much discussion has been brought up over the county as to a farming program to be suggested to the farmers of Chilton County, that they may follow for 1931. Some careful study has been made on this, and a program will no doubt be presented at this meeting.

It is urged that every farmer in the county, who possibly can, attend this meeting, as subjects of vital importance to every farmer, banker and merchant in the county will be discussed.

THERESA FRANZ, 14 BURIED SUNDAY

Funeral services for Miss Theresa Elaine Franz, age 14, who died at her home here last Saturday, were held Sunday afternoon at the Seventh Day Adventist tabernacle here, with Elder A. B. Russell, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Wayne B. White, of Birmingham. Interment was in the City Cemetery with Martin in charge.

The funeral services were conducted in a most impressive manner. A quartette of singers from the Birmingham church of Seventh Day Adventists rendered several selections.

The deceased is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Franz of Clanton. Mr. Franz is secretary-treasurer of the Alabama Conference of Seventh Day Adventists and the family have been making their home in Clanton for a number of years, coming here from Nashville, Tenn. The esteem in which this little girl who was so suddenly called by death following an attack of influenza, was shown in the large number of floral offerings presented at the funeral, and by the large number of people attending. Other survivors besides the mother and father, are two sisters and one brother.

F. W. Denty of Birmingham was in Clanton on business during last week, returning to Birmingham Saturday. Mr. Denty was at one time a resident of Clanton, and can number his friends here by the score. While in town, Mr. Denty called at the News office.

LEGISLATURE OF 1931 WILL PROMISE HIST'RY

Alfred Tunstall Will Preside Over The Lower House; Measures Named

By Alabama Associated Newspapers Bureau

The 1931 Legislature of Alabama made a harmonious exit Tuesday, which points to a success for the Miller Administration, which promises to be second only to the Houston and Comer Legislatures in history making.

Alfred Tunstall, Speaker

As usual the fights for the leadership in the two houses were fought in caucuses on the day and night preceding the opening of the Legislature. As a result of the caucuses, the veteran Legislator Alfred Tunstall, once Speaker of the House, will preside over the lower branch. Senator R. H. Powell of Macon County was elected President Pro Tem of the Senate by acclamation. It was announced early Monday evening that Tyler Goodwyn, veteran Legislator of Montgomery, had withdrawn from the Speakership race in favor of Tunstall's candidacy.

Among the leading measures expected to come up before the present session of the Legislature will be restora-

OPPORTUNITY TO GET RIDE IN AIRPLANE IS EXTENDED

The people of Chilton County will still have the opportunity to take a ride in an airplane and view Clanton, Thorsby, Verbena, Lay Dam, or most any other place nearby, from the air, due to the decision of Lieut. Ellie McCune and Aviator McTinney, who have been in Clanton for the past week carrying people aloft to view the country side from the air.

Due to the condition of the weather in recent days, these aviators decided to keep their Curtiss-Waco plane here for the remainder of this week. They are located on the Collins field, just east of town, on the Lay Dam road, and are charging only a small price for a trip. Every day except Sunday, the cost is only seventy-five cents, and on Sunday $1.00. Lieut. McCune is a government licensed pilot, and has a licensed plane.

IN MEMORY OF MISS ORA DEVAUGHN

The Death Angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Devaughn last Sunday, January 4th, and took away the spirit of their charming daughter, Ora, to the Great Beyond.

She leaves to mourn her departure a father, mother, two sisters and three brothers.

Ora had just reached her twenty-first year and has always been cheerful and friendly, meeting everybody with a smile. She was also very smart and energetic, carrying on herdaily work about the home with a wilful mind and never murmured or complained. Indeed to know Ora was to love her. She numbered her friends by her acquaintances.

Just why the Lord saw fit to call her away so early we can't tell, but doubtless he saw wherein he could use her better in the heavenly world than here. We believe the Lord wants friendly folks like Ora to make up the Heavenly Kingdom. In fact, Christ was very friendly Himself, while here on earth. His enemies sought to down him by accusing Him of being a friend to the sinners. A fact we are proud of Christ himself did not deny this accusation.

We have evidence that Ora was ready to meet the Lord as she joined the church while quite young. And while she was seriously sick, made a remark that she would not get well, and didn't seem to dread death.

So weep not for her, dear parents, brothers, sisters, and friends, but let us strive to be ready when death calls us away so we all may meet her in the heavenly city where all pain, sorrow, grief and disappointment will forever be passed away. All will be joy, peace and happiness, throughout eternity with the Lord.

The remains were laid to rest the following day, January 5th, at Maple Springs cemetery, Rev. Parrish and Rev. Lembrick officiating.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

On entering a Clanton store I saw all the force behind the counters were busy taking stock. The proprietor had done business for the year 1930 and before going into the trade of the new year he wanted to know his standing. He sought to know his liabilities and his assets. He wanted to know on what base he could proceed in safety. Wonder if you have looked over your record of last year. Wonder if you have taken stock with your soul life? Stop long enough to check over your heart life and see if you have grown in grace during the year. Examine yourselves and see if you be of the faith.

While passing a certain home I saw the man of the house out in his back yard with a rake, and this man was raking leaves and burning rubbish. He was cleaning up the back yard of his home. That man's front yard was spotless, and the pastor would look on with admiration, thinking that the entire premises were well kept, but rubbish had collected in the back yard. There are many people who look fine and spotless in public life. The front part of their living seems to be perfect. What about the secret part of life? We should never fail to look after the back yard with as much care as the front yard. Blessed is that man, that woman, whose secret life is as fine as the public life.

Not long since a traveler stopped at a news stand where Magazines were on display. The dealer had in stock a magazine that carried a vulgar picture on its cover. This traveler noted that many young boys were hanging around the stand. Parents, let me warn you against the awful wave of impure literature that is flooding the land. Judge McCord is quoted as saying, "He had rather see a boy with a jug of whiskey than to see him with a vulgar picture." Do not be afraid to report to Federal authorities when you find a reptile coiled on the cover of a magazine. Our government is guarding the mails of this country.

A story comes to us from West Florida that a member of the Methodist church was out one day hunting squirrels. While in the woods the clouds grew dark and the rain began to fall in torrents and the hunter saw a hollow log stretched out on the ground. To avoid getting drenched in the rain the man crawled into the hollow log. He listened to the pattering of the rain and soon fell asleep. It rained on and he slept on. The log grew wet and began to swell. After three hours of sleep the man awoke to find himself gripped by the walls of the log. He could no move backward or forward. He realized that he was in great danger and he started to thinking of his past life. His mind ran to and fro, and soon he was dwelling upon his church loyalty. He thought about not being at Sunday school and church the Sunday before, and when these thoughts came into his brain, they made him feel so little that he dropped out of the log. If you are not in Sunday school and church every Sunday, to think of your way of conduct is enough to make you feel little. Why be little toward God and your church?

FOR SALE
BY ALL GROCERS

an ENCOURAGING INVENTORY

THIS is inventory time—the month when business checks up on past achievements and takes stock of present resources to appraise future prospects.

Following the customary plan of business, let's take an inventory now of Alabama's past achievements, and present resources and seek to appraise Alabama's future prospects.

To make a true accounting of Alabama's progress, we must go back not one year but six—to 1925—the year that marked the real beginning of Alabama's recent era of industrial expansion and the year that also saw the formation of this company's New Industries Division.

Alabama's inventory for this six year period 1925-1930 would read about like this:

New Industries Established	136
New Employees in New Plants	24,319
New Capital Invested in Industry	$68,000,000

Interpreted, these figures mean that new plants which have come into our state thru efforts of this company's New Industries Division, Chambers of Commerce and other agencies, have added nearly $25,000,000 annually to Alabama's buying power by putting 25,000 more workers on plant payrolls. This is an amazing record which should bring a thrill of pride to every citizen.

So much for the past. What of the present? What of the next six years?

This depression, from which Alabama is emerging, has in no way impaired or reduced the fundamental, bed rock resources on which past progress has been built. Alabama still possesses an illimitable and virtually untouched wealth of natural resources, the greatest possibly of any state. Beneath her soil are many million tons of coal and ore and limestone. Upon her hills and plains are many million feet of timber. In her swift flowing streams lies the energy to turn the wheels of industry and bear the products of her factories and farms to market and among her citizens are men with qualities of leadership to direct the march of progress.

These are Alabama's stock in trade. It is a stock which is always in demand. During these next six years these natural resources will be in greater demand than ever before. And that means inevitable progress and increased prosperity.

THE OLD RELIABLE
L&N
(LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE R.R.)

Over 22%, or $403,000,000, of the net revenue from the operation of the United States railroads in 1929 was paid into the public treasuries in the form of taxes.

In addition, 13.6%, or $855,000,000, of the gross receipts of the railroads was spent to maintain their own private roadways in order that the public might travel in greater comfort and ship with greater safety.

These huge sums were exclusive of the interest on the heavy investment in these properties—roadway, rails, ties, buildings, etc.—that the railroads built at their own expense.

Compare these amounts with those paid by busses and trucks engaged in common-carrier service directly in competition with the railroads. Unlike the railroads, they do not contribute adequately in taxes to the support of our courts, schools, and other public institutions. They do not share properly in the cost of construction and upkeep of the highways. Generally they select their class of traffic and assess their own rates, and are virtually free from the exacting requirements as to supervision of their operations, etc., now imposed on the railroads by government and state authorities.

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

Such a situation is manifestly unfair and unjust and unless corrected will seriously impair one of the nation's most vital instruments of progress. Common equity demands that the thoughtful consideration of the public be given to these problems so that efficient railroad transportation may be sustained. All the railroads want or can reasonably ask for is a field of endeavor that affords equal opportunity for all.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

COUNTRY JOURNALISM IS PRAISED BY EXPERTS

SMALL NEWSPAPERS ARE INDISPENSABLE TO AMERICAN PEOPLE

No branch of general education that reaches the masses of the American people can point to greater achievements than can country journalism. Country papers stand in the front line of defense against schemes that rob the people. They work to encourage industries and payrolls, build up small communities and make more business for everybody.

According to N. W. Ayer & Son's Newspaper Directory for 1930, 9,261 daily and weekly newspapers in towns of 25,000 and under, report 18,383,736 subscribers. As the directory lists over 12,500 of these papers in the 48 states, it is evident that at a most conservative estimate for those not giving circulation figures the rural press must have in excess of 20,000,000 subscribers. Practically none of this subscription list is duplicated; it is seldom that the same person takes two country newspapers. Any way it can be figured, these 20,000,000 subscriptions reach many more than that number of readers, for there is at least a man and a woman in nearly every home where a paper is delivered.

It is a great mistake to overlook or exclude the country newspaper in general advertising campaigns. The Manufacturer and Industrial News Bureau believes that these newspapers reach a greater potential buying market in a more direct manner than probably any other medium.

When national advertisers contemplate the expenditure of money for general advertising it would be in the interest of the most uniform distribution of products and business to divide advertising appropriations so that a fair portion of them would be used in the country press. The small publishers advocate policies which tend to maintain sound conditions in this country, but too often when there is any business to be passed around by large industries, it goes only to the big fellows in the publishing business.

In its contact with industrial leaders the Manufacturing and Industrial News Bureau has always preached the advertising value of the smaller city dailies and country weeklies, believing that they are entitled to a share of the advertising appropriations made by large industries. It has pointed out that an advertisement in the home town paper presents the merits of a product to the intimate fireside circle of the home. It emphasizes the fact that a newspaper in a small community is as necessary to the life of that community as the school or the bank. There is no means of reaching these home owners and buyers with a description of the merits of a product or service as directly as through the columns of the local paper, which is intimately connected with all matters affecting the daily life of local citizens, who all read it. * * *

Country weeklies and smaller city dailies make themselves more and more community builders in the true sense of the word. At the intersections of the main highways and paved streets they attract payrolls and industries, where such enterprises are not yet overdone as they are in many of the overcrowded half-million and multi-million populated world centers. The national development tendency is away from the mastodonic metropolises where free play of individualism is reduced to a minimum.

In the great open spaces there are still thousands of weeklies and small dailies owned and edited by individuals who alone dictate their own policies—men and women with their own money and their own plants and many of them still actual practical printers.

The country press is helping create prosperous smaller industrial cities and country places. It is helping to give employment to thousands of families, men, women and young people. It furnishes the United States with a newspaper service in every small city and town that is not equaled elsewhere in the world.

The smaller newspapers published in country communities and cities can become successful community builders, leaders for industrial development and multipliers of payrolls, which, in turn, furnish subscribers and advertisers.

The paper that makes itself the exponent of payrolls and industries helps found the prosperous community and shares in the community prosperity.

MASSACHUSETTS OBJECTS

We read that educational leaders in Massachusetts have at this late day discovered that the use of the abbreviation, "Mass." is detrimental to the dignity of their state, and have begun a movement for its suppression. They want the name spelled out in full in all cases.

But if Massachusetts feels slighted by the use of only four letters, other states have even more cause for complaint Consider Ohio, which is usually represented by only one, "O." And the O, might possibly be mistaken for a zero, thus adding insult to injury.

The question raised calls to mind the interesting fact that the name of every state has been commonly abbreviated except that of Utah, possitbly because "Ut." in handwriting might be confused with "Vt." while "Uh" would suggest an unpleasant sound.

We doubt that the objection of the Massachusetts professors is well taken Thing how many barrels of ink have been saved by the employment of the abbreviated form, which saves nine letters each time it is written or printed, to say nothing of the economy of labor.

We recall one typesetter whose ideas would have pleased the Massachusetts pedagogues, however. He, too, disliked abbreviations, and when he set up a musical article in which reference was made to Mozart's 12th Mass, he made it read "Mozart's 12th Massachusetts."

if "Nobody Works but Ol' Man River"

Or A Gas Pipe Line —from Louisiana

What Will Happen to the Payrolls Which Have Made Alabama Prosperous?

"VISIT a great hydro-electric plant and the first thing that will strike you," says a recent advertisement of the General Electric Company, "is the astonishing absence of people. Alone, almost unwatched, the water flows, the great turbines revolve. Nobody works, apparently, except Ol' Man River." With equal force it might be said, that when a natural gas pipe line is once laid, few people work, except the meter readers who collect the toll and send it from the state.

Alabama's greatest worry now is this very fact that so many of her citizens are not working, because they can't find work to do. And Alabama's greatest need is payrolls and MORE PAYROLLS. More people working! More people earning! More people spending! When "nobody works" we have hard times.

Normally Alabama's coal and coke industry employs more people, and creates larger payrolls than any single industry in Alabama.

ALABAMA'S COAL AND COKE INDUSTRY NORMALLY EMPLOYS ABOUT 28,500 PEOPLE and indirectly furnishes steady work at good pay to many thousand railway operatives who haul this coal and coke from mine and oven to the market. And work for brick, cement, lumber, iron and steel industries which manufacture products that the coal and coke industries use. And work for the farmer, who finds his best home market in the coal fields of the state!

Whether you are head of an Industry or Home, you can do your part to help relieve Alabama unemployment by using that fuel which creates the most employment for the most Alabama people—Alabama Coal or Alabama Coke.

This is No. 5 of a series of advertisements published by Alabama Coal and Coke Producers.

Painful Condition

"WHEN I was just a girl at home," writes Mrs. B. F. Riggan, of Baird, Texas, "I took Cardui for cramping and pains in my side and back, and it helped me at that time.

"After I was married, I found myself in a weak, run-down condition. I suffered a great deal with my back, which was so weak it hurt me to get up or when I would stand on my feet. I fell off in weight.

"A friend of mine, seeing how bad I felt, advised me to take Cardui, which I did. By the time I had taken two bottles, I felt stronger and better than I had in a long time."

The Survival of the Fittest

When first Darwin pronounced his often misunderstood doctrine of the survival of the fittest, it became subject to numerous attacks—which continue even until now—but G. K. Chesterton takes the position that nothing more clearly demonstrates its soundness than the survival of religion!

In a recent article in the New York Times, Mr. Chesterton reviews briefly the war upon religion, with its many offerings of substitutes, and he concludes that religion has survived because it is fittest—is the only moral or spiritual or inspirational movement that has survived and continues to exercise its hold upon increasing numbers of the world's inhabitants.

In the war upon religion, movements have arisen which appealed to the "intellect" only to die because they failed to recognize that intellect itself is a spiritual quality and it demands something more adequate than the theory that all form and matter are manifestations of some astounding accident.

Substitutes have been offered which hold forth the observance of sound morals as the ideal of human conduct, but they have fallen by the wayside because human experience proves that religion is the greatest of all agencies for bringing about the practice of sound morals.

In seeking to find something to offer in exchange for religious belief, opponents have even gone to the length of attempting to substitute a frenzied sort of alleged "freedom," in which no line has been drawn between license and liberty, but this too, has failed because the great majority of people recognize instinctively that there must be restraint upon human action if the race is to survive. Experience has proved conclusively that society cannot play fast and loose with moral and spiritual obligations without suffering heavy penalties.

Russia today furnishes an apt illustration of the results flowing from the policy expressed in the terms "there is no God: let your conscience be your guide."

Russia, with no spiritual outlook and no moral standard, is in the depth and misery increases, and so it has been throughout all time when peoples and nations closed their eyes to the obligations imposed by religion.

But it is not because all other theories fail that religion marches on, tightening its hold upon thinking people throughout the world. It thrives, not because of the weakness of substitutes, but because of its own inherent strength. It gives something that is not found elsewhere, and this something has been found indispensable in the onward and upward march of the race.—Tuscaloosa News.

We Don't Carry Umbrellas

In calling on the members of his party in Congress not to tie President Hoover's hands in the matter of relief appropriations, but to give the President authority to use the money where it may be most needed to help the unemployment situation, Alfred E. Smith displayed a breadth of view which might be emulated by lesser politicians in both parties. The former Governor of New York knows from his own experience as an administrator [illegible] an executive to be bound to a [illegible] every detail is prescribed by law, and not to [illegible] to perform the function which properly b[illegible] cutive, that of deciding on the [illegible] the law can best be carried [illegible]

[illegible] belief, we think the intelligent public will commend this [illegible] of Mr. Smith and hope that it will have an effect upon those in Congress and elsewhere who would rather make trouble for the Administration than to have the economic situation improved.

Mr. Smith, in the same newspaper article, "said a mouthful," in a phrase which will be widely quoted. "American people never carry an umbrella," he says. "They prepare to walk in eternal sunshine." He points out that in time of prosperity the political leader who tries to call a halt on reckless expenditure and to prepare for the depression which has always followed every prosperity wave in history, is so unpopular that he could not be elected to any office.

We are prone to think that whatever the conditions are today they will always be the same. In time of sunshine we think it is never going to rain. And similarly there are millions today who think that prosperity is never coming back. Both beliefs are equally wrong. Nothing is constant except change. Whatever the conditions, the old Persian king was right when he said:

"This, too, shall pass away."

New Constitutional Amendment Proposed

It has been asserted that we need another constitutional amendment to keep deadly weapons out of the hands of criminals.

Those who favor such legislation do so because they believe it would curb crime and benefit society. Yet no proof is forthcoming to back their belief. The experience in New York—with its "model" Sullivan laws—and in other great cities, has demonstrated that anti-gun laws serve only to keep weapons away from the law-abiding to the advantage of the criminal.

Crime will be curbed when the people use their power [illegible] ce fundamental laws, break up alliances between police, courts and the underworld, and revise and simplify the machinery of justice. Until that is done, all the prohibitory legislation or constitutional amendments in the world will be impotent.

Seems like some people didn't understand my selections on the 1930 Who's Who. That young fellow who inquired over the telephone just what he was considered for will kindly remember that his name being listed, means that he will be presented again for the 1931 Who's Who, due to the fact that his name was mentioned in the past year's. That person who inquired of the editor about the selection of the Most Versatile School Teacher, apparently had things confused, and he might profit by re-reading the list. That lady who wrote in on blue stationery is perhaps correct in her presumption, and I will endeavor to give her suggestion some thought. And you who wrote in and forgot to sign your name, shouldn't, ought to do that, because I never like to get letters that are not signed, and too it throws a reflection on you, if by chance i should be known to me who you are, and I would like to ask that when writing to this column, please address your letters to this column in care of The News, because the editor has been raising sand with me about him having to contend with opening letters intended for me.

A. A. JACKSON WRITES ABOUT SCHOOL TRANSPORTATION

Editor Chilton County News:

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to our school system. There is some dissatisfaction over the county about the transporting of the children to and from school. We can not expect people to be satisfied when a school bus stops at a school patrons house and picks up his large children and transports them to and from the schools of our county, leaving his little tots to tramp through the rain, mud and cold. Such a system is discriminating against the little child in favor of the larger ones. A system like this will never be satisfactory. I can not see how the officials of any county can take the taxpayers dollar to discriminate against the little children in such a way.

What did Christ say in regard to little children, "Forbid them not, to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." I wonder if the Board of Education has ever read this Scripture. Surely they have not. Otherwise Chilton County would not have such a discriminating bus system.

There is another Scripture which says, "Are not my ways equal and your ways unequal." This is true, for there is no equalization in the Board of Education's bus system.

I hope the board will see if there can not be some plan worked out that will give equal transportation to all children alike.

It seems that there is a drive being made to consolidate the rural schools in this county. As there are several school houses in the county that are in a bad condition, and no repairs being made. I fear this is a bad mistake the county board is making. As there is more satisfaction in the districts where there is no transportation at all than there is in the consolidated districts where they are partially transported.

The taxpayer's money should be equally divided among all the children of the county. And each citizen should know how every dollar is being spent.

Sec. 123 of the School Code requires the county board of education to publish a full and complete itemized statement of the receipts and disbursements of all school funds, and the refusal or neglect failure of any member of the County Board of Education to comply with the provisions of this section shall constitute a Misdemeanor.

Has this itemized statement been published?

I haven't seen one. What about it. Board, do you have them. If so please send me one to Clanton Route 4.

Yours very truly,

A. A. JACKSON.

Review of Graves Administration

With the close of the Graves administration, it is appropriate to briefly review some of its accomplishments, and the progress achieved during the past quadrennium. Governor Graves was elected in 1926 on a platform that pledged his best efforts to the conservation and development of the human resources of Alabama; emphasis was placed on the necessity of providing for the educational advancement and physical health of the people. as the foundation for a prosperous state. The carrying out of these policies has resulted in unprecedented progress during the past four years in education. public health and child welfare work. Another notable accomplishment of the administration now going out of office was the abolition of the convict lease system, and the reorganization of the convict system of the state which resulted therefrom; while during this four-year period roadbuilding has been carried on in Alabama on a bigger scale than ever before.

EDUCATION

The past four years has witnessed a great forward movement in education in Alabama, which probably should be rated as the outstanding accomplishment of the outgoing administration. It was during these four years that the practical application was given to the theory of equalization of educational opportunity—the theory which holds that a child born in one of the poorer agricultural sections of the state has as much right to an education at public expense as one living in the centers where the wealth of the state is largely concentrated. Prior to 1927 most of the school money which the counties received from the state was apportioned on a per capita basis—so much for each child of school age. This state fund was entirely inadequate to provide a reasonable school term; and while the richer counties were able to supplement it from local taxation, the poorer counties, with low values of taxable property, were unable to do so. The inequality existing between different section of the state was further promoted by the matter of racial distribution. Under the per capita system of distributing school funds, no distinction was made, or could be made, on account of race; a county received from the state just as much money for a colored child within its borders as for a white child. As a result, counties where the bulk of the population was colored were able to provide amply for the education of their comparatively few white children; while other counties with a dense white population could not provide for them anywhere near an adequate school system.

Governor Graves and the legislature of 1927 set out to correct this situation, not by taking away anything from the more fortunate counties, which on the contrary have shared in the general educational progress, but by giving especial aid to the poorer counties unable to help themselves. One of many new educational appropriations voted in 1927 was an equalization fund of $900,000 per annum, to be used exclusively for providing more nearly equal school terms over the state. The average school term for the entire state has been increased thirteen days during the past four years; while many schools which were in session only four or five months in 1926 were in sesison seven and eight months last year.

During the past year there were 32,583 more children enrolled in school than in 1926. The actual gain must be greater than that number since the present reports are acknowledged to be more accurate than those in 1926.

Children are attending school much more regularly now than they did four years ago. This is shown by the fact that there were 57,032 more pupils attending school daily last year than in 1926. This is an increase of nearly 14 per cent during the past four year.

When the aggregate days attended are considered we observe the greatest gain made in the amount of schooling which has been received by the boys and girls of the State. Last year the aggregate days attended was 13,787,753 greater than in 1926. This gain is the equivalent to a term of 135 days for 102,132 children. Expressed in another way it is equivalent to the attendance of 17,022 children during every day of a 135 day term for six years.

Teachers are now receiving a higher average salary than they did in 1926. The gain during the past four years is $106 and has been due largely to the increased length of term.

New textbook adoptions were made during the quadrennium, reducing the number of books required and resulting in a saving of millions of dollars to the parents of school children.

Educational progress has not been confined to the common schools, on the contrary, the entire educational system from top to bottom has been tremendously strengthened and improved; and the state colleges and normal schools have entered upon a new era of development as a result of the greatly increased appropriations which they received for new buildings and for operating expenses.

The extent to which educational appropriations have been increased during the past four years is graphically illustrated by the following table showing comparison of amounts made available for public education in Alabama during their respective quadrenniums by the 1919, 1923 and 1927 legislatures:

1919—$9,491,440 appropriated.

1923—$9,904,598 appropriated; $413,158 increase; 4.35 percentage increase.

1927—$32,180,758 appropriatde; $22,276,160 increase; 224.91 percentage increase.

The following shows total number of days attended by all the pupils enrolled in the public elementary and high schools of Alabama during six consecutive year:

1925—Day attended, 57,686,491.

1926—Days attended, 57,254,174; decreased, 432,317; percentage decrease, 0.75.

1927—Days attended, 61,814,896; increased, 4,560,722; percentage increase, 7.97.

1927-1928—Days attended, 68,828,558; increased, 7,013,662; percentage of increase, 11.35.

1928-1929—Days attended, 68,593,254; decreased, 235,304; percentage of decrease, 0.44.

1929-1930—Days attended, 71,041,927; increased, 2,448,673; percentage of increase, 3.57.

Schools For Deaf and Blind

A notable accomplishment of the outgoing administration was the manner in which it has provided for the state schools for the deaf and the blind, located at Talladega. At the beginning of the administration, appropriations totalling $300,000 were provided for construction and repairing of buildings and equipment at these institutions, which have as a result functioned on a scale and with an effectiveness far ahead of anything in previous years.

PUBLIC HEALTH

Alabama's progress in public health work may be summed up in the fact that the state today stands at the top of the list of all states in this field—a position attained during the past four years. Alabama has fifty-four counties with full-time county health units, engaged in prosecuting all phases of public health activties. The percentage of population enjoying the benefits of full-time county health service is 88.97 per cent of the total population of the state—a ration not equalled by any other state. The number of counties possessing county health units January 1, 1927, was thirty; twenty-four more have been organized during the Graves administration, leaving only thirteen unorganized. Progress in public health work during the past four years was made possible by the 1927 legislature; the appropriation for the central, administration of the state health department was increased from $150,000 in 1926 to $539,383 for 1930; while the appropriation for county work, which is matched by the counties, was increased from $55,000 to $130,000.

Figures for 1929 established several new records of low death rates. Typhoid fever causdd only 196 deaths for 1929 against 382 for 1926, or a decrease in the death rate of 15.1 for 1926 to 7.5 for 1929. There were no deaths from smallpox in 1929. It is the first year in 13 years that one or more deaths from smallpox was not reported. The death rate from tuberculosis was 85.7 per 100,000 population and was the lowest record since Alabama has had susceptible registration.

With the manufacture of diptheria toxoid for immunization against diptheria by the state laboratory begun in 1929, it became possible for counties to carry out immunizing campaigns against diptheria similar to those carried on against typhoid fevere. There was not time to secure results from immunization in 1929, but the figures for both cases and deaths would indicate a considerable decrease so far in 1930. In the next few years there should be a decrease in diptheria similar to that secured in typhoid.

CHILD WELFARE

The past quadrennium witnessed remarkable progress in child welfare work in Alabama, the outstanding feature being the practical completion of county child welfare organization. Four years ago, only fourteen Alabama counties were organized for child welfare work; fifty-two county child welfare units have been established since, leaving only one county unorganized. During the past four years a stronger child labor enforcement division has been built up, a better institution program has been undertaken; and there has been manifest improvement in the service offered by the children's aid division in providing foster home care for children received. Alabama's progress in child welfare work has attracted favorable comment from nationally known experts. The legislature of 1927 increased the appropriation to the child welfare department from $50,000 per annum to $100,000 for a two-year period, and $125,000 annually thereafter.

CONFEDERATE PENSIONS

Pensions to Confederate veterans were doubled by the 1927 legislature, the increase being from $75 to $150 per quarter. Large increases were also provided in pension payments, to widows of veterans. The increase in Confederate pensions hit the general fund of the state during this administration for the huge sum of $3,730,056. this being the amount paid out in pensions over and above what was brought in by the one-mill soldiers tax. Much has been said recently about a deficit, but critics have failed to point out that the money has gone to relieve the necessities in extreme old age of the survivors of the armies of the Confederacy. Pensions payments will bear less heavily on the treasury in the next four years, for there are now less than half as many Confederate veterans in Alabama as there were four years ago.

AGRICULTURE & INDUSTRIES

Agricultural laws were strengthened by the 1927 legislature, and the State Department of Agriculture has functioned with increased effectiveness. Important new legislation included provision for the establishment of five agricultural experiment sub-stations on various soil types of the state, with a view to determining crop adaptability of various soils.

The last legislature also created the Alabama Industrial Development Board to promote and advertise the industrial opportunities of the state. A large number of new industries have located in Alabama during the period.

CONVICTS, LAW ENFORCEMENT

Abolition of the convict lease system and inauguration of a successful system of working convicts on the roads stands out as one of the major accomplishments of the Graves administration. Formerly, a large percentage of convicts were leased by the state to private business interests, and worked in coal mines and lumber camps. This system was very profitable to the state, but was denounoed on humanitarian grounds, as a relic of barbarism. Instances of brutal mistreatment of convicts were brought to light, and besides it was contended that the principle of leasing out human beings for profit was all wrong. Public sentiment demanded the abolition of the lease system, but there was hesitation on the part of those in power to face the loss to the state of the lease money and the task of finding other employment for convicts which would be turned back to the state with the lease business ended. Abolition of the lease system was an issue in Alabama for many years, and was repeatedly promised, le[illegible]ed and deferred, until finally the Graves administration took the responsibility and brought the discredited system to an end. As a result, the state found on its hands approximately 1,250 convicts removed from under lease. Convict problems were augmented by the taking over by the state of county convicts, and by the great increase in prison population, which will be commented on below.

The problem was partly met by placing convicts on the roads. Eighteen road camps are operated, with a daily average of 1,480 convicts employed during the period June 1, 1929, to September 30, 1930. And, despite gloomy predictions to the contrary, this convict road work showed a net profit during the above period of $120,179.01.

Further employment for convicts was found through an expansion of the existing prison system, and the establishment of Moffett State Prison near Atmore, built at a cost of $452,544.6[illegible], which includes cost of land, improvements, buildings and railroads. This prison, with an investment cost per capita of prisoners below that of any other of the state's penal institutions, is a model establishment, where scientific farming is profitably carried on in a big way.

In spite of the loss of the lease money, there was a net profit on the operation of all state penal institutions during the quadrennium of $1,091,479.43. This net profit was arrived at after charging off all depreciation on buildings, equipment and machinery.

The administration of Governor Graves has been characterized by vigorous law enforcement; the governor has been prompt and active in directing the suppression of lawlessness in all forms. He has appointed jury commisioners who believed in law enforcement, and has granted comparatively few paroles. As a result of better law enforcement and curtailment of paroles, there has been a great increase in prison population. During 1926-27 the convict department had a daily average of 3,094 state convicts and 115 county convicts, total 3,209; for 1929-30 the figures were 4,370 state and 664 county convicts, total 5,034, an increase of 1,825, or more than 50 per cent.

ROADBUILDING

The Graves administration has done practically as much roadbuilding as had been done by the state altogether prior to this administration; in fact, on the higher type roads, the figures show that much more has been accomplished during the past four years than had been done during all preceding years. The following tabulation shows the length of road and bridge contracts awarded from 1916 up to January 17, 1927:

Graded and drained, 370 miles.

Graded, drained, and surfaced with sand-clay and topsoil, 629 miles.

Graded, drained, and surfaced with gravel and chert, 1540 miles.

Graded, drained and surfaced with bituminous surface, 242 miles.

Graded, drained, and surfaced with cement concrete, 113 miles.

Total, 2894 miles.

Bridges over 20-foot clear span, 91,056 Lin. Ft.

The following tabulation shows the length of road and bridge contracts awarded from January 17, 1927 up to January 1st, 1931

Graded and drained, 650 miles

Graded, drained and surfaced with sand clay or top soil, 344 miles.

Graded, drained and surfaced with gravel or chert, 1072 miles.

Graded, drained, and surfaced with a bituminous surface, 170 miles.

Graded, drained, and surfaced with cement concrete, 451 miles.

Total, 2687 miles.

Bridges over 20-foot clear span, 102,960 Lin. Ft.

15 State owned toll bridges with approach fills, 15 miles.

The above figures do not include approximately 100 miles of paved roads the construction of which will probably be arranged for before the close of the Graves administration.

CONCLUSION

In the closing months of the Graves administration, certain critics have pointed out that more money has been spent during this administration than during any that went before it. It is obvious that millions of dollars worth of new school buildings, increased teachers salaries, doubling Confederate pensions, better public health, etc., could not be attained on the same expense which prevailed before such progress was made. In other words, if the state during the past quadrennium has spent $22,000,000 more for schools than was spent before—naturally this could not be done without spending $22,000,000 more, and of course this additional revenue had to be raised thru taxation. It should be noted that Governor Graves went into office pledged to increase ap[illegible] to increase taxation; he did [illegible] promise the impossible feat of increasing the one without the other. He [illegible] promise that there would be no increase in property taxes, and that needed new revenue would be obtained by "hitching the big mules" to the tax wagon, in other words by levying upon big business and corporate interests which it was claimed had hitherto escaped paying a fair share of the tax burden. The promise has been carried out to the letter. There has been no increase in property taxes in the past quadrennium; such increase as has occurred in property tax payments has been due solely to the natural rise in the value of property, the tax rate has remained unchanged, and in some of the poorer agricultural counties there has been an actual decline in property valuations and consequently tax payments. New revenue needed for schools, public health, etc., was provided through new tax levies on railroads, water power companies and other phases of big business, through an extension of tonnage and severance taxes on coal, iron and other minerals; and through a sales tax on cigars and cigarettes which has brought into the taxpaying class thousands who hitherto enjoyed the benefits of government without contributing anything to its support. Four years of progress in public activities have been supported without increasing the taxes of the farmer or home owner, and the distribution of taxation has been more nearly equalized than ever before in the history of the state.

FARMERS WILL PROFIT GROWING OWN SEEDS

"Money sent away each year to purchase farm seeds could be used profitably in farm operations at home, but aside from this. there are two other good reasons why every land owner should grow and save his own seed. First, they can be grown at little expense and second, the grower can tell whether they are free of disease," says B. P. Livingston, in charge of seed testing work of the Department of Agriculture and Industries. Montgomery.

"The purchase of large quantities of both major and minor crop seeds by growers each year, is tremendous. This outlay of money is not in keeping with the aims of our live-at-home program. Also there are but few crops grown in the state where high yield and high quality product can not be maintained by home production of seeds. Conditions are favorable in this state to improve crops by careful selection of the seed on the home farm."

Mr. Livingston declares that seed can be grown at home at little expense. The ripening and curing needs are not expensive. About the only attention necessary is to keep them in moderately dry storage and in tight containers.

Winter Dried Fruits and Tapioca Aid Housewives in Menu Making

MAKING a resolution to budget the household allowance more carefully and yet to give the family nourishing and tasty meals, wives and mothers are on the look out for new recipes. For high days and holidays come and go but the task of providing three meals daily goes on all year.

The winter dried fruits—figs, raisins, apricots, dates and prunes—can be made into a wealth of delicious desserts at small cost. They are Nature's own sweets packed with sugar for winter energy and should appear on the table often during the cold weather.

Here is a colorful Apricot Tapioca that tactful wives will serve after the Monday pot-luck meal. Even Junior will be willing to eat his carrots if he is rewarded by such a dessert.

APRICOT TAPIOCA

¾ pound dried apricots
3 cups water
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons quick cooking Tapioca
⅛ teaspoon salt

Wash apricots. Soak in 3 cups water 1 hour and cook until tender. Drain. To juice, add enough water to make 2 cups liquid. Add Tapioca and salt, and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until Tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add sugar. Cool. Force apricots through sieve. Fold pulp (about 1 cup) into Tapioca mixture. Chill and serve with whipped cream. Serves 6.

FROM NORWAY

The lowly boarding house prune has come into its own, magically transformed by modern cook-craft into a variety of delicious desserts. Here is one of them. And it is so simple to make that you can put it on your list of last minute desserts for busy days.

4 tablespoons quick cooking Tapioca
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon, or 1-inch stick cinnamon
2 cups unsweetened prune juice, or juice and water
4 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup cooked prunes, seeded and finely cut

JOHN T. JONES, DECEASED

On Thursday, January 8th, the beautiful spirit of John T. Jones, of Plantersville, Ala., made its flight into that Great Beyond.

Mr. Jones was a faithful member of Plantersville Baptist church. Plantersville has lost one of its best members in losing Mr. Jones. He was ever ready to work and was an efficient assistant Sunday School teacher. As a Christian, Mr. Jones lived it. As a husband the "faithful" fades into oblivion before the radiant light of his service. Every thought and deed was lived for that which was right and for his family. As a husband and father no service was too great for him to render, nor sacrifice too hard for him to endure.

As a friend he was every ready to do any deed of kindness which he could, but being a R. F. D. Carrier for more than twenty years he was unable to render personal service he would have liked to have done.

He was married to Miss Maud Vinzant and to this union there were four children two girls and two boys all of whom survive.

He leaves to mourn for him, a wife, his four children, one grandson, his aged father and mother, two brothers, a host of relatives and friends. May they catch the light of his unbroken trust and as they "cross the river" one by one join him at the pearly gates

Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Bro. A. H. Mahaffey. The following being pall bearers: Messrs Will Apperson, J. W. Friday, Charlie Levens, O. H. Barnes, Walter Herrod and Walter Stoudemire. The body was laid to rest in Plantersville Cemetery.

Loved ones, weep not for "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

A Friend.
Mrs. C. C. GAY.

BUSINESS DEPENDENT UPON AGRICULTURE

One of the best ways for business to prosper in Alabama is for agriculture to be placed on a paying basis, says F. W. Gist. state and federal statistician, who reports that agriculture furnishes to Alabama about 48 per cent of the wealth produced annually and upon which business depends very largely for its existence in most towns and cities in the state.

Mr. Gist gave figures showing that in Alabama in 1925 miners produced $60,000,000 in new wealth, the manufacturers $227,000,000 and the farmer $268,000,000 the latter being 48 per cent of the total. He also showed that in the United States in 1925, there was produced, by the three groups named, about 45 and a half billion dollars of new wealth. Of this the miner gave us 5 and a half, the manufacturer 26 and a half and the farmer 13 and a half, the latter constituting 28.5 per cent of the total.

Mr. Gist declares that only three groups of workers produce new wealth and if these three groups disappeared from the face of the earth "we would follow mighty soon." These three groups are the miner, the manufacturer, and the farmer. "All the rest of us are parasites, living [illegible] the wealth which these three groups produce," he said.

WATCH THE MEASLES "COLD"

By Dr. Christmas Seal

We are having a tremendous "measles year," more cases than in many previous seasons. This happens every few years after we have "grown" a fresh crop of unmeasled children. For many children, the trouble is over and most of them seem as well as ever, for if all goes well, and there are no complications, measles is not a fatal disease.

But watch the child who does not seems to be quite so well as before. Perhaps there is a watering of the eyes or a running ear. Don't fail to keep him under a doctor's care until well. Perhaps there is a cough that hangs on. If so, keep him in bed. Give him sun baths. Take all strain away from his life and give him the very best of food and rest and care. For when such "colds" are neglected the grim White Plague steps in, and the neglected child is his easy prey.

Timely News Notes

Canning of grapefruit increased from 400,000 cases in 1925-26 to 1,316,000 in the 1929-30 season.

The Federal Farm Board at Washington has advised cotton growers that the outlook is for prices during the next ten years averaging much lower than prices the last ten-year average.

With live hogs worth 8 1-2 cents a pound on the farm, a 225 pound hog will furnish sugar-cured ham at 17 cents a pound, bacon at 19 cents, and pork chops at 17 cents, says the University of Illinois.

Tobacco farming in Connecticut is becoming highly specialized and highly commercialized, said the College of Agriculture of that State. It is not uncommon for one of the large private growers to spend annually $10,000 for fertilizer and $15,000 for labor.

The inauguration of Governor B. M. Miller will be the first Alabama inauguration to be broadcast by radio. Both WAPI in Birmingham and WSFA in Montgomery will carry the exercises to the huge audience over Alabama, and other states. The announcers will be located on a balcony above the portico on which Governor Miller will stand to deliver his address and take the oath of office.

A leading magazine published in London, England, declares that agriculture is still the basic industry of Great Britain, although a million acres have gone out of cultivation and 100,000 agriculturists have left the farms since 1922. Prices for farm products have declined steadily and the editor of the magazine attributes much of this to lack of organization of farmers and unrestricted competition of foreign produce.

JESUS TEMPTED
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

While John was baptizing Jesus came into that wilderness from Nazareth, ready to enter upon His own public ministry. When John saw Him approaching he said in true prophecy: "Behold, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." Jesus drew near and asked to be baptized but John, knowing Him as the sinless one at first refused. But Jesus insisted and thus took our law place. In the act of baptism there was a manifestation of the Trinity of God. Jesus Christ stood in the Jordan, the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove descended upon Him, and the voice of the Father said, "This is my beloved Son."

More than one thing can be accomplished by the same act. Forthwith from the baptism Jesus was tempted by the devil for forty days in the wilderness of the Jordan valley.

During those forty days Jesus was subjected to every type of temptation that comes to mankind in all the varying changes of life. Meanwhile Jesus at nothing as He was so absorbed in His fight for righteousness. Then Satan left Him for a season that He might realize His personal physical condition. In that hour of extreme physical weakness and spiritual reaction after the strain of the forty days, the three major temptations are presented. In these the divinity of Jesus is acknowledged but effort is made to get the exercise of those powers under satanic sway. Jesus would not make bread to stop his own hunger, cast Himself down from the Temple that the people might applaud, or accept an immediate control of men at the cost of worshipping Satan. Rather the arch enemy of man was unmasked as Jesus commanded "Get thee behind me, Satan."

Charging that her husband kept a card index of his fifty girl friends, classifying them as "cute," "drinkers," and "petters." Mrs. Beatrice Physter, of Chicago has field suit for a divorce.

"I'm in Partnership with 58,000 Employes and 45,000 Shareholders"

● "There are 58,000 employes receiving just wages keeping the wheels of Swift & Company going. Many of these employes are my neighbors. They live in this town, work here, build their homes. They patronize local merchants, pay taxes like you and me. Their interests are those of this community.

"I'm one of the 200,000 producers who deliver butterfat, eggs and poultry to a Swift & Company produce plant and receive cash for my products. There are more than 80 of these plants. And I'm also one of the 45,000 shareholders of this concern, who receive a return on their investment.

"It makes a big family, doesn't it? But we are all proud to belong to it and to do our part. It's a mighty fine thing to have contact with an organization which can thrive on an average margin of less than 2 cents on every dollar of its total sales, and yet—everyone receives a fair return for what he does.

"The 58,000 employes receive just wages; the 45,000 shareholders receive a return on their investments. The 200,000 producers get spot cash for their supplies and don't have to fear local gluts or shortages, for Swift's nation-wide distribution, through 600 car routes and 400 branch houses, assures them of an ever ready market.

My Best Girl

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

THIRD INSTALLMENT

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter-carrier, is the domestic drudge of the humble home where her mother does little except bemoan the fact that she has "seen better days" and her sister, Liz' who works in a beauty shop, lies abed late. Maggie has to get the family breakfast before she starts out to her job in the Five-and-Ten-Cent Store.

There's a new boy at the Five-and-Ten, Joe Grant. He tells Maggie that he has been assigned to work as her helper in the stock room. He seems rather dumb, but Maggie helps him through his first day at the store and shares her lunch with him in a cubbyhole of a place that belongs to a mattress factory next door to the Five-and-Ten.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Oh, sure I do! I read it in a paper," she said, beginning on her own milk, and talking through, or around, the straws. "You have to eat iron and starch and—and fosters," she said, somewhat uncertain of the last word.

"Iron and starch and—what?" he asked, fishing for the extraordinary word. But she would not be baited.

"All sorts of things," she said evasively. "These sandwiches are tuna fish and egg—they're always the ones that are left. We never get the chicken or ham ones, but we don't care, do we " she ended a little anxiously.

"I don't!" Joe said ravenous.

"How'd you happen to find this place?" he asked, approving of it.

"I was after some ideels in our basement," she said. "An' I seen this winder. Ain't it nice in here?"

"You were after some what?" he interrupted.

"Some ideels. Some of them little—well, sorter prayers they have all coloured up, on cards," Maggie explained. "Like 'No man is useless while he has a friend,' and 'To earn a little, to spend a little less," and 'There's so much good in the worst of us.'" she went on But at such lightning speed that Joe could not make a beginning or and end to what she said. He burst out laughing.

"You laugh like you were much older than you are," said Maggie, struck with some sudden suspicion.

"I'm almost twenty," Joe said. "Why—how old did you think I was?"

I thought you was a kid," Maggie said frankly. "That's," she ended innocently, "that's why I sorter took an interest in you."

"How old are you?" Joe countered. "Are you thirteen

Thirteen!" she echoed, affronted. I've been workin' four years. I'll be eighteen my next birthday. I was seventeen last Valentine's Day!"

And suddenly both were embarrassed and they stopped talking in some confusion of spirit

"But when I first went to work Maggie resumed, "I was awful little I opened a door and checked umbrellas You'd wonder they let me in at all Three dollars a week they paid me."

"Pretty tough!" Joe commented sympathetically

"Oh, I've had my share!" she responded. "We ought to have something green with this," said Maggie again, extending toward him a fresh supply of the broken biscuits

"Where'd you get all this diet stuff?" Joe asked, diverted

"Oh," she flashed carelessly, "the evenin' papers has it, always, a health column."

"But you don't believe all you see in the papers!" Joe teased

"I do some things," Maggie countered uncertainly, after a moments thought.

"And do you do all the things the papers say to do?" Joe asked.

"I'm doing one now," she answered moving only her lips. "I'm relaxin' Relax ten minutes after meals, if you are thin. Stand if you're fat. Exercises every mornin'—"

"We have twelve minutes," Joe said, glancing at his wrist. "And do you believe all the ideal cards, too?" he pursued.

"How do you mean?" she asked.

"Well, don't they all have rules for life on them?" Joe suggested. "'Lest we forget,' and 'I am the captain of my soul,' and all that?"

"Was you readin' them to-day?" she asked, surprised.

"No. But I know that kind of stuff!"

"'Let us then be up an' doin',' " Maggie was murmuring, as if she heard the words for the first time. "'Laugh, an' the world laughs with you.'"

"Oh, gosh, it makes me sick at my stomach!" Joe said faintly, between a laugh and a groan.

Maggie laughed, puzzled but sympathetic.

"It sorter doesn't mean anything," she conceded. "But the 'Si sezzes' are funny," she submitted doubtfully.

"The whats?"

"The 'Si sezzes'—we call them that," she elucidated. "They all begin, 'Si sez'."

"Bunk!" Joe commented disgusted-

"Joe," she began after a moment, "is this your first job?"

"What makes you think it isn't?" he parried

She was staring at him, faintly suspicious.

"Becauz—becauz fellers of nineteen don't usually begin on what you're doin' stockroom work," said Maggie. "'Specially when they talk like you do."

"I worked on a farm awhile," Joe said. "And I traveled with a circus and worked in a bicycle shop," he added imaginatively.

Maggie was satisfied. She reverted to a more interesting topic.

"My mother says that all that newspaper stuff about budgets and systems and all that is the bunk," she offered. "My sister has to keep her hands white becauz she demonstrates a beauty cream, and my mother don't get round much. But my mother don't like Liz to use make-up—and she won't let me cut my hair—she says it ain't ladylike for girls to bob their hair."

"Father living?" Joe asked.

She hesitated

"My father's a—a wonderful man. Yes, he's living."

"What's his profess—what's he do?" Joe asked.

"He—he's a travelin' man." Somehow she wanted Joe to admire Pop. "And my mother's—fleshy," said Maggie delicately.

"Well, I'll tell you one thing," said Joe, as they began to gather up the signs of their feast and prepare to return upstairs to the store, "I'll tell you one thing—I wouldn't like your sister."

"Oh, Joe, why not!"

"I don't know. I just know that. And here's another thing, that budget and system and efficiency talk is all true."

Maggie's beautiful blue eyes widened almost as if in pain.

"Oh, Joe, I don't believe it!" she said again.

He was cross.

"All right, don't believe it. But what do you think the newspapers print it for?"

"You mean so much for groceries and amusements and clothes and dentists?" she demanded, arresting him with a small clutching hand on his arm.

"Certainly!"

She seemed to droop.

"My mother'd never do it, though! She hates managing."

"Well, because your mother wouldn't do it, Maggie," he said unpleasantly, doesn't make it less true, does it?"

"No," she said sadly, briefly. And Joe suddenly felt ashamed of himself.

He gave her a steadying hand as they scrambled back through the two windows, and over the bales and boxes in their own basement, just in time to hear the gong emit its snarp double ring. But once again in the roar and rush of the store upstairs, he noted that she did not quite restore him to the familiar footing upon which he had been before.

At ten o'clock two old women, armed with pails and mops, made their appearance far at the back of the store, and purchasers began to take on a slightly apologetic note.

Then, suddenly a gong struck, and a hundred saleswomen were jamming thru the back passage, past the enormous service elevator into the wet street. Joe, stooping toward a heap of rubbish that was advancing steadily ahead of a charwoman's wide broom, picked something up and cut through the crowd to follow the sodden little coated figure that was Maggie Johnson.

"Here," he said, handing her a bent card. "I just found this. It was thrown out. Since you believe everything the newspapers tell you, how's this?"

"'The way to begin livin' the ideel life is—to begin,'" she read slowly And she looked up blankly. "Begin what?" she asked. "That's all there is. It don't finish it."

"It's all bunk," he said, trying to laugh.

"Well, I don't know, Joe!" she answered, with a flash of animation crossing her pale, dirty little face. "What you said to-night made me kinder wonder. I've been doing all these things about eatin', and exercise, and washin'," she said eagerly, "but I guess this thinkin' is just as important. I've been handlin' them ideels, and crawlin' over them, and hearin' about them for three years, an' today's the first time I ever really looked at one! I guess you're tired, Joe," she added concernedly, as they walked toward the corner together. "Next week won't be so hard. An' I guess it felt pretty good to get that pay envelope today, didn't it?" she asked encouragingly.

"Sure, it did," Joe answered briefly.

"Do you go up?" the girl asked. "I live on Goat Hill over there—my father waits for me at the corner, Saturday nights!"

"I live down the island," Joe said.

"The ideal life—oh, my God!" he said, thinking of the hard job she had left, of the sort of home to which she was probably going. "You've got a fine chance to lead the ideal life, Maggie Johnson!" Joe said with a bitter laugh

He turned abruptly and walked a deserted block westward, glancing behind him to be sure he had escaped the home-going tide from the Mack. And in the second block, he stopped short at a handsome roadster, parked before a row of unpretentious homes.

Joe got into it, fished a key from his pocket, and swept from the street. The engine purred, the big car moved smoothly away from the city, passed the parks and the factory district and the scattered lights of the humbler suburbs, and so came to the splendid trees and the great walls and gates of Elmingdale, home of the richest and most fashionable men and women of that particular part of the world.

In between certain magnificent posts of stone and brick went Joe and his car, and to the side door of one of the most imposing of all the mansions there. An elderly butler, admitting without question the dirty and weary stock boy of the Mack, ventured so far as to lay an eager, welcoming hand on his arm.

"Mr. Joseph—sir! I'm glad to see you back safely, sir. What with—he coughed delicately—"what with the little unpleasantness yesterday morning, sir, and your—your very emphatic remarks to me, sir, on the subject of your parents' — ahem! — attitude, and then your not returning last night or today, either for luncheon or dinner——"

"I'm all right, Allen, and you were a brick to be on the job to let me in I'm late because I got a job"

"You mean you really ~~are~~ working, Mr Joe?"

"I mean I really am."

"You're not going back to college, sir?"

"Not on your life!"

"Why, but look here, sir," pleaded the older man, distressed, "your father never meant a word he said yesterday morning, nor your mother, either."

"Allen," Joe interrupted, slipping his arms into the dressing gown the man held ready behind him, "can you keep a secret."

"Anything you told me in confidence, sir——" he began reluctantly.

"Well, then listen. I've got a job in the Mack Merrill Department Stores, the Eighth Street one."

"A job in the Mack Merrill Stores, sir?" The butler was actually pale. "In the office, sir"

"In the office nothing! In the shop. Carting wall papers and ink and cleaning brushes and earrings around the place. I'm going to show my father that he can't stand me up in a corner and [illegible] He can't call me a thief and a liar——"

"Mr. Joseph, sir, he never called you that—I didn't hear that," the horrified old butler interrupted.

"Hear him! Everybody in the neighborhood heard him! No, sir, he doesn't get away with it," said Joe. "Now, you run along, Allen, and keep mum, and tell 'em I'm all right and I'm home!"

The message was unobtrusively carried to a handsome middle-aged man who was playing bridge with three other men in the library. It penetrated into a luxurious dressing room, where a beautiful and aristocratic woman was making up her face between a dinner dance and a late ball.

This woman merely raised her eyebrows at the news.

And in a little while she mounted the flight of wide, palm-decorated stairs that lay between her suite and his, and appeared expectantly, in his doorway

Emphasizing the importance of home gardens in relieving the suffering in the drouth stricken areas of Alabama, Seth P. report of her work during 1930.

Practically every beat in the county had representatives present who told of the conditions in their community. Conditions in many localities were stated to be worse than in others, and in many cases were said to be in dire need of relief. Many children were reported as being out of school on account of a lack of clothes and books. The aim of this meeting was to inform the public of the needs as found in the county and also something of the nature of the work of the Welfare Department during the past year. Volunters were also asked to assist in the drive during this week and next week. To these acting as chairmen in their communities, material was given to work with. They were also asked to secure others helpers they might like to have on their committee to assist them in soliciting.

County Agent Stapp stated at the meeting that on Wednesdays will be chicken shipping days and that anyone wishing to give hens may bring or send them to his office and they will be given the best market prices for them and in doing this, the people can be helping the less fortunate in the county.

As the chairmen in the various communities send in their reports on the chest fund drive, their lists with the subscribers names will be published in the county papers.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

The wife of Mr. Aaron Dennis gave her husband last Friday a beautiful and sumptious birthday dinner that was a happy occasion for all those present.

She had as guests Mr. Jasper Dennis, father of Aaron, and his wife, Mr. T. E. Kelley, wife and daughter, Miss Delilah, parents and sister of the hostess. The dining room was most tastefully decorated and the table was beautiful with silver and glassware. The repast was all an epicure could ask for, the crowning piece being a lovely pyramidal cake, artistically covered with snow white icing and beautifully decorated with 27 fancy little candles that told the tale. Hoping for many happy returns.

Chilton County Abstract Co.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to se° what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

Farmers Cautioned About Truck Crops

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 12—Caution in the production of truck crops by southern farmers is advised by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and economists of 11 state colleges of agriculture the Alabama Polytechnic Institute of Auburn being included. Danger of over-expansion is foreseen.

"Although in recent years," said the statement, "the market for vegetables and miscellaneous perishables has been expanded to the full twelve months, the supply of these commodities appears to have kept steadily ahead of the consumer demand. During a period of steadily mounting acreage, the growers have gradually encountered a falling off in average returns per acre.

"This has necessitated close watch over production costs. particularly in the last five or six years. The grower of commercial truck crops in 1931 must expect to find a continuance of this upward trend in acreage with its attendant lowering of returns per acre.

"It therefore becomes increasingly necessary that he adopt every means of reducing unit costs of production and marketing."

This statement from Washington was part of a general statement on the present situation and outlook for southern agriculture in 1931.

MT. PLEASANT WINS OVER COLLINS CHAPEL JR. HIGH

The Mt. Pleasant junior high basket ball team won a rather one-sided victory from the Collins Chapel boys last Friday, 26 to 10 being the final count.

The Chapel boys played hard and earnestly, but their passwork and defensive play was not strong enough to cope with the Mt. Pleasant boys.

Both teams committed several fouls each, but fortunately no player was eliminated.

Curtis Traywick was high-point man for Mt. Pleasant, netting the ball for 17 points. Littlejohn, the husky center for the winners was successful in getting most of the tip-offs. He looped the ball twice for 4 points. Burnett, Parker, and Cecil Traywick worked great together in forming the defense. Collins Chapel scored two points in the first half.

R. Bean, H. Bean, C. Smith and Davis were the scorers for the Chapel team.

Mt. Pleasant plays Stanton Junior High next Friday, January 16th, on the Mt. Pleasant court. This game promises to be a thriller, for both teams are equal in size and this being their first game against each other, they are anxious to get credit for the first victory. Everyone is invited to see it.

SUPT. EDUCATION WRITES TO REPRESENTATIVE PITTS ON SCHOOL APPROPRIATIONS

Below the News publishes a letter from B. Lawrence to Percy M. Pitts, in regard to the appropriations for educational purposes in the state. The letter is self explanatory, and is as follows:

January 10, 1931.

Hon. Percy M. Pitts,
Clanton, Alabama,

Dear Sir:

Complying with a promise made to you in a conversation yesterday, I am writing to give you the following figures about the appropriations for educational purposes as found in House Bill 318 of the Legislature of 1927. The figures given show the enrollment in the different institutions of higher learning as found on page 214 of the annual report of 1929 and for rural education on page 188 of the same report.

The enrollment referred to above is for the year 1929 and reveals the following facts:

Florence had an enrollment of 2,677 and received a total appropriation for the quadrennium just closing of increased funds of $440,000 which gives a per capita of $164.36.

Jacksonville had enrolled 2,401 students with an appropriation of $440,000 which gives a per capita for the quadrennium just closing of $183.25.

Livingston had an enrollment of 1,078 with a total appropriation of $440,000 and a per capita of $408.16.

Troy had 2,072 with an appropriation of $540,000 and a per capita of $260.61.

Alabama College had en enrollment of 2,083 with a total appropriation of $1,383,495.09 and a per capita of $664.08.

The University had an enrollment of 8,055 with an appropriation of $2,138,923.12 and a per capita of $265.53.

The enrollment shown above is for all extension students or any other who had any sort of claim as being a student of the institution. The appropriations as stated above are the total appropriations for the quadrennium just closing and constitute extra monies over and above any they had previous to 1927.

Common schools, including high schools and cities, had enrolled 638,358 with an appropriation of $9,231,200 which gives them a per capita for the quadrennium of $14.46.

I am sure the above figures are sufficient to convince anyone that the common schools have not been taken care of on a basis with the higher institutions of learning. I wish it understood that I have no ill will toward the higher institutions of learning. I am happy that the State of Alabama saw fit to put into operation such a splendid system, but I am humiliated by the figures above and feel that it is only just and fair that the common schools be provided for in a better way.

I appreciate your interest in the common schools and asure you that I will appreciate, on behalf of the children of this great state of ours, anything you may be able to do, not for me, but for the children of the state in the Legislature which is about to convene.

Respectfully yours,
B. LAWRENCE.
County Supt. Education.

DENNIS URGES FARMERS TO ATTEND MEETING TUESDAY

Below is a letter from J. N. Dennis, well known and successful farmer of Chilton County, who is urging all farmers to attend the meeting in Clanton next Tuesday:

This is to appeal to all farmers that are not satisfied with the results received this year to attend the meeting to be held at the courthouse on Tuesday, January 20th, 1931.

I hope that every farmer and business man that possibly can will attend this meeting and help suggest better plans for the year 1931 than we have usd in years gone by.

We all realize that we need better planning and many changes in our farming methods in order to meet present low prices and lack of demand for cotton, our present money crop.

If you need suggestions, come; if you have worthwhile suggestions you are requested to come and let's all work together for better conditions in our county.

J. N. DENNIS.

TO MY GOOD FRIENDS

Of all the great surprises I have ever had in my life. here is one that beats them all. The radio that my Good Friends gave me last week. Something that I will never forget if I live a thousand years. And so I take this way of thanking all my Good and Thoughtful Friends for such a wonderful gift, so appreciable that even words in the dictionary can not express how much I have and will enjoy it. I would like to thank each one who helped contribute individually, but the doctor's orders keep me home so I would be glad for everyone to come out and enjoy the radio with me. And as I tune in I will think of each one of you Good Friends and what your thoughtfulness has brought and meant to me. I especially want to thank Mr. Edward Howard who has taken so much of his valuable time installing and seeing that the machine was in perfect shape. He is certainly a real radio expert.

The cost is Small Wherever You call

Talking to out-of-town relatives or friends is the most pleasing and satisfactory means of communication. Telephoning is just like being there in person and the cost is surprisingly small. When using Day Station-to-Station service you can talk a distance of one hundred miles for approximately sixty cents and by using the same service after 8:30 at night you can talk that far for as little as thirty-five cents. The cost of talking greater distances is correspondingly small.

People everywhere are daily experiencing enjoyable chats with relatives and friends in other cities. You, too, can afford such pleasures. Remember "the cost is small wherever you call."

SCHOOL FEES ARE LEGAL SAYS SUPREME COURT

Supreme Court Overrules McCall, Who Said Charge Was Unconstitutional

Montgomtry, Ala., Jan. 16—Requirement and collection by County and City Boards of Education in Alabama, of a matriculation fee and incidental fees to be paid for each semester by pupils in accredited high schools, is not violative of the Constitution of the State, the Alabama Supreme Court held in a decision announced yesterday, in the test case of T. W. Vincent vs. the County Board of Education, appealed from the Circuit Court of Talladega County. Validity of sections 467 and 182 of the School Code, which were under attack, was upheld.

The decision overrules opinion by the Attorney General's office handed down some time ago, making an opposite ruling. This opinion caused considerable anxiety in educational circles throughout the State, as the fees in the controversy, form a substantial part of public education funds available in all counties during each school year, and it was feared the shrinkage in finances resulting from elimination of this source of additional income, would result in some counties, in materially shortening school terms.

The test suit which was finally decided yesterday was the outgrowth of the opinion referred to, as educators generally, wanted the question determined by the State's highest tribunal as soon as possible. It is understood that the Alabama Educational Association had postponed recommendation as to needed general educational appropriations, until the question raised as to the fees had been definitely settled.

The test case represents action brought by the Talladega County Board of Education against T. W. Vincent, to collect from him $8, alleged to be due as incidental and matriculation fees for the attendance of his two minor children at the high school in Lincoln, the board of trustees of the school and the County Board of Education having determined upon and fixed these fees, amounting to $4 in each instance. Vinson declined to make payment, on the ground that no such charges of fees could be made in the public schools of Alabama, and that those sections of the School Code providing for the fees, was unconstitutional, maintaining that the Constitution requires that public schools shall be free schools. Decision went against him in the trial court, however, where judgment was rendered in favor of the Board of Education for the $8 sought to be recovered. Vincent then appealed. Yesterday the high court affirmed the lower court's action.

In the opinion of the Supreme Court, which was written by Justice A. D. Sayre, the bringing into question on appeal, of the constitutionality of Section 467 of the Alabama School Code, which is quoted as follows: "Matriculation fees may be charged. A matriculation fee may be collected for each semester from all pupils in accredited high schools, including county high schools, the amount of such fee to be determined by the county board of education or the city board of education as the case may be, and the proceeds of such fee shall be expended under the direction of the county board of education or the city board of education as the case may be. A reasonable fee for library, laboratory and shop work may be required, the amount of such fee to be determined by the county board of education or the city board of education as the case may be."

EX-RESIDENTS OF CHILTON FORM ORGANIZATION

Chiltonians Now Residing In Birmingham Will Have Regular Meetings

Last Friday night marked the beginning of what will no doubt prove to be a growing organization, when former residents of Chilton County, now residing in Birmingham met for the purpose of organizing what is to be called the Chilton County Association.

The first meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Mabel Jones West, 219 South Hawkins Street, West End, Birmingham, last Friday night and approximately sixty persons were there to take part in this social get-together for all former residents of this county now in the Birmingham district.

Officers of the association were elected including J. Leonard Harris, President; William J. Mims, vice-president; G. H. Jones, sercetary-treasurer; Sergt. Kicker, membership chairman; Mrs. Mabel Jones West, chairman of program committee, and the Rev. H. G. Williams, Chaplain. The new officers will meet in the very near future to make plans for more meetings for the entir association. One of the features of the recent meeting was a musical program by Asa Collins, Forerst Wood, William J. Mims and Leonard Harris.

It was stated that it will be advised when and where the next meeting of the organization will be held and those who now reside in this county are extended a cordial invitation to attend these meetings, where almost all former Chiltonians in the Birmingham district will be present. Programs will be arranged and a pleasant time assured everyone. Anyone desiring further information in regard to this are requested to get in touch with Mrs. Mabel Jones West, at the address given above, or at the headquarters of the Alabama Woman's Democratic Club, at the Tutwiler Hotel. It is expected that the membership in this organization will grow as fast as those form Chilton residents in Birmingham learn of its existence.

EDUCATORS HOPE TO DROP SCHOOL FEE EVENTUALLY

Dr. A. F. Harman, state superintendent of education stated yesterday following receipt of the opinion stated that it had been conservatively estimated that $750,000 annually is derivable from incidental and matriculation fees for public school purposes and failure to collect this amount this year would have seriously curtailed the public school program. The abolition of fees, however, is a goal earnestly sought by the educators of the state, he stated.

"The decision of the court leaves no doubt whatever as to the authority of boards of education to levy and collect both incidental and matriculation fees," he said. "It is clearly my duty as State Superintendent of Education to inform and instruct school authorities accordingly. This I will do immediately.

"Although the court has, by its decision authorized the levying and collecting of such fees, I adhere no less strongly to the conviction expressed immediately following the announcement of the attorney general's opinion, namely, that his opinion was in full conformity with sound Democratic administration of public education. I will, therefore, call the situation with reference to these fees to the attention of the incoming Governor and to the legislature of the state with the earnest recommendation that every possible effort be made to remove the necessity for collecting fees of any kind in the public schools.

It is needless to say also, that in view of the present economic situation I will advise school authorities to exercise their legal powers in the matter with discretion, fairness and moderation.

BLACK ANSWERS HEFLIN'S CRY OF ELECTION FRAUD

Alabama's Junior Sen. Comes To The Defense of His State's Honesty

Senator J. Thomas Heflin charged on the floor of the Senate last Thursday, in Washington, that the election in Alabama last November was stolen from him. He was immediately answered by Senator Hugo Black, who at that time informed the Senate that the election was fairly conducted and the returns honest.

This is reported as to be the first exchange of words between these two Alabama Senators in public, and came at the close of an afternoon during which much time had been occupied by Senator Heflin in denouncing John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Senator Hugo Black campaigned throughout Alabama in the recent campaign, for the regular Democratic ticket, urging party regularity and pleading against the Independent-Republican coalition, but is said not to have mentioned Senator Heflin's name while on the stump, and last Thursday in the Clash between him and Heflin he did not mince words in defending the honesty of Alabama in the election. Senator Black defended the election as being fair and said the State will welcome, and invites investigation.

After denouncing Tammany and Raskob, Heflin told the Senate that he was elected by a 100,000 majority, "but they stole the election from me."

RECORD CROWD IN CLANTON FOR FARMERS MEETING

What is said to have been a record-breaking crowd came to Clanton Tuesday to attend the farmers meeting at the courthouse. Due to the size of the crowd it was found necessary to hold two separate meetings, in order that all those coming here to attend the meeting would be given an opportunity to hear the splendid talks made, and an outline of the safe farming program for 1931.

Among the out-of-town speakers at this meeting were Emmett Sizemore, district county agent, from Auburn and F. W. Burns, livestock specialist. These men clearly stated suggestions and recommendations to the vast crowd of farmers and their wives, of a safe farming program in the future, and comments coming from responsiblie farmers of this county, following this meeting, indicated that they felt much relieved over the farm problems that might be facing them at present, and that without a doubt, will plan a definite program for this year on their farms.

The suggestions and recommendations made at the meeting Tuesday will be mailed to every boxholder in the county right away, it was learned from the office of the county agent, following the meeting.

PRODUCTION OF ALA. COAL IS GIVEN IN REPORT

Report Shows Shortage During Past Few Years Of Coal Consumption

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 21—Alabama's coal production during 1930 will approximate 14,600,000 tons according to preliminary surveys released this week by the Alabama Mining Institute, representing all the coal producers of the State.

The estimated 1930 tonnage is 3,900,000 tons below that of 1929 and 6,900,000 below the peak year of 1926 when the tonnage mined in Alabama reached 21,500,000 tons.

Reduction in the coal tonnage during 1930 under 1926 has brought a loss to the state in the payrolls of the coal industry which are spent by miners for farm products, clothing and the like of about $14,500,000. It is pointed out in the preliminary survey that during most of 1930 mines throughout the coal producing sections have been operating only one to three days a week.

In addition to the decrease in payrolls released by the coal industry there has been a further substantial decline in funds expended by the industry for operating mine supplies and for materials required for improvement purposes.

Car loadings of the coal industry in 1930 declined 25 per cent over normal years, reaching only 199,000 cars as compared with 265,000 cars a normal year.

It is estimated that the loss in revenues to Alaabma railroads over a normal year from the shrinkage in coal tonnage during 1930 has aggregated over $4,500,000.

In face of the decline in tonnage, accident prevention work has been increased with the result that there were fewer accidents in Alabama mines last year than in many years preceding.

THRIFT SHOWS IN INAUGURATION OF GOV. MILLER

Fortieth Executive Enters On Greatest Chapter Of His Varied Life Story

The usual long and magnificent parade that is connected with inaugurations of executives was set aside, and pomp and splendor were sans at the inauguration of Benjamin M. Miller as Governor of the State of Alabama last Monday, showing his desire to carry out his victorious campaign promise of economy at the beginning.

Although Gov. Miller preferred this simple way of going through these ceremonies, a holiday-loving populace would not be denied such an event without color, and from early morn Dexter Avenue in Montgomery, the broad thoroughfare, was crowded with pilgrims, and as the two cars bearing the incoming governor and the retiring governor and their military aides, the crowd managed to break through the line of policemen and Boy Scouts, leaving only a narrow path for the automobiles to make their way to the capitol

The car bearing the retiring executive, Bibb Graves, and the new executive, B. M. Miller, was driven by John (Hurry) Cain, football hero of the University of Alabama. Governor Miller continuously lifted his hat to the cheering throng.

Judge Miller became Gov. Miller standing on the historic spot of the portico of the capitol where Jefferson Davis took the oath of office as president of the Southern Confederacy. The same Bible that was used in 1853, and by Alabama governors since then was also used in administering the oath of office to Gov. Miller by Chief Justice John C. Anderson.

There weer three former governors present to witness this ceremony. They were Charles P. Henderson, Thomas E. Kilby, and W. W. Brandon. Following the inaugural ceremonies, the new governor was escorted to the Whitley Hotel in Montgomery where he was guest of honor at a luncheon given by the original "Miller for Governor Club." The new executive of Alabama is now 66 years old. At the death of his father while Gov. Miller was quite young, he entered a country print shop to help support his family, and later became a clerk in a general store.

Inaugurated with Governor Miller was Lieut--Gov. Hugh D. Merrill of Anniston succeeding W. C. Davis of Jasper.

Other officials elected in the same voting and who took office Monday include Justices A. D. Sayre and Virgil Bouldin, reelected to the Supreme Court; Attorney General Thomas E. Knight, Jr.; Secretary of State, Pete B. Jarman, Jr., State Treasurer S. H. Blan; State Auditor John Brandon, State Superintendent of Education A. F. Harman, Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries Seth P. Storrs, Associate Commissioners Frank P. Morgan and Fitzhugh Lee, of the Alabama Public Service Commission, reelected, and Commissioner of Game and Fisheries I. T. Quinn, reelected.

Gov. Miller was waiting the twelfth hour before announcing any of his appointments, which include several important positions, such as adjutant-general and membership on the State Highway and Dock Commissions.

Gov. Graves said he would leave Tuesday for Baldwin County for an indefinite period of resting, hunting and fishing, after which he would go to Florida for a while.

Lieut-Gov. Davis will resume the practice of law at Jasper. Attorney General McCall will become an assistant in the attorney general's office.

Although the Legislature is in temporary recess until noon Tuesday, practically every member of the two houses was on hand to attend the inaugural.

Reports Monday were that Gov.-Elect Miller may not deliver his message to the Legislature for several days, preferring to defer his final conclusions and recommendations until he has completely assumed the reigns of governnment.

In such an event, legislators will have to content themselves with the declarations of the inaugural address as a guide to immediate administrative legislation.

Independent Grocers' Alliance

THE BEST TEMPERATURE

By Dr. Christmas Seal

"You should keep your living room at 68 to 70 degrees if you would be well" says the Alabama Tuberculosis Association. This is worth serious thought coming from such a source, because we know that the Association does much for health education. They wish to keep the tuberculosis rate down and believe it will stay down better if we do not have so many coughs and colds. Sixty-eight degrees is ordinary room temperature, or 70 degrees when sitting quietly at rest.

Dr. Christmas Seal reminds you that to enjoy a moderate temperature the air of your room should have proper moisture. In dry heat the arid atmosphere is stealing moisture from your body and this may give a chilling sensation. One way to get the air moist is to keep a window open sufficiently to allow outdoor air to circulate freely through the room.

FARMERS OF STATE POOL 178,999 BALES

For cooperative marketing Alabama farmers have pooled with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association twice as many bales as they pooled at this time a year ago, and more than they have pooled in any previous year.

Figures released Tuesday by Allen Northington, secretary-manager of the association, show that poolings to date this year total 178,999 bales. This compares with 89,608 bales at this time in 1930. He expects delivery to pass 200,000 bales before the end of the season. Poolings for the 1929-30 season totaled 161,551 bales.

Alabama stands fourth in the amount of cotton pooled, being exceeded by Texas with 597,856 bales, Georgia with 225,430 bales, and Oklahoma with 209,699 bales. North Carolina is in fifth place with 169,667 bales.

Cotton pooled in the South is being sold through the American Cotton Cooperative Association, set up in 1929 with the help of the Federal Farm Board. Deliveries to this association from all the state associations to date total 1,975,445 bales.

This is more than twice as much cotton as was pooled in the South last season.

MAIN STREET LOOKS AT BROADWAY

BY ERNEST CAMP JR.

New York.—A Farewell to Broadway:

Goody-by, you gaudy circus
Of splendor, lies, and lights—
A merry mask for heartbreak—
Of gin and jazz and nights . . .
Farewell, you Painted Lady,
You and your hurrying pack.
I'll think of you occasionally—
And wish that I were back!

If Only—

George Bell (that wasn't his name) had been arrested on a criminal charge. After several months at liberty on bail, the grand jury heard the case. Bell went home to await their decision.

That was on Friday.

He waited—an eternity of mental agony—thru a sleepless Friday night. Through a long, long Saturday. And the maddening, slow hours of Saturday night. When Sunday dawned he told himself he could stand the ordeal no longer. He shot himself. That night, in a hospital, he died.

Meanwhile, down at the postoffice, a letter waited for him. It was just a brief note, signed by the prosecuting attorney. It informed—or was intended to inform—the accused man that the jury had failed to indict him. . . .

Relatively Speaking—

In this town of incurable wise-crackers, Professor Einstein, during his recent visit, showed that he is no back number himself.

Harrassed for a concise explanation of his Relativity Theory, he finally broke down as follows:

"If a man holds a good-looking girl in his lap for an hour it seems like a minute, but if he sits on a red hot stove for a minute it seems like an hour. That's relativity!"

Going Too Far—

Notwithstanding, there was no excuse for an incident that happened a few nights ago.

A friend, dropping in at my peagreen apartment, spied a humorous college magazine on a table.

"The Yellow Jacket," I said chestily. "Swell little mag. My brother is one of the editors."

"Hip-hooray!" the smartest exclaimed. "At last—a writer in the family!"

Help!—

A little group of Serious Drinkers were in argument. The conversation turned philisophical.

"All right," hiccuped one of the stews addressing a newspaper man next to him, "—all right, what have YOU done for the world?"

"Me?" came the instant rejoinder. "Why, I sold advertising for The World."

The Height of Something—

Every small boy, at some stage of his career, has a consuming ambition to become a cowboy. Later, his ambition is to be a railroad engineer. But my great, Suppressed Desire was different. I wanted to ride through the streets of Monroe, Georgia, in clown costume, playing "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" on a steam calliope.

Maybe I missed my calling. All who agree with me please signify by—no, never mind.

Lions 'n' Taggers—

New York recently witnessed for the first time a complete circus presented on a theatre stage. The Jolson theatre, in 7th avenue, was remodeled for the event, the stage being enlarged and the floor braced to support the weight of elephants, et cetera.

But something was lacking. There was no big, mysterious tent pitched on the vacant lot down by the water-works . . . No exciting street parade, headed by a bellowing calliope. . . . no rumble or red-and-gilt cages seething with ferocious lions and wildcats. . . No sawdust, balloons, red lemonade . . . No "Stell—She Eats 'Em Alive!"

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria have him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

Sidetracks 27,000 Cars of Alabama Coal and Coke a Year . . . . . .

YOU can't read a chapter of Alabama history without immediately recognizing the important role which Alabama railroads have played in Alabama's past agricultural and industrial development. They are equally a major factor in our state's present welfare. ¶ Alabama coal and coke are normally the largest single source of revenue for Alabama railroads. ¶ Alabama's coal tonnage is normally about five times as great as the cotton crop of the entire South! ¶ The Natural Gas line which runs thru Alabama from Louisiana has a capacity of one hundred million cubic feet of natural gas per day. This is the equivalent of about one million three hundred and fifty thousand tons of average Alabama coal or coke a year. ¶ The transportation of this supply of Louisiana gas requires practically no labor after pipe lines are once laid. ¶ The transportation of its equivalent in coal or coke requires over 27.000 freight cars annually, gives employment to many railroad employees and produces gross revenues for the railroads of about $1.700.000. ¶ This simple example illustrates the close relationship of coal and coke to the prosperity of the railroads. There is an equally close tie between the prosperity of the Coal and Coke industry and scores of other industries and businesses. ¶ Any damage to the coal and coke industry means damage to the railroads—damage to the the farmer—damage to the State and yourself. ¶ To help bring back prosperity to Alabama—burn COAL or COKE!

This is the sixth of a series of advertisements published by Alabama coal and coke companies about Alabama coal and coke.

"A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not."

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which quickly neutralizes acids. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali neutralizes instantly many times as much harmful acid, and then the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians have prescribed for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

Our New Governor

The man who became Governor of the Great State of Alabama Monday, has undoubtedly made a deep impression on those who make up this state of ours. That force of Judge B. M. Miller's character and his personality has left its impress on the mind of the public and his views on government as expressed during his campaign have had a strong popular appeal. An editorial appearing in The Montgomery Advertiser, from the able editor, Grover C. Hall, has the following to say concerning our new Governor:

"There is a certain quality of ruggedness about Judge Miller that marks him as a strong man, a quality of character that betokens honor and honesty, vigor and earnestness of purpose. There is a certain power in his personality indicative of ability and marked qualities of leadership. That is the impression that the generality of Alabamians have of their new governor.

"Judge Miller has long been known and esteemed by the people of Alabama. Through his participation in numerous state campaigns during his long political career he has been for many years an outstanding figure in public life. By his distinguished service on the bench, first as a circuit judge and later as a justice of the Supreme Court of Alabama, he earned the respect of all Alabamians. It was during his campaign for the governorship, however, that the people of the state came to know him best and to appreciate his qualities of leadership most.

Because he has made a deep impression on the people they will have great expectations of him as governor. His admirers have no doubt that he will live up fully to expectations. His friends frankly expect him to make not merely a good governor, but a great governor.

"Governor Miller will enter on his administration at a trying time. The difficult problems with which the state is confronted at this time, together with the high expectations which the people have of him, will not make his way at all easy. Gov. Miller himself is no doubt fully aware of the difficulties that lie ahead. There are certain things in his favor, however. He has the satisfaction of knowing that at the outset he enjoys the confidence of the people and their sympathy with his announced aims and purposes. He also has the knowledge that the Legislature is friendly to him and his general policies and wishes to cooperate with him as fully as possible. These facts are auspicious for the success of his administration."

The Upturn Is Beginning

Reports from all over the country are to the effect that the Christmas trade everywhere was far better than merchants had anticipated, and that stocks of merchandise have been so far sold out that the shelves are practically bare in many sections in every line of goods.

This month in the larger cities the big stores are cashing in with post-holiday bargain sales to clear off the rest of their stocks, and people are buying much more freely than six months ago

That is the most encouraging sign of the times. It means, of course, that the retailers have got to begin buying from the wholesalers, who in turn have got to send their orders to the mills and factories. The wheels will begin to turn more rapidly as soon as this flood of new buying orders is under full headway. Men will go back to work, and in turn will have money to spend.

Unless something unforseen happens, we can not look for an instant return of the old prosperity. It will creep upon us unaware, as it has always done in the past, until some morning, while most of us are still croaking about hard times, everybody will realize at the same moment that hard times are over. That is what has always happened, and there is no reason to think it won't happen that way this time.

America's First Great Man

Benjamin Franklin, born on January 17, 1706, was the first native of America to win international fame. He was in many ways the greatest man this country produced in its early days. His services to the cause of the Colonists and to the infant Republic were immeasurable. Hon. Charles E. Hughes, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, has called him "the greatest diplomat of all time." Franklin is the patron saint of printers, the first journalist of consequence produced on American soil, the father of the postoffice, the propagandist of thrift, the most prolific inventor of his time, the founder of libraries, the discoverer of the identity of lightning and electricity, a great humanist, a prolific writer—no wonder that he is often referred to as "the many-sided Franklin."

Unconsciously almost everybody quotes Benjamin Franklin in everyday commonplaces of speech. He was the first to write and put in print such phrases as "Honesty is the best policy," "Experience is a dear school, but fools will learn in no other." "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." When you say "God helps those that help themselves" you are quoting Ben Franklin. To speak of a person seeking a favor as one "having an axe to grind" is another Franklinism. Hundreds of common phrases which many people think are from Shakespeare or the Bible originated in "Poor Richard's Almanac," the humorous, kindly collection of wit and wisdom which had made Franklin famous long before the Revolution.

He was a human, entertaining and lovable [illegible] ting to all who knew him, as well as a statesman and a philosopher. It is well to remember Franklin and to celebrate his birthday by beginning to apply some of his maxims about thrift, not the least popular of which is "A penny saved is a penny earned."

"Every man's life is a fairy tale written by God's fingers."
—Hans Christen Anderson.

And so we all go on living our lives. Some of us live our lives a great deal for others, some live merely for themselves and the satisfaction they get out of living. Then, some do not live, but merely exist. There are many things necessary for a man to really live—to live and be happy. Some are inclined to accomplish certain things and be satisfied at that, while others are continually trying to accomplish one thing after another and are never satisfied. To be satisfied is perhaps one of the most dangerous things in a man's life, yet, no doubt, it is quite a wonderful feeling.

Take for instance, Ben Franklin, he very seldom ever delved into old things. He studied what he might do to develop himself by sensing new developments. He delved into new stuff. Ben looked forward, to the things he might accomplish. As we go on talking about life, we would perhaps mention that seldom found fact that one thinks another's life is being lived for them—making it appear as if without one the other is useless. Then we could mention that illusion often heard of, that in a person's life, he finds that although he has attained success he finds that alone does not mean happiness, and that the living of another person with all the accessories so to speak, is the thing that fills that space where something is lacking. And as mentioned, there are those persons who are merely existing through the years. They were born into this world by a fond mother, but are just drifting with the ordinary tide, hither and yon. No ambition, no determination, never trying, never succeeding. That reminds me of a saying of Elbert Hubbard's: "The greatest mistake a man can make, is to be continually fearing he will make one." Then there are those persons who are devoting their lives to their own satisfaction, bringing pain and heartaches to others at times, in their quest for fame and fortune. You have seen that kind, and also those who live opposite to this manner, devoting a major part of their lives to others. We have them both. Then from Edwin Markham comes this, "He drew a circle that shut me out, heretic, rebel, a thing to flout. But love and I had the wit to win: we drew a circle that took him in." And so on through life we go.

The editor spoke to me about a lady saying something to him about me and my infamous Who's Who, recently. Had something to do with being tempermental. I really don't remember anything along that line, and beg to be pardoned, if accused. However, I do remember a thought that presented itself to me in regard to this rather charming lady of Clanton, and to her I will say, you need not worry about that, because my opinion of you during the selection of the Who's Who has been more than complimentary.

Now for a bit of news. I have been informed that in Birmingham there has been organized what is to be called the Chilton County Association. This is an organization for those who live in the Birmingham district who came from Chilton County. They pulled a party up there for these people last Friday night and officers were elected and plans are now underway for more of these social get-togethers for these Chiltonians. This social affair was held at the home of Mrs. Mabel Jones West, a former Chilton resident at 219 South Hawkins Street, West End. Mrs. West may also be found at the Tutwiler Hotel, Room 217, the office of the Alabama Woman's Democratic Club, of which she is president. The people living here will be informed of the next gathering up there, and will be extended a cordial invitation to be there, where they will be able to be with a large number of former Chilton County residents.

Well, when you read this, we will have a new Sheriff, because Walter Gillespie went in office last Monday, as did a couple of commissioners. I feel that with Walter in office the laws will be enforced correctly, however, I mean no reflection on the retiring sheriff, but just want to express my opinion of the new one. He has had lots of experience handling matters pertaining to the sheriff's office, and I feel that he will deal out fairness and justice within the law to everyone with whom he comes in contact.

In some recent adventures I have found some people living right round here who are extremely happy as a family. Perhaps I might be making a mistake in being so observant, but can't seem to keep from observing the small things as well as the large ones. It has been my good fortune to be invited to homes round town, and I have certainly enjoyed each visit. In some I have noticed without effort that pains were taken to show me I was welcome and I was treated as a guest, more than just a home-town fellow. In some cases I prefer the former, but very seldom, due to my cranky idea about that, and about people being sincere with their attentions. But only in one case have I found one thing I did not like, and I told my hostess about that, and she appreciated it, and even made arrangements so that it would not occur when I was there. That was extremely nice, eh? There is one thing I enjoy, that is visiting in a home, where there is no pretense on the part of the host or hostess. I like for them to be themselves, then I can be myself.

By the way folks, as usual on the first of the month, bill collectors are in full sway in Clanton. Well, recently I fell victim to one or two, or maybe more of these collectors, and was presented with bills on a statement head that was printed somewhere up in,—well, they was printed up north somewhere. Of course the collectors thanked me for the business when I paid them (yes, I really paid it) and he invited me to come to see them again. Yes, I'm going to trade with him some more, just like I've been doing and hope to pay him each time, even if he does have his statements and other stationery printed up north. I won't be so narrow as to allow a little thing like that to run me off. You can judge by this that I believe in trading at home when possible.

When that fellow makes some change or improvement in his business, as he has done in the past, no doubt our editor will make some mention of it in the paper and be glad to give him publicity. No doubt the editor will continue to champion the "Trade At Home" idea, and thereby benefitting the merchant, as well as others who favor home shops with their printing. I have no hard feelings against this fellow for having his printing done up north, but I'll be darned if I can see how he can do it and come to his local printers and solicit their business, and expect the local papers to keep boosting his town and county. So you see what I'm griping about this week.

BUS LINES AND THE RAILWAYS

Bus passenger and motor freight lines have increased enormously within the past five years. What can be said in their favor? They serve people and and communities who reside off the railroads; they often provide more frequent schedules; their rates are somewhat lower, sometimes they provide a slight saving to patrons. What can be said against them?

Locally they employ no labor, and they pay not one penny of license or taxes to either County or town thru which they operate, they use our highways which were built from taxation and spend not one penny for their maintenance, they buy not one penny's worth of anything in Chilton County and they have no payroll in Chilton County, while the Louisville & Nashville Railroad last year had ninety-three employes in Chilton County on their payroll and the aggregate sum earned was $79,728.81, the major portion of which was spent in Chilton County. They paid in taxes last year $7,566,457. They paid the Town of Jemison $212.37, Thorsby $693.93, Clanton $214.50, and Coopers $183.74, or a total of $1,304.54 in city taxes. The motor lines did nothing to develop this county, own not one foot of land in this county, did not pioneer its development. They waited until the County was settled and prosperous and did not come then, they waited until the people taxed themselves to provided smooth concrete highways to replace muddy dirt roads, went to every trouble to construct and pay for their roads then and not until then did the motor bus and truck lines start competing with the railroads and the competion is unfair. Now that the railroad earnings have fallen enormously as a result of dull business and this unfair competition, it would be a good time for the interstate commerce commission which fixes all railroad rates, to unbridle the railroads as far as intrastate rates are concerned in order to allow them to compete with bus and truck lines. The railroads could afford to carry passengers at two cents per mile within the state instead of the present of three and a half cents per mile and compete with the bus travel which is cheaper than Railroad rates. The Railroads should have the right to reduce their rates within the State to what they desire so that they can meet the competition which is a violation of our present laws for Railroads to charge a higher or lower rate than the lawfully published rates prescribed by the interstate commerce commission. This is a progressive age. Sentiment plays a small part in the keen business strife and competition, however, the present competition under present conditions is unfair.

The Legislature And Its Grist

By R. B. Vail

The present session of the Alabama General Assembly, or Legislature promises to be one of the most important sessions in the state's history. Ever increasing revenues must be supplied in the face of a staggering deficit of some $14,000,000, which must receive grave consideration. Appropriations to continue the proper functions of the state government which functions grow in an ever widening circle, requiring ever-increasing funds, must be made. The people are suffering a business depression that reaches into every home in the state and they are already taxed to the hurting point. These conditions make the task of the law makers now in session a tremendous one, requiring clear and courageous thinking. Solutions must be forthcoming, Alabama is a progressive state—the activity of the Legislature will be vitally important and vastly interesting.

The Alabama House of Representatives is presided over by Col. Alf M. Tunstall of Hale County, for nearly forty years active in Legislative circles. He was elected without opposition after a spirited pre-election campaign in which he was opposed by Messrs. Goodwyn of Montgomery, Goods of Wilcox and Fite of Marion. Col. Tunstall is forceful and masterly in his grasp of things political. He is keenly interested in the progress of the state and intimately acquainted with Alabama's possibilities and greatness.

Senator Holmes Powell was elected President Pro Tem of the Senate, which is presided over by Lieutenant-Governor Hugh D. Merrill. Mr. Powell is a young man who has rapidly risen to political power by his force of character. He is from Macon County.

Lieutenant-Governor Hugh Merrill is recognized as an old war-horse in the political arena. He has helped write Alabama's history for many long years, and his participation has always been constructive. He hails from Calhoun.

The question of Legislative reapportionment of the state is already causing some concern in Montgomery. The matter popped up in the Senate on the very first day of the session and it is a live question in informal House talk as well. Discussions for the most part revolve around Jefferson County, which with its nearly half million population would have its representation—now seven—more than doubled by reapportionment. As the constitution limits the number of members of the House, there would be no increase in the total number. Some of the smaller counties would lose members and some of the larger counties would gain them.

A number of young men hold membership in both houses of the present Legislature. The average age in the House is probably under forty, with Representative Williams of Calhoun rated the "baby member." That rating is based on age alone, not ability, as the gentleman from Calhoun possesses marked ability that promises to carry him far in Legislative circles.

Representative Barber of Jefferson, another of the "youngster" bloc, is probably the handsomest man in the House. Able and popular, he has already earned the title of "Shiek of the House." He wears all titles gracefully.

Representatives Jack of Hale, Patterson of Morgan, Beebe of Baldwin, Goodwyn of Montgomery, Molette of Dallas, Miller of Sumter, Poole of Butler, Goode of Wilcox, St. John of Cullman and Norman of Bullock are some of the old guard back again. Their influence will be felt in the grindings of the law making body.

Fitting and worthy resolutions of respect were passed by the House to the memory of Hon. J. Lee Long of Butler, former Speaker of the House, and Representative Mosley of Bullock, both of whom died as members of the House—Mr. Long about two years ago and Mr. Mosley about a week before the Legislature convened.

Newspaper men in the Assembly are Harry Walker in the Senate, representing Limestone and Lauderdale and in the House, Bob Sutton of Marengo, Earle Tucker of Clarke, Charlie Norman of Bullock, A. C. Lee of Monroe, Lewey Robinson of Jefferson and Joe Kettler of Crenshaw, the latter a "retired" newspaper man now practicing law.

Hon Thos. S. Frazier of Union Springs, is candidate, unopposed, for the vacancy in the Legislature for Bullock County. He will be elected early in February.

First Lesson

By Fonza Headley, Clanton, Ala., R. 3

Now, reader, go along with me,
Away back to eternity.
Go back beyond the days of youth,
Where everything that was was truth—

Beyond the sorrow and the tears,
Beyond the suffering and fears,
Beyond the anguish and the gloom,
Beyond the shadow of the tomb.

Beyond all trouble and all pain,
Beyond all losses and all gain,
Beyond all sobs and bitter sighs,
Beyond the limit of the skies,

Before there was a ray of light,
Before there was a day or night,
Before a prayer was ever prayed,
Before the world was ever made.

Before there was a moon or sun,
Before time itself begun,
Before there was a now or then,
Before there was a where or when,

Before there was a here or there,
Or anything or anywhere!
Go back a hundred thousand years,
And farther still tho' filled with fears,

Go back until within the past
You fail to find the place at last,
Where the beginning you can see
At one end of eternity.

Go back until there's not a trace
Of anything but God and space!
God all around, below, above—
Unlimited in power and love.

Away back here removed from sight
Where everything that was was right,
Away back here removed from sin
Is where my story does begin.

The First Wine

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory In The Birmingham News

One of the prettiest things in the intellectual story of that land of eternal marvel, is the legend bearing on the origin of wine.

In this time, above all others, when the "Wets" are moving heaven and earth to do away with the Volstead law and reinaugurate the reign of drink this story about wine comes as pat as a duck's foot in the mud.

No one knows how old the story is, but it is a good one, and it may make a splendid campaign argument in the next election.

The old Grecian legend runs as follows:

When Bacchus was a boy, being somewhat precocious, he journeyed thru Hellas to Naxos, and as the way was very long, he grew tired, and sat down upon a stone to rest.

As he sat there, with his eyes fixed upon the ground, he saw a little plant spring up between his feet and was so much pleased with it that he was determined to take it with him, and plant it in Naxos.

He took it up and carried it away with him, but as the sun was very hot, he saw that it would be likely to wither long before he reached his journey's end.

Accordingly, he cast his eyes about him, when he found a bird's skeleton, into which he quickly thrust the plant and went on.

But in his hand the plant sprouted so fast that it started out of the bone above and below.

This gave him fresh fear of its withering, and he cast about for a remedy.

He found the shoulder bone of a lion which was thicker than the bird's skeleton, and he stuck the skeleton, and the plant in it, into the bone of the lion.

Soon, however, the plant grew out of the lion's bone likewise.

Then he found the bone of an ass, which was still larger than the bone of the lion, so he put the lion's bone, containing the bird's skeleton and the plant and thus made his way to Naxos.

When about ready to set the plant he found the roots had entwined themselves around the bird's skeleton and the lion's bone, and the ass's bone; and as he could not take it out without damaging the roots, he planted it as it was, and it came up speedily, and bore to his great joy, the most delicious grapes.

From these grapes he made the first wine, and gave it to men to drink.

But behold a miracle! When men drank of it they first sang like birds; next, after drinking it a little more, they became vigorous and gallant like lions; but when they drank still more, they began to behave like asses.

A legend, but how true to the facts in the case! First, music, beauty, joy; then the passions, with all that they signify; and then to the maudlin, the silly, the idiotic.

Still helpful to us is the old legend if we will hear and heed its lesson.

Illiteracy Drive Shows Progress

Census Report For Alabama Cites Advances Made in Last 10 Years

While Alabama was increasing her population by approximately 300,000 between 1920 and 1930 and made substantial progress in reducing illiteracy and boosted the percentage of her population living in cities, according to figures just released by the Federal Census Bureau. The total population April 1, 1930, was 2,646,248, compared to 2,348,174 in 1920.

Of this total 1,700,775 were white persons, 944,834 negroes and 639 other colored, the ratios being 64.3 per cent white, or a gain of 17.5 per cent over 1920, and 35.7 per cent were negroes, this being a gain of but 4.9 per cent.

Other colored includes 69 Mexicans, 465 Indians, 52 Chinese, 25 Japanese, 25 Filipinos and 2 Hindus.

Of the total population, 1,315,009 were males and 1,331,239 females.

The white population included 1,646,339 natives, native parentage; 38,726 natives of foreign or mixed parentage, and 15,710 foreign born. Of the foreign born, 10,505 were naturalized; 1,121 had taken out first papers, and 2,730 were returned as alien, with reports on citizenship missing for a small number, compared to 2 per cent in 1920.

Those Past 21

Population 21 years of age and older numbered 1,348,401, or 51 per cent. Foreign born white 21 years of age and over amounted to 15,135, of which 2,479 were returned alien.

April 1, 1930, the date for which the count was made, there were 313,882 persons under 5 years of age; 331,713 from 5 to 9; 303,440 from 10 to 14; 294,168 from 15 to 19; 259,361 from 20 to 24; 208,954 from 25 to 29; 164,853 from 30 to 34; 294,862 from 35 to 44; 244,863 from 45 to 54; 129,663 from 55 to 64; 68,430 from 65 to 74; 30,810 75 years and over, and 1,296 for whom age was not given.

Of the total, 35.9 per cent were under 15 years of age; 20.9 per cent from 15 to 25; 25.2 per cent from 25 to 44; 14.1 per cent from 45 to 64; and 3.8 per cent or more.

The number of persons under 1 year of age was 61,030, compared to 62,550 in 1920. However, the group under 5 shows an increase between 1920 and 1930 as do the older groups.

On Percentage Basis

On a percentage basis persons in all groups from 15 years upwards represented a larger proportion of the total population in 1930 than in 1920, except in the group between 30 and 44 years, where the percentages remained constant. These increases are balanced by the smaller proportions of persons under 15.

Urban population in the state April 1, 1930, was 744,273, including 3,868 persons living on farms within cities of 2,500 or more population. The urban population amounted to 28.1 per cent of the total, as compared to 21.7 in 1920. The rural population amounted to 1,901,975, comprising 1,336,409 persons living on farms in rural territory, and 565,566 not living on farms. The rural population in 1930 represents an increase of 4 per cent, compared to rural population in 1920. The rural farm population, alone, was practically the same in 1930 as in 1920, nearly all the increase being in the rural non-farm group.

YOUR HEALTH—or your life—may depend on the accuracy of the prescription the doctor writes for you. He makes certain it is right before signing his name to it.

But he does not check the prescription more carefully than the manufacturer or merchant checks the advertisement appearing over his name.

Look at any one of the advertisements appearing in this newspaper. Its sponsor is well known. That's his signature in clean, cold type—and he realizes that incorrect statements above it would jeopardize the health—the very existence of his business.

Continued advertising invariably is proof of honest advertising and honest goods. ELECTRICAL EXPANSION

During 1930 approximately 850 million dollars was expended by electric light and power companies of the United States for new construction, extension and betterment of facilities, according to an official statement just issued.

This was practically the same as was spent in 1929, and involved large outlays for labor and materials which greatly aided in sustaining employment during the year.

Estimates already made as the result of a nation-wide survey of budgets now under preparation for 1931 indicate expenditures for the same purposes for the coming year of not less than 700 millions and they may considerably exceed that sum.

Factors affecting the amount of these expenditures, according to the statement, will be resumption of industrial power demand, the general investment buying of securities, and the assurance of a return upon investments sufficient to attract the required capital.

While industrial use of electricity fell off slightly during the past year, its home use showed a marked increase. During the past two years the average price per kilowatt hour throughout the country has been cut approximately 10 per cent, and is now the lowest in the history of the industry.

My Best Girl

BY

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter carrier, is the domestic drudge of the humble home where her mother does little except bemoan the fact that she has "seen better days" and her sister, Liz, who works in a beauty shop, lies abed late. Maggie has to get the family breakfast before she starts out to her job in the Five-and-Ten-Cent Store.

There's a new boy at the Five-and-Ten, Joe Grant. He tells Maggie that he has been assigned to work as her helper in the stock room. He seems rather dumb, but Maggie helps him through his first day at the store and shares her lunch with him in a cubby hole of a place that belongs to a mattress factory next door to the Five-and Ten.

They are looking over some cheap picture cards. One of them has a motto that strike's Maggie's fancy. "The way to begin the ideal life is to begin." She and Joe talk about that and Joe is surprised that the girl has higher standards than he had expected. When he goes home that night he is thinking about Maggie. And his home is the home of the owner of the Mack Five and Ten-Cent Stores, though Maggie does not suspect that he is the boss' son.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"What—with Uncle Tom?"

"With Uncle Nobody! It's a sort of —of underworld investigation. I got it on my own hook."

"Well, but that's nonsense," the woman said after a pause, somewhat at a loss. "Your father won't permit you for one instant to give up college and work! He——"

"My father told me he wasn't going to back me financially any more," Joe interrupted hotly. "Meanwhile, I'm done with college and I'm working and he can make what he likes of it!"

"Why, he'll not endure it one instant!" the woman said. "Meanwhile, aren't you going to the Russells'? It's Millicent's coming-out party—she'll certainly expect you!"

"I think I'll let Millicent cry herself to sleep, to-night," the boy said lazily. "My job has sapped my energies—what with cologne and postcards and tinsel and vegetable knives."

"Wat are you talking about!"

"Nothing. Nothing. But I'm a working-man now, no time for frivolities. Leave me be, mother. I'm dead."

There was a silence. The woman sat puzzled and disapproving, thinking.

"Listen, Joe. You do like Millicent, don't you? She's such a dear little thing," his mother presently began sentimentally, "and she likes you so much!"

"Give her my love and tell her I'm trying to get together enough money for our little nest," said Joe. "I'll see her at the club to-morrow, anyway—she always plays golf Sunday mornings."

"I don't understand you, Joe," his mother said in cold disapproval. "You went out of the house yesterday morning wild because your father had said he'd take you out of college if this spending of money went on. Now you say you've got a job and don't want to go!"

"I'm reformed!" Joe said jocosely. "The old man called me names this morning." It's just possible—it's just possible that some day I'll have the laugh on the old man!"

"I wish you'd stop talking nonsense, and follow me over to the Russells'," his mother said impatiently. "I don't know what they'll think if you don't come."

"Tell them I've had a change of heart—I've got religion," Joe said indifferently. "Tell them that the way to begin living the ideal life is to begin."

"To begin what?" sharply asked Lillian Spencer Merrill, wife of the owner of the Mack Merrill Chain Stores.

"Just that, darling. The way to begin living the ideal life is—to begin," said Joseph Grant Mackenzie Merrill mildly.

Mrs. Johnson, born Petheridge, cherished in herself, and planted in her daughters, an unbounded sense of righteous pride. The Johnsons had no pride, and no particular cause for pride she said.

But the Petheridges, and their collateral lines of Larkins and Lawrences! Ma told them thrilling tales of Gran-ma Larkin's sampler, hung above the Petheridge fireplace in the magnificent Petheridge home "down South," and about the Johnny Yanks mashing up all Gran-ma Larkin's cut glass, and about the slaves—hundreds of them, thousands of them, all singing and dancing and happy, and not any more wanting to be freed than so many irresponsible sparrows!

Pop, meanwhile, miserably represented not only the low-born Johnsons, but the entire ranks of the Johnny Yanks, as well. He would cringe while Ma was enlarging upon this topic, and nervously clear his throat. And whenever he spoke of Vermont families, Ma said with her rich unctious laugh, "Makin' wooden nutmegs, I suppose?" and the girls had to laugh, too.

Not that Maggie was not loyal to her father; she had no heart in the laughter Ma so often directed against him. But it was simpler all around to laugh.

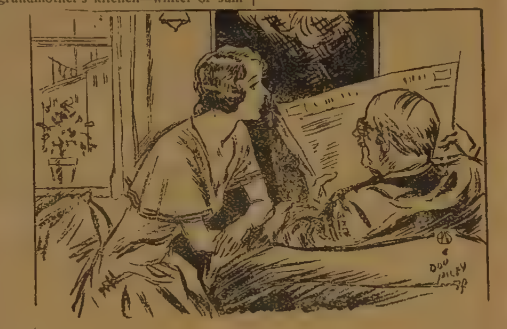
No use going against that particular current, there were too many others to struggle with, if one were to struggle at all!

Often, when Maggie and her father were alone, he would give her a fairer idea of the case.

"You see, dearie," Len would explain in his mild, uncomplaining voice, "Ma's just quotin' things she heard when she was a little girl. She never saw your great-grandmother's house, with those samplers and things." Your mother can't remember nothing about slaves and all that. I don't know as her folks ever had slaves, anyway. They lived right in East St. Louis and they had a drug stor—I don't know just what they would have done with slaves!"

Sometimes, Pa would ramble on to the other side of the ancestral picture, to his own boyhood on a Vermont farm.

"I surely would like you to see the place, some day, Maggie. There was eight of us boys, and my sister, Margaret—you're named for her, and for my mother, too. There's some of them there still, I daresay—I haven't heard for twenty years. You'd like your grandmother's kitchen—winter or summer, that was the place us boys liked to be! I remember when a big storm would be coming up—trees bendin' over, and planks rattlin' in the yard, and the old well-sweep creakin'—how we loved the kitchen then! There was a big open fireplace one side, but she had her range built right across it, and there wasn't never a drop of anything spilled on that range—she kep' it like black glass."



"Oh, Pop! But why did you ever come away?"

"I d'no, Maggie. Jest got restless, I guess."

"Look here, Pop. If my grandmother Johnson had nine children and no servants, how could she manage to keep the place so clean, and the stove shining so, and everything? Ma says that no lady ought ever to do her own work, and she says it can't be done!"

"Well, maybe your grandmother Johnson wasn't a lady, Maggie."

"Pop, do you think there's any hope I'm not a lady? Not like my grandmother Petheridge, I mean? Because," Maggie would rush on eagerly, "I'd love to have my kitchen always clean and orderly, and pies cooling on the window sill, and jam all put up, and me in a nice clean gingham dress—and a big stiff white apron, sitting down on the side porch, rocking, like you said Gran'ma Johnson always did! And I'd like to believe in all those newspaper budgets, and system, and having a regular hour for everything," Maggie would conclude, expectant eyes on his face.

"Well—I don't know, dearie. Your mother hasn't right good health, you know and your sister has to keep her hands nice.

And then, of course, we're poor folks, Maggie. When you have to do without things——"

"Pop, we're not poor! Why, you and I—make more than two hundred a month, Pa. And there's budgets as low as one hundred!"

"Two hundred a month for four folks ain't much in these days, Maggie, when everything's gone up so high!" It was the automatic protest.

"But, Pop—those budgets, and the lists the government sends out, and the newspapers and the magazines know how things have gone up, don't they?"

"Dearie, your Pop ain't much on mathematics," Len would say, passing a weary hand over his troubled forehead, shaking his meek, gray little head.

Ma, approached on the subject of household reform, had much to say and very, very little to do.

"When I and your pop was married, beef was fifteen cents a pound! I remember that, because I said to the butcher, 'Ain't that a lot?' I wasn't nothin' but an innocent child—I'd never done any work with my own hands before. 'Keep them little hands like flowers!' our old doctor, Dr. Lovejoy, use' to say. He was a Southerner, too."

Maggie only listened respectfully, feeling that if beef would only go down to fifteen cents a pound again, everything might yet be well. Meanwhile the kitchen grew shabbier and shabbier and water and grease and ashes darkened the chipped floor, and the plates were piled in the sink, and the faucets dripped on them unavailingly.

She had found room for the ideal leaflet that Joe had given her on the crowded shelf above the sink, and sometimes she looked up from the dishpan at it, with wondering eyes. "The way to begin living the ideal life is—to begin."

Her mother said that it didn't seem to her to make sense. 'Lizabeth read it once, suspiciously, and then forgot all about it. But Len and Maggie discussed it more than once, in some bewilderment. Len said frankly that he didn't "get it."

There was no hot water, and nobody in the world could wash the plates after a lamb stew dinner in cold. She piled them and scraped them while she waited for some water to boil.

"Maggie!" This was her mother, from bed. "Liz go out?"

"Ten minutes ago, Ma."

"Well, here's all there is to it," said Mrs. Johnson. "I'm at the end of my green, and I can't do no more leaves until I get some. I guess you're tired, ain't you?"

Not so very."

"You'll have to get the money from your father, Maggie!"

"Pop, have you thirty cents?"

"I guess so." He counted it out—dimes, pennies.

"Will two be enough, Ma?"

"How much did your father give you? Thirty cents — yes, that'll be enough, but I would like to know what Len Johnson does with his money! Shut that door!"

Dishes waiting, kettle so slow to heat, crumbs on the floor, batter spilled and dried on the stove, the red tablecloth rumpled, the sugar bowl upset, dish towels stiff with grease and water—no matter, the inspiration of it went before her like a banner, as she ran down the dark street.

"The way to begin living the ideal life is—to begin."

"Joe," Maggie asked, a day or two later, "how could you live the ideal life if nothin' in your life was ideel?"

"Ah, there's the catch!" Joe answered airily.

"The meaning of that ideal life thing is this: You're—you're all in your own mind, do you see? What you have doesn't matter. What you think and what you are is everything—and what bunk it all is!" he added sneeringly to himself. "Do you get me?" he asked aloud.

She did not get him at all, but she nodded.

"You must make everything beautiful in your life," Joe said, encouraged by her attention. "An old plate, for instance, an old stain on the wall. Why Maggie, the museums of Europe are full of them—old plates and ragged clothes and worn-out rugs and water stains, and everyone thinks they're beautiful! The ceiling of the Sistine Chapel for instance. Did you ever hear of that?"

"Michelangelo did it," Maggie said, nodding.

"And how did you know that?"

"Oh, we had it in school, an' then we have 'em here, among the fifteen-cent classic coloured reproductions," Maggie replied.

"Well. All those old pictures are dirty and worn, mouldering away—all the old palaces are, lots of the books, all of the furniture—and yet persons swarm over there every years and admire them," said Joe. "Now, the point is, suppose you had to live with a lot of rotting furniture, and chipped plates, and you just said to yourself—'These are beautiful and valuable relics——"

"You mean that cups an' chairs an' being poor and tired really have nothin' to do with the way you live?" she asked coming nearer to it than he had, as he recognized somewhat to his surprise.

"You've got it," he said.

There was vision in her uplifted eyes, as if the walls of the mattress factory, where they were sitting, had faded away, and new dreams of beauty and fitness and purity had risen before her inner sight.

"Joe, nothing could stop that if you once got it!" she said in a whisper. And then, half to herself, "I can't wait to get home and begin!" And after a while she said wistfully: "Joe, I wish I knew as much as you know."

HAMILTON'S RECORD GIVEN

First Secretary of the Treasury Led Fight For Strong Centralized Government

It is given to but few men to impress their individuality indelibly upon the history of a great nation, but Alexander Hamilton achieved even more than this.

In calling attention to the 174th anniversary of his birthday on January 11, 1931, the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission points out the extraordinary versatility of the man whom Chief Justice Marshall ranked next to George Washington in importance during those critical years of our history.

The senseless sacrifice of this brilliant man, who was killed in a duel by Aaron Burr, caused an outburst of bitter and indignant grief among men of all parties throughout the nation, that has seldom been equaled in the history of the country.

Alexander Hamilton was born, as a Britsh subject, on the island of Nevis, in the West Indies, on January 11, 1757. At the age of 12, following his father's bankruptcy and his mother's death, he was thrown upon the care of maternal relatives at St. Groix, where he entered the counting house of Nicholas Cruger. In 1772 friends, impressed by his astonishing poise and maturity of mind, made it possible for him to go to New York to continue his education. Arriving there the Autumn of that year, he prepared for college at Elizabethtown, N. J., and in 1774 entered King's College, now Columbia University, in New York City. His studies were interrupted by the Revolution.

A visit to Boston seems to have thoroughly confirmed the conclusion, to which reason had already led him, that he should cast his fortunes with the patriots rather than with the Tories. Into the cause he threw himself with ardor. Early in 1776 the New York convention ordered a company of artillery to be raised. Hamilton applied for the command and his examination quickly dispelled doubts of his fitness in those who suspected mere youthful presumption.

The artillery company quickly showed the talent of its commander, who, by his proficiency and bravery in the campaign of 1776 around New York City, won the admiration of Generals Washington and Greene. Hamilton shared in the brilliant campaign of Trenton and Princeton and so distinguished himself as a dashing and gallant officer that, although he was barely twenty years old, Washington appointed him his Aide-de Campe with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

Hamilton, despite his other remarkable abilities, was unusually ambitious for military glory—an ambition he never lost. As a member of Washington's staff his duties were various and highly responsible, but he longed for the field and firing line with an independent command. In February 1781, he seized a slight reprimand administered by Washington as an excuse for abandoning his staff position and later secured a field command, through Washington, and won laurels at Yorktown, where he led his column in the final assault against the British works.

Whether as a soldier, lawyer or a statesman, he was a master in every field that he entered. Hamilton, beyond a doubt, had an inborn genius for finance, and was beyond question a pioneer in what has since become the most important department of practical government.

He founded the financial system of the United States and converted the barren clauses of the Constitution into a living organism.

When he became Secretary of the Treasury, he found there was a great mass of work to be done in organizing the collecting and disbursing force thruout the country. Congress immediately submitted to him a number of queries and problems for solution, and there came forth from his pen a succession of papers that have left their strong imprint on the administrative organization of the national government.

Among them were two reports on the public credit, upholding an ideal of national honor higher than the prevalent popular principles; a report on manufactures, advocating their encouragement; a report favoring the establishment of a national bank, the arguments being based on "implied powers" in the Constitution and on the applications that Congress can do anything that can be made, through the medium of money, to subserve the "general welfare" of the United States. Hamilton's doctrines, through judicial interpretation, have revolutionized the Constitution. The success of his financial measures were immediate and remarkable.

Hamilton's plan, to establish a national bank resembling in great measure the Bank of England, aroused as great an interest in Congress as the proposal to assume the State debts had brought forth. The project was finally passed by both Houses in practically the form that Hamilton had suggested and came before President Washington for approval on February 14, 1791.

So heated had been the debates in the House on the constitutionality of a United States bank, that the President felt doubts as to the power of congress to incorporate such an institution. He called upon his four cabinet members for their opinions. Hamilton, and Knox, Secretary of War, favored the bank; Jefferson and Randolph, attorney general, opposed. Hamilton, Jefferson and Randolph submitted written reports to the President.

Those written by Jefferson and Hamilton remain to this day among the most important expositions of our constitutional law and practice. Hamilton's arguments convinced Washington of the constitutional propriety of the measure, which he approved on February 25, 1791.

The subscription books were opened on July 4, following, and within two hours, the whole capital was subscribed for; and many persons who had hoped to buy stock found themselves left out. Never in the course of history has there been so immediate and permanent a financial foundation laid for any country's prosperity as that which was built by Hamilton, the men of the First Congress and President Washington.

Felt Bad After Eating

"Before I started taking Black-Draught, three years ago, my health was very bad," writes Mrs. C. C. Carson, 945 Concord St., Beaumont, Texas. "I suffered constantly from constipation. I had headache when I got up in the morning, and I felt dull and sluggish. I hardly ate a meal that my food agreed with me. Frequently I would have gas on my stomach, and felt awful.

"I read about Black-Draught, and I thought it might help me. After I had taken it a little while, I felt much better. It relieves constipation. I keep it on hand so when I need a laxative I will have it. In the three years I have been taking it, I have never found anything as good for constipation."

ARE YOUR BROOD SOWS IN GOOD CONDITION?

By Prof. W. B. Krueck

The condition of the brood sows upon the average farm will decide largely the number of pigs that will be farrowed in the average litter next spring

It has been consistently demonstrated that a brood sow that is in a thrifty, healthy condition at the time of breeding will usually farrow a larger number of pigs during the following spring season.

By good condition, however, in the case of a breeding animal, one doesn't intimate just a fat hog. The brood sow that is smooth, carrying a reasonable quantity of flesh that has been fed upon a ration properly balanced with a reasonable amount of protein, is usually in the most healthy condition and in the best condition to conceive for a large litter of pigs the following spring.

If brood sows have been carried largely upon the waste feed in the fields during the past few months, the good hogman will certainly find it desirable to add a reasonable amount of protein to his ration during the next few weeks and he will find that his sows will breed more uniformly and will be in better condition to produce a large litter of pigs.

Continuing the feeding of this protein during the gestation period has also been demonstrated to be extremely desirable and it has been shown that practically twice as many pigs are at the sides of brood sows at weaning time as where no good protein supplement is fed during the gestation period.

FRENCH WORKERS BUSY

Unemployment has become such an international calamity this year that it is fortunate that there remains one country in Europe to furnish jobs not only to her own population but to many foreigners as well. France, according to the United States Department of Commerce, receives contract laborers under visas of her ministries of labor and agriculture, and in addition to these, foreign laborers often enter the country with an ordinary passport and apply later for a worker's permit.

Though foreign workers are always the first to be dismissed in periods of depression, in 1928 there were 97,472 arrivals of foreign workers to 53,759 departures; in 1929, there were 179,321 arrivals to 38,870 departures; and in the first six months of 1930 there were 76,852 entrances and 32,145 departures.

About 62 per cent of the foreign workers go into industry and 38 per cent into agriculture. The nations represented are chiefly Poland, Italy, Belgium and Spain. The French maintain frontier, departmental, and municipal employment offices that place over a million workers annually. In July of 1930, a new social insurance law was passed, providing insurance against sickness, incapacity, old age, and death.

TIME IS RIPE FOR HOG PRODUCTION SAYS GIST

"The time is ripe for Alabama farmers to grow more hogs for home consumption and for market during the fall and winter of 1931," declares F. W. Gist, state and federal statistician, who reported a decrease of 16 per cent in the number of fall pigs in Alabama as compared with a year ago.

"In the peanut area especially, hogs may be grown at a profit. In the rest of the state a sufficient corn crop next year, with beans and peas, will also make hog growing attractive," he said.

The decrease in the number of fall pigs for the United States is one per cent compared with a year ago and combining the fall survey as to the size of the fall crop and the June survey as to the size of the spring crop of pigs, the total pig crop in the United States is four per cent smaller this year than in 1929.

Although the survey shows the number of sows bred or to be bred for Spring farrowing in 1931 to be 12 per cent greater for the country as a whole, than the number of sows which actually farrowed in the spring of 1930, when allowance is made for the usual spread between breeding intentions and actual farrowings, there is likely to be little change in the number of sows which will actually farrow in the Spring of 1931 compared to the Spring of 1930.

Past surveys have shown that the number of sows reported as bred in the Fall were larger than the number reported as farrowed the following Spring, due to changes in intentions, death losses and other causes. The number of pigs saved per litter in the Spring of 1930 was unusually large, being 5 1-2 per cent above average. If the number saved per litter in the spring of 1931 is only average, the pig crop of 1931 will probably be somewhat smaller than that of 1930.

The average number of pigs saved per litter in the United States in the Fall of 1930 was 6.1, while in Alabama it was 5.4.

J. W. SISK BELIEVES IN REAL FARM PROGRAM YEAR ROUND

The first part of this week a representative of the News had occasion to talk to J. W. Sisk, a farmer of note of this county who resides about three miles west of Clanton, on Route three. In the conversation it was learned that Mr. Sisk had certainly seen fit to it that his family and livestock would be taken care of at all times.

Mr. Sisk stated that he had enough meat in his smokehouse, enough corn and other feed to take good care of his family and stock. He has two good cows from which he secures an average of three gallons of milk a day. He has two, and always trys to keep on hand two hogs of a fine breed. He has a fine flock of poultry, one good mule, and thirty-five acres of land. From his cows he is able to sell milk and butter in town almost every day, getting about $4.00 per week for this. From his hogs he killed one not long ago and has a splendid supply of meat now. From his chickens he is able to sell fryers and eggs, and is not the type of farmer who sells his eggs and butter in town and carries back to his home some canned goods or meat, or meal.

Mr. Sisk stated that he has something of a farming program that he carries out, and told of his program for the future which, if carried out will no doubt prove profitable. He rotates his crops in such a manner that he eliminates a high cost of fertilizer each year, and emphasized that fact that in his opinion the best bet the farmer now has is to reduce his cotton acreage to a great extent, and start raising something he can use at home. When asked to say in a brief way how he was fixed until the next crop, he stated, "I have got plenty of meat and other home raised food for my family. My cows, hogs and mule will not be in want for the proptr food, as I am fixed for that already, and I manage to sell enough milk, butter, eggs and chickens to take care of most of the rest of the things we have to have, and I am not noticing anything about this the people are calling hard times. I intend to keep working, if able, and keep planning for better farming conditions, and always try to look ahead."

At Mr. Sisk's home his family consists of Mrs. Sisk, a daughter and himself. He has been living in Chilton County for approximately fourteen years, and is a regular subscriber of the Chilton County News.

Why There Was No Parade

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 19—There was no parade worthy of the name in the inauguration program today, but the simple passage of Gov.-Elect Miller from his hotel to the capitol was invested with a meaning and significance that great pomp could never bestow. Wherein that significance lies is a story.

Two weeks ago Mayor Gunter, whom tradition and custom made chairman of the inauguration committee, went to Camden with 14 of his associates on the committee to learn from the governor-elect what he wished in the way of ceremony. Tentative plans had been made for a parade of some ostentation. For instance it had been planned to include National Guard units and other groups which would entail a certain expense.

How Judge Miller reacted to these plans was learned yesterday from a member of the mayor's delegation. The governor - elect seemed embarassed when he heard what had been planned and vinced some hesitancy in saying what was on his mind. Finally he made a sort of speech to the delegation, and the members of the committee who told of that conference said Judge Miller's eyes were fringed with tears when he was through. What the governor elect said was something like this:

"Gentlemen, I realize that the people of Montgomery look forward to a spectacle and, speaking for myself, I too, like to see a fine parade. I have a great admiration for our National Guard, and, as governor, I shall have pride in the military of my state. But, gentlemen, since the election hundreds of citizens of this state have visited me here. Some have asked for appointments, some have for other matters, but all have brought word of poor business, and even destitution. What they have told me has made me sad. I am not perturbed by the financial condition of the state government, but I am deeply concerned about the condition of the citizens of the state. With this in my mind I do not feel like consenting to any costly display in connection with my inauguration.

"If I could have my way I would go straight to the capitol, take the oath of office and go to work without any ceremony whatsoever. I shall not ask you to go that far with me, but I want earnestly to request that no expense be incurred for a parade. I have asked for economy in my campaign speeches. I do not want people to be able to say that 'he just wanted economy for others.' And with some of our people going hungry, I do not believe that I could go through with an expensive show on my inauguration day."

Mayor Gunter and his associates were won to the view of the governor-elect. They were impressed with his sincerity and the plans were made accordingly.

TELEPHONE BOARD OF DIRECTORS WELL PLEASED WITH CONDITIONS

The Board of Directors of the Peoples Telephone Company met in a called meeting in Clanton Tuesday of this week. After attending to some business matters, the Board took a kind of view of conditions of the system, and expressed themselves as very much pleased with the prospects of the company for the coming year.

More work has been done on the lines in the country for the past three weeks than has been done before in three years; and people are now able to get central service who have not usd their phones in months. Phoneholders on other lines are now engaged in getting their phones and lines in order. New posts have been purchased by the company to be used inside the corporate limits of Clanton, and Mr. Lome Giles, the linesman and operator, is working on the lines in Clanton and getting them in better shape.

Several paid up their dues last week; but there are still others who need to pay. After last Saturday, if you have not paid your central fees, you will not be allowed service through the central; so the Board of Directors urges all phone holders to pay your fees at once, so that you may get a full years' service.

MT. PLEASANT WINS OVER BAKER JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

On last Thursday afternoon the Junior High Department of the Mt. Pleasant school motored down to Baker, Jr., High where a lively and interesting "Old Time Spelling Bee" was staged.

After several hundred words were given out, Mt. Pleasant finally emerged victorious, but not until a brisk struggle was put up by three 'crack' spellers from Baker.

The contest ended with two of Mt. Pleasant's spellers standin. Renfro Price and Eunice Holley were those two. For Baker Junior High Miss Lois Baker was last to go down. After spelling many complex and troublesome words she was given the word 'Ligament' which proved the downfall of the Baker school.

The sides were apparently evenly matched as the number on the floor at different intervals of the contest were about the same.

Mrs. Strock, the Junior High assistant at Baker, alternating with Mr. Johnson, principal of Mt. Pleasant, gave out the words.

The spirit, interest and good sportsmanship manifested by both schools was highly noticeable, and to be commended.

As soon as the Mt. Pleasant group arrived, they quickly assembled and gave several school yells. They then marched in, bearing their school colors, gold and black, and lined up opposite the Baker group, and the battle was on. The rules used in this contest are practically those set down for the County-Wide Spelling Bee, sponsored by the Jacksonville State Normal, which will be held in this County in March.

Mt. Pleasant hopes to have the Baker School as their guests within the next few days. Watch for announcements and the date, and try to be present, for these two schools spelling against each other will assure most anyone two hours of wholesome enjoyment.

Rural School Leaders Encouraged

Governor B. M. Miller's pronouncement upon education in the inaugural address has had heartening effect upon rural school leaders, according to Superintendent B. Lawrence of this county. The governor places education in primary position and makes it plain that additional funds for improvement must be provided through economy and through shifting of state appropriations to this point of necessity. In his platform and in his most recent statement, Governor Miller has aligned himself definitely with the most progressive school influences in the state, his views being in accord with the program recommended by the American Legion of Alabama and by the association of county superintendents of education. These state-wide organizations both asked for school relief along four specific lines: the provision of nine-months school terms in certain rural centers of each county where school spirit will support such, the appropriation of an adequate school transportation fund, an increase in the rural school building fund, and the elimination of all necessity for tuition fees.

"The public finds it hard to realize," says our local county school head, "that enrollments, building expense, school trucks, and the ever increasing demand by the people for better things educationally has caused the 1927 estimates for even the seven-month minimum term to be far outrun. In 1930, 2,198 school trucks carried 66,499 school children at an expense of $1,418,584 in Alabama; and all this money had to come from funds needed for longer terms and teachers' salaries, since no financial provision for transportation has ever been made by the state legislature. Last year $537,953 was paid by school patrons of our state as tuition fees, most of the amount being paid in rural districts least able to meet such a necessity. These things merely indicate the pressing need for school relief at many points."

More Profit In Hogs Than Cotton

"Hogs for market are more profitable at present than cotton," reports F. W. Gist, statistician of the Department of Agriculture, who says that "One-third of the farmers are of necessity singing 'Nine cent cotton and 20 cent meat' while two-thrids have no pigs for next year's meat and six out of ten have no sows to breed from."

Commenting upon the fact that "with cotton at 77 per cent of its 1910-1914 price and hogs at 114 farmers can not grow cotton to buy meat," Mr. Gist said.

"Sixty-one per cent of the farmers in the state have no brood sow, 66 per cent had no pigs, and 32 per cent had no hogs for pork, in November last. One-third of our farmers are of necessity singing "Nine cent cotton and 20 cent meat," while two-thirds have no pigs for next year's meat and six out of ten have no sows to breed from. In the shortage of brood sows and pigs northern counties are seen to be outstanding, in some of them more than 90 per cent of farmers reporting none. With cotton at 77 per cent of its 1910-1914 price and hogs at 114 farmers can not grow cotton to buy meat. And certainly hogs for market are more profitable at present prices than cotton?"

MANY TEACHERS BELOW STANDARD

The Alabama School Journal for January reports that 41 per cent of Alabama teachers are below the minimum standards accepted as essential; namely, two full years of training beyond high school for those who are to instruct elementary children and four years of training above high school for those who would teach in secondary schools.

These standards are modest; and the fact that any large number of our teachers can not meet them should cause the average citizen to think. When we consider the training required of doctors, lawyers, dentists, ministers, and others who must deal with body and mind, the fact comes home to us that the lady who shapes the mental reactions of our little children should be one who has been exposed to the very best lines of thought.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. Head and Back Quit Hurting

"A few years ago, I found that I was very weak and nothing I ate seemed to give me any strength," writes Mrs. R. B. Douglas, 704 South Congress St., Jackson, Miss.

"I suffered intense pain in my head and back. At times I would have to hold to something to steady myself, so as to do my little work. I was worried about my condition.

Airplane Became News Twenty-Five Years Ago

During the coming year, newspapers and magazines throughout the United States will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the date when the airplane was first recognized as news.

It was in 1906 that Collier's Weekly commissioned Jimmy Hare, its famous photographer, to become the world's first airplane photographer, and that the magazine's owner-editor, Robert J. Collier, became himself the first airplane correspondent and special writer on aviation.

Collier became the first private flyer and owner of an airplane, and his journalistic interest in the Wright Brothers led him to join with August Belmont and others in the formation of the Wright Airplane Company. He was one of the founders and first presidents of the Aero Club of America. He furnished the plane used for the first air mail, and was himself the first pilot to deliver naval orders to a warship.

Twenty-five years ago, although the Wright's obscure experiments at Kitty Hawk had been going on for three years, the world first awoke to the realization that human flying was not, after all, a physical impossibility.

The Collier trophy, awarded annually for the greatest development in aviation, was founded by him in 1911. Its recipients since that time include Glenn Curtiss, Elmer Sperry, Sterling Burgess, Grover Loening and Charles L. Lawrence. Curtiss received it for his automatic stabilizer, Sperry for his gyroscopic control, and Burgess and Loening for work with flying boats, and Lawrence for the development of the air cooled engine. Last year the trophy went to the National Committee on Aeronautics for its development of motor cowling or stream-lined facing which added many miles per hour to stock speeds.

A Reward For Service

In receiving the Victor Hanson Loving Cup for the most outstanding merit of service to its county of any weekly newspaper in Alabama, the Chilton County News, its editor nor any member of the staff, desires to receive all the credit for this distinction, because it is fully realized that this accomplishment was due largely to the interest shown by those who have so willingly cooperated with this newspaper during recent years.

This award was for distinguished service rendered to Clanton, Chilton County and the people here, during the years of 1929 and 1930, and was made by a committee composed of Grover C. Hall, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, P. O. Davis, editor Alabama Polytechnic Institute and Howard C. Smith, noted feature writer. These men are seen in the spotlight of the high type of learned journalists. During the years covered by this award, the Chilton County News was owned by J. B. Atkinson, attorney of Clanton, and a figure in state affairs. It was through his cooperative efforts that this newspaper has grown and prospered and much credit is due him for giving this service through the columns of the Chilton County News, to the people of this county.

Still, with this in mind, we do not hesitate to say that we fully realize that it was the cooperation of those citizens of this county mentioned, and their interest in this newspaper that has aided the News to render this distinguished service to the people. The Chilton County News has been published with the interest of Clanton and Chilton County and sound democratic principles as its guiding lights, and will continue in the future to strive and push forward with this interest still at heart.

Farm Plans For 1931

Within a few weeks plans for farm operations for the coming crop season must be made, and, as always, those who adopt a well-balanced program will be better off at the end of the year than those who proceed in haphazard fashion.

In many cases it seems almost impossible to impress upon the farmer the importance of producing his own food and stock feed at home. A good garden, a milk cow or two, hogs to provide meat, some chickens and sufficient pasturage, hay and corn for his livestock would do more to relieve the farmer's condition than all the relief he may expect from the government or any other outside source.

Agricultural leaders, county agents, farm magazines and local newspapers have urged such a program for years, but in most cases with little result. But the failure to follow such a plan is the reason for much of the distress w[illegible]h now exists among the farm population.

The Business Outlook

Since the beginning of the year much space has been given by newspapers and magazines to a discussion of the business and industrial outlook. Predicitions of a rapid restoration of normal conditions are not being made nearly so freely as they were a year ago, yet expert opinion is in the main optimistic.

Reports from many industrial centers show that about 100,000 men were put back to work in automobile, railroad and other industries in a single week, and further reports of increased forces have been of daily occurrence.

While so far those given jobs represent only a small percentage of the unemployed, it is encouraging that a start in the direction of industrial revival has been made.

In the meantime much is being done by governmental and other agencies in an effort to afford emergency relief to those who are actually suffering for the necessities of life; but this task is an enormous one, and distress is likely to be widespread for some time to come.

While it is generally conceded that recovery from the depression will be slow, many leaders believe that when normal times do arrive again the country will be on a sounder basis than ever before. That will certainly be true if all the people will heed the lessons of recent months and cooperate intelligently to avoid another orgy of overproduction, speculation and other excesses, such as that which brought about our present plight.

Confidence in your fellowman is certainly going to play a great part in bringing about real prosperous times. So many instances have I heard of those who could put their thumbs down on helping a fellow who is down (but not out). Those concerns that are squeezing the nickels now, even tho they are plenty able to turn loose a few to help others, are certainly not doing their part in hastening the return of prosperity. Why, it looks to me like now is the time for them to let go a little money, because folks need it and are willing to pay for it. So why not take advantage of the situation and make money with your money. Not a bad idea, if I do say so.

* * * *

Well, now what do you think, dear readers. Haven't I been telling you that this newspaper I've been so diligently writing for, was a real newspaper? I had almost filled this column up for this week, when in comes the announcement that the award for the most outstanding service of any weekly newspaper in Alabama, had been given the News. So I just had to take out some of the other I wrote and ask to get this in, because I got mentioned in the report on this award, and being egotistical as I am, I wanted to call your attention to that fact.

Now, I guess you will si up and take notice of me and my rambling thoughts. I'll amount to something yet, eh? Well, I have my opinion about this thing and about some people I know. Folks, I just feel like I could do most anything now, so let's go. Chilton County has walked away with an honor that most every other county would like to have, in getting this loving cup for distinguished service. It was cooperation with a capital C, that did the trick. Let's keep it up.

Women Ought Not Read This

This little squibb is a message in sympathy of the men round town. The women would be advised not to read it.

I do not believe that it would contribute one item of peace to the mind of any woman. I usually have the last word too,—could a more unusual punishment be given a woman? Ever since the time Eve led Adam out into this world of bill collectors, tax gatherers, policemen, temptating flappers, the power of man has been weakening. And so now, as it looks like this power is going to reach the vanishing point, I'm giving this timely, yet weighty hint to the men folks. I fully realize, as other men do, that man's path is piled high with failures in this direction. Looks like every time men try to establish a fraternity or society, before it gets going good, the women come along and organize something like it and call it an auxilliary, or aid. And soon the men are kept busy following the dictations of the women's organization. No doubt, men, I will be in sore need of your help when this column comes out this week, and the women read it. I know they will read it, although I warned them not to at the beginning. That's the way of a woman, you tell them not to do something, and darned if they don't just do it or bust something. There is a possibility that someday, some man will be awarded a medal from Congress, for his bravery in leading a successful or failing fight against the wiles of the women. But, as thing are running with me along this line, looks like I'm going to fight a losing fight, and finally give in. But I'll make it hot for the one that makes me give in to her. Just wait.

* * * *

Sorry I had to make that outburst against the women, but I've been bothered with them so much lately—they just will not let me alone, so I'd had to express my feelings somehow, and felt this was the safest way, provided the editor will let it get by. But he don't know much about women, so maybe he will not understand it as I do. Sometimes I pity the old fellow, and feel sorry for him, just because he is not up much on this subject, and he won't listen to me, and my telling him that someday he is going to be snared, gobbled up, roped, tied, and every other thing by some woman, if he don't watch out.

* * * *

If I get by with that last crack, and those about the men, I'll be all right for awhile.

* * * *

Looks like we are going to have another bowling alley in town, in spite of it. Well, guess I'll do a little personal looking-into that matter, and see how I like it. It's kind of new to me now. You know about my personal investigations.

Chanced to be down near the railroad the other afternoon and a freight train was passing. The major part of the train was made up of flat cars bearing new rails for some railroad. Now that looks like things are getting back to where they ought to be. It sure looked good to me, because I realized that to turn out a shipment like that, it took lots of men back to work. Boys, let the good work go on.

I'm telling you, we have certainly got a swell little town, and county too, as far as landscaping is concerned. Heard a fellow talking the other day, who had been up in the air, to view our metropolis, and he says he had no idea that Clanton was so well laid off in blocks and that it looked so good from the air. Said it made him feel prouder of his town. Now, that's the way I like to hear folks talk about their home town.

* * * *

In this space I desire to extend to the Conaway family of the Mulberry Community, my deepest sympathy in their recent bereavement of the sudden and shocking deaths in their family, taking from them their young loved ones. I feel, too, that in doing this I am also expressing the sympathy of this newspaper. "Every man's life is a fairy tale, written by God's fingers." So He has written this chapter into the Conaway family. He doeth all things right, so may we think that He wanted these innocent young ones with Him in Heaven.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

I sat in with the farmers meeting at the Court House, and listened to what experts had to say about economic conditions. While there I pondered many things. I wondered why it was that men from all over the county would gather in such great crowds to listen to men tell them about cotton production and cattle prices, and then gather in such small crowds to hear God's Man tell them about character production and the merits of eternal life. It seems to me that people are more interested in making a living than they are in living. As I looked upon that great throng of people gathered in and around the Court House my heart went out to them that I might lead them to my Lord.

The speakers gave this reason and that one for the economic depression, but they missed the mark all around. What is back of this depression that is upon us? There are two causes and two alone—our forgetting God and our wasteful way of living. Mr. Babson tells us that the cause of the depression is that American life has gone beyond its spiritual attainments. He tells us that our prosperity must now stop until we bring up our spiritual life. My advice to the people of Chilton County is that you go back to God and make Him first. You get back to your church life and show church loyalty. Observe God's holy day and make it a day of worship. Stop your fast way of living and get your hands gripped on the things that are worth while, and stay by your home. If that vast host of men at the Court House would come back to God, and become just the kind of man that God wants each to be, in less than twelve months there would be no depression in Chilton County. The surest way to keep hard times in the land is to keep God out of the heart. No man liveth unto himself.

I heard some farmers talking and they seemed to be of the opinion that the government was going to untie a big sack that day, and dish out a portion of cash to every man in the county. That may have helped to swell the size of the crowd. We have learned to be present when we hope to get something for nothing. For many years we have been "Rolling our dollars away" and now that we have no dollars to roll, we are looking for a good spirit who will have mercy on us and roll the dollars back to us. The sooner we realize that the government is not going to roll dollars to us, the better for us. The government is wise enough to only help the folks who are willing to help themselves. That is why the experts were present to tell us how to bring about production and how to make a living.

The best advice that I heard at the meeting was uttered by one of the speakers when he told the crowd to go back home and do their best to make a living and stop this wild desire to make money. He advised that the family board at home as well as the mule, the cow, the pig, the hen and the cat. A ship was out in the ocean—off the mouth of the great Amazon river in South America. They had no water and they signalled to a passing ship, "Stop and give us water!" The other ship signalled back, "Let down your buckets where you are." They did so and found fresh water with which to satisfy their thirst. The time has come when we must stop signalling to the government for help, but let down our buckets where we are and make a living at home. Booker Washington gave good advice to the colored race when he told them to "Let down your bucket where you are." Try that land that is all around your little country home and see what it contains to keep the wolf away from your door. It is longing to pour corn into your barn, meat into your barrel, syrup into your cans, potatoes into your bank, hay into your loft, eggs into your pan and lard into your bucket.

I could see pictured on the faces of many the determination to go out and do the thing that they were told to do. They seemed to think that they could do it. That fellow who came down the stairway saying "It can't be done" will be coming back next fall with an earnest appeal to the government crying for help. I heard one man say, "I think that I can do that very thing," and next fall that fellow is going to have a living at home. He may not be able to own an automobile and he may not have money with which to buy gas, but he will have plenty to eat and his children will not go hungry. Can you make a living? Let's all join in on the song, "I think I can" and next fall you will be happy as you look at your full smoke-house and your bulging barn and then you will sing, "I thought I could. I thought I could." No man is ever whipped until he thinks he is whipped. Folks, let's go back to God, back to our churches, back to the simple life of living at home, and then just as sure as there is a God in the heavens, we will become a prosperous people again.

IDEAL DRY GOODS COMPANY TO CONTINUE IN MAPLESVILLE

A few weeks ago, the management of the Ideal Dry Goods Co., of Maplesville, announced to the public that that store would be closed and put in connection with the Clanton Cash Store at Clanton, which store is operated by the same parties, Jesse Baker and O. B. DeLoach.

This announcement has been recalled by these men, and definite decision has been made stating that the Ideal Dry Goods Company will remain in business at Maplesville, as usual. This decision was made following protests from various citizens of Maplesville, and that section, to the closing of the store, according to the operators, and coupled with these protests and an increase in business of the store, caused the management to decide to allow the place to remain as a business house of Maplesville.

STATES WIDOWS OUTNUMBER WIDOWERS NEARLY 3 TO 1

There were almost three times as many widows as widowers in Alabama when the federal census was taken in April, 1930, the Census Bureau shows, there being 110,080 widows and only 38,946 widowers in the state, a higher proportion of widows than the census shows for other states.

The percentage of married females 15 years of age and over is larger than that of males, and there also is a larger percentage of divorced women than men.

Males 15 years of age and over in the state April 1, 1930, numbered 835,246, of whom 266,977, or 32 per cent, were single; 521,268, or 64.2 per cent, married; 4.7 per cent widowed; 0.9 per cent divorced.

Of the 861,967 females 15 years of age or older, 214,039, or 24.8 per cent were single; 524,158, or 60.8 per cent married; 12.8 per cent widowed and 1.5 per cent divorced.

The percentage of single among foreign-born whites is relatively small, mainly because most foreign-born whites are past the usual age of marriage. The percentage of single and married among negro males and females is lower than among native whites, while the percentage of widowed and divorced is higher.

These figures, which the report states, are subject to slight corrections.

Boy Scout Activities of Clanton

Dan Smith, Troop Reporter

Well, I'm back again this week folks. Sorry I did not have anything the past few weeks. Our troop has been real busy lately.

I don't beljeve I have told you about our new Scoutmaster. Our new Scoutmaster is John D. Mullins, who filled the vacancy left recently by the resignation of H. T. Walker, at the sorrow of the entire troop, but we have found in Mr. Mullins another fine fellow, and we like him.

Since, unfortunately, I missed one troop meeting, I will have to tell you about the last one, held on last Friday night. But before I go any further let me tell you about our new meeting place. Until a few weeks ago, the regular meeting place had been at the office of the County Agent, but since the night has been changed to Friday night, we had to move to the basement of the Baptist church, due to the fact that the Girl Scouts will use the office of the County Agent on Friday nights.

Now we will return to the troop meeting. As there was no business to bring up before the meeting, we devoted our time to playing wholesome games, suitable for Boy Scouts. The first game was Capturing the Flag, a very exciting one. This was followed by the game called Crane and Crow, one that required quick thinking and cooperation on brain and muscle of the body. After this other games were played by the two patrols. The next meeting will be held on Friday night at six-thirty.

Reduce the Acid

SICK stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips Milk of Magnesia; one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. For 50 years the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians have prescribed for 50 years.

Fred W. Stewart, of Montgomery was brought to the Central Alabama Hospital here last Monday morning early suffering from injuries received in an automobile accident just north of Thorsby.

They were picked up by a passing motorist and brought to Clanton.

TROOP 51, LAY DAM, GETS DOWN TO BUSINESS

Last Friday night, January 23, 1931, Troop No. 51, met at their meeting house at Lay Dam. We had a meeting that every Scout enjoyed.

We elected an assistant Scoutmaster who is known as Mr. E. W. Lakeman. We must all know him as a fine young man, I call him. Afterwards, we started getting down to real business.

We divided our troop into two patrols, then the boys elected assistant patrols leaders as well as patrol leaders.

The names of the two patrols are Flying Eagle Patrol and Bob White Patrol. Then we got out our books and started work on our Second Class test. We ended up by saying the Scout Law.

Organization Of High School Orchestra

Miss Ann Lou Burns of the Meeks School of Music at Selma has organized a very promising class of pupils in both string and wind instruments. We can't say at this early beginning just what the future will be, but we feel that a splendid class will be going in a few days. Miss Burns stated that she would have them ready to play in public within thirty days if they kept up the enthusiasm that they have at this time.

Dr. Haskew Visits School
By Sallie Mahan

Bro. D. W. Haskew honored the school again with a visit. He gave a short encouraging talk, in which he brought out the importance of keeping a definite goal in view if one is to attain complete success. To emphasize his point he made some very graphic illustrations: One was to make a straight line through the snow is to look at a tree on the other side of the field instead of looking at your feet as you walk along. Another one was to turn your wheel to the left if your boat was going towards the right, and to the right if it turned to the left and look straight ahead to the shore.

Basket Ball Games

Wednesday night Chilton High met and defeated Bibb County High at the Calera indoor court. The whole Chilton team played well and showed some nifty pass work. The final score was 34 to 11 in Chilton's favor.

On Friday afternoon, January 30, the local team will meet the strong Selma team on Chilton's court. Come and "root" for your colors.

Tomorrow afternoon, Wednesday, at 3:00, Holtville will invade our court for a return game with our boys. We are looking forward to a scrappy game in both of these contests.

Humorettes

Young Hubby: "Dearest, what did you do with that rubber plant Aunt Agatha gave us?"

Young Wife: "I put it upstairs, honey. Why do you ask?"

Young Hubby: "Oh, for no particular reason. I was just wondering what kind of salad this is."

"Repeat the words the defendant used," said the lawyer.

"I'd rather not," said the witness, timidly; "they were hardly words to tell a gentleman."

"Ah," said the attorney, "then whisper them to the judge."

A kindly landlady inquired of the young bride how she and her husband proposed to spend their holiday.

"Our plans so far," replied the bride, "are tentative."

"Oh, how delightful!" exclaimed the landlady. "I'm sure you'll enjoy camping out more than anything else you could do."

FORD SMOOTHNESS

The new Ford has more than twenty ball and roller bearings

EVIDENCE of the high quality built into the new Ford is the extensive use of ball and roller bearings. There are more than twenty in all — an unusually large number. Each bearing is adequate in size and carefully selected for the work it has to do.

At some points in the Ford chassis you will find ball bearings. At others, roller bearings are used regardless of their higher cost. The deciding factor is the performance of the car.

The extensive use of ball and roller bearings in the new Ford insures smoother operation, saves gasoline, increases speed and power, gives quicker pick-up, decreases noise, and gives greater reliability and longer life to vital moving parts.

Other outstanding features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, the extensive use of fine steel forgings, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

MAIN STREET Looks at BROADWAY

Sea Sickness? Not Much

Let the thermometer rise to within a fractional point near spring or summer warmth and New Yorkers by the thousands will flock down to "dat ol' debbil sea,"—10,000 of them in fact.

Last Sunday, crowds, attracted by the warm sun (52 degrees warm) strolled on the boardwalk or beach at Coney Island. They began to arrive early in the day, and concession owners opened their restaurants or oiled wheels of merry-go-rounds as each train and trolley brought more.

Several clubs of winter bathers, who make regular pilgrimages to the surf, welcomed others who braved the cold water for a few moments.

Fifty patrolmen from nearby precincts aided in handling the unexpected crowd.

Check And Rubber Check

Standing on the busiest corners these days are men selling checks—rubber ones. They hold them high in the air, stretch them back and forth and cry, "Buy a check of the Bank of United States. Five cents, They always bounce back."

Thus a bank failure has by so much decreased the ranks of the unemployed.

Aquarium

A sign displayed on a compartment containing live specimens of fish at the aquarium in Battery Park reads:

"These fish are capable of changing color eight times in as many minutes."

We shudder to think what would happen if they tried out some of the modern dances.

Chameleon Canine

New York is fast stealing Pittsburgh's shady reputation as the smokiest city if you ask Mr. A. Townsend Kaplan.

He recently brought a complaint against the Washington Square extension of New York University charging the university with emitting such dense clouds of smoke that it was impossible for his dog to take his usual outing on the roof without changing color. His white dog turned coal black every time he is taken out, says Mr. Kaplan. He understands that dogs get dirty, yes, but questions the need of a dog turning from white to black in five minutes.

"If I wanted a black dog, I would have bought a black dog," he says bitterly.

Maxic Silencer

The rumbling of an elevated train going past a pawnshop drowned out the noise of shattering glass when a gem thief heaved a brick through the window some days ago. The proprietor didn't know it had happened until he went to the window to point out some jewelry to a customer. But the jewelry was gone, and so was the brick-thrower together with three bracelets, one of them set with 148 diamonds, valued at $2,000.

Trafficalities

Here are some statistics for you "busiest corner in the world" fans.

Figures supplied by the deputy police commissioner show that the busiest traffic corner in New York now is Park Avenue and 57th Street, where 42,377 automobiles pass every twelve hours. The junction of Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street, heretofore the "busiest corner" now stands fourth in the list of police traffic tallies.

In the height of the summer season, Ocean and Fort Hamilton Parkways, Brooklyn, is the most heavily traveled, 57,896 cars having been counted in twelve hours, due to the Coney Island rush. In fall and winter the total is cut in half.

Class dismissed!

Why Pay More?

His store sells cigarettes, cigars, candy and refreshments at cut-rate prices. It is about 6 feet wide and 25 feet deep. While buying some articles there, we remarked that he must do a pretty good business at such a good location.

"We have to," he replied, "to pay the rent. How much is it? $8,000 a year."

(Yes, thank you, I think I'll stick to batting out a column.) W.K.

Miss Peachblow: I hope you won't feel hurt because I refused you.

Mr. Breaker: Not at all! Not at all! I assure you. I feel honored, positively honored. I'd rather be refused by you than anyone I know.

INTEREST CENTERED ON ACCIDENT PREVENTION

The problem of automobile accident prevention with its many related factors, will come in for much legislative consideration during 1931.

Many state have signified their intention of adopting laws requiring rigid examinations of drivers. This is believed by many authorities to be the best single means of keeping the dangerous driver off public highways.

In a few states compulsory insurance legislation will be considered, but in view of the unsatisfactory experience of Massachusetts, it is doubtful if it will be passed. More generally popular is the "safety responsibility law," now in effect in New York, Connecticut and other states. This law provides that a driver, after causing an accident, must provide proof of his financial responsibility before being allowed to again operate a car.

Laws for periodical inspections of cars for controlling pedestrians walking on the highways, and far banishing ancient and dilapidated motor vehicles, have likewise been proposed and will receive due consideration.

In the aggregate, the vast volume of suggestions for improving highway safety gives good reason for optimism. Every step taken, no matter how small, means that at least a few lives are saved, a few pieces of property protected. The public is reaching a state of mind that gives no encouragement to those who, through carelessness and incompetence, sow death along the highways.

V-C FERTILIZERS FILL EVERY ROW WITH PROFITS.

"When markets drop, some farmers let their next crop go hungry for fertilizer. But that's not the way to save," says Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture. The right way to cut production costs is to use more fertilizer, good V-C fertilizer, and to grow bigger crops, better crops, on fewer acres.

"The cultivation of the earth is the most important labor of man."—Daniel Webster

"A great many farmers are inclined to buy fertilizer simply on the basis of price. But fertilizers should be bought on the basis of Quality."—J. M. Purdom, Atlantic Coast Line Railroad.

It's not what a farmer can raise, but what he can sell at a profit, that makes the money.

My Best Girl

BY

KATHLEEN NORRIS

FIFTH INSTALLMENT

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter carrier, is the domestic drudge of the humble home where her mother does little except bemoan the fact that she has "seen better days" and her sister Liz, who works in a beauty shop, lies abed late. Maggie has to get the family breakfast before she starts out to her job in the Five-and-Ten-Cent Store.

There's a new boy at the Five-and-Ten, Joe Grant. He tells Maggie that he has been assigned to work as her helper in the stock room. He seems rather dumb, but Maggie helps him through his first day at the store and shares her lunch with him in a cubby-hole of a place that belongs to a mattress factory next door to the Five-and-Ten.

They are looking over some cheap picture cards. One of them has a motto that strikes Maggie's fancy. "The way to begin the ideal life is to begin." She and Joe talk about that and Joe is surprised that the girl has higher standards than he has suspected. When he goes home that night he is thinking about Maggie. And his home is the home of the owner of the Mack Five and Ten-Cent Stores, though Maggie does not suspect that he is the boss's son.

Maggie, at home, begins to suspect that her mother's complaints are due to that lady's belief that happiness depends upon material things, while at the store she continues to surprise Joe by her appreciation of the realities of life.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"A lot of it's bluff," he said carelessly. But he liked her blind admiration, nevertheless.

"Does your mother work?" she asked him one day.

"My——?" He started, considered. "Not now," he said. "She split a Board the other day," he said, after thought.

Maggie saw nothing unnatural in this. She visualized a sturdy bareheaded old woman helping with the family supply of kindling.

"What does your father do, Joe?"

"The only real work Dad does now is on a golf course, at a country club," Joe answered scrupulously.

"A gardener?" she asked, widening her eyes. "A caretaker?"

It was a shame to tease her, but then she was such a simple little dumbbell, Joe reflected. Grimy little face, grimy little hands, mud-colored apron, and boots a size too big.

Maggie was talking.

". . . but she was quite a swell. She didn't have much money, mind ju, but he did. Mackenzie was in the business then, an' they say he named his son for him."

There was a familiar ring about these facts; could she possibly be speaking of her employer and of his father?

"What on earth are you talking about?" he asked blankly.

"Merrill," she answered readily. "Mackenzie was the brains, they say—he was the 'Mack'—but he's dead. But Merrill is the soul of honour, and he not only has the faculty of drawin' good men about him, but he has made a small fortune out of the Mack, took care of most of her family, an' has kep' sev'ral of her relatives out of jail for what they done profiteering in wartime as well!"

Joe was staring at her, oddly, a slow smile spreading on his face.

"Who taught you that piece?"

"Ev'ryone knows that."

"Is—that—so?" He grinned. Relatives of his mother kept out of jail, eh? That was probably Uncle Irving and young Irv.

He looked at her, musing in his turn. "I'd like to walk Maggie in on the old man some day—or better yet, walk him into the store and introduce Maggie as the fine, independent girl he's always talking about," Joe reflected. "I'd say, 'You keep suggesting that I get out somewhere and meet a real girl—well, she's real, Maggie. And she's going to step right off the floor of the Mack into the position of your only daughter-in-law!' "

"I might bluff it, anyway," his thoughts ran on. "Maggie's such a little sport, she'd enjoy playing the part. She'd make up for it and carry it off like a comedienne!"

But he couldn't play any games with Maggie. The poor kid was falling in love with him fast enough as it was.

"It's probably her first crush," Joe thought, watching her not without a sort of generous pity. "She'll have it bad. But it won't hurt her, it never hurts anyone."

She was far enough from any appreciation now, at all events, as she chattered on of everything she found interesting, sometimes making him laugh, sometimes—oddly—giving him a prick behind the eyes that owed itself to a very different sensation. Maggie had never thought of love, for herself.

Her own affairs, indeed, were entirely secondary.

But she betrayed herself to Joe with almost every word and glance.

"I'll tell you what, Joe, I like you better than anyone else except my own fam'ly!"

"Don't like me as well as your sister, huh?"

"Well, I like some things about you as well as I like anythin' about Liz," she might finally decide.

The little figure drooped against a length of drab-painted brick wall, the small, hard-worn hands were clasped in one of her rare moments of idleness, and her absently staring eyes wore an unusual expression of sorrow and doubt. Joe's heart pricked him.

"I hope you're not beginning something that you can't finish, Maggie!" he said to himself more than once.

One day he brought her a long envelope, which, upon opening it in an expectant flutter, Maggie found full of printed "G's," large and small, cut from magazines and newspapers.

"Oh, Joe, it's awful cute the way you learn me!" she said, her betraying eyes luminous, her whole being melting toward him visibly, irresistibly. And she presently reported that her mother and sister had made dry, half-contemptuous reference to the fact that she did not drop the ubijuitous final consonant any more.

She told him that he had brought her all her luck.

"It was the day you first"—she paused—"first came," she resumed briskly, deciding upon her verb, "that I got on to the ideel idea. And then 'member that you gave me one that night going home? Well, I put it up by the clock, and we—we just about live by that card. It's made a difference in Pa, an' it's made a difference in me, an' in everything."

"I see a difference in you," he said seriously.

"Oh, Joe, honest—do you?"

"Honest, I do."

"How?"

"Well, in everything. The way you talk, the way you look, the way you act," he said.

"Oh, I wisht—" she said elatedly—"I wisht you could see the difference in our kitchen! Pop, an' I ask each other every night, 'Is it ideel?' And we won't go to bed unless it is!"

It soothed him to have her so openly, so completely adoring.

She thought him brilliant, she thought him well educated, she thought him wise and witty and lovable, when his own failed him.

And her laughter! The divine, the inimitable gift of mirth had been given her—Joe first thought Maggie pretty when he first saw her laugh. She lived in a delicious gale of it.

That little soft touch on his coat, that little soft girl-person jumbled against his shoulder for a minute, in the crowded aisle, those black-fringed eyes brimming with mirth and affection — those were all darned agreeable things, his thoughts would agree.

A hundred times, a thousand times, he heard her call herself lucky.

With her usual eager rush she retailed a hundred reasons. Her health, her wonderful family, her mother—described as "genteel," her dashing sister, who had such a good job and her father—without whose assistance Maggie's yearnings toward the "ideal life" would have been crushed in the bud, and whose companionship meant everything to the washer of the Johnson dishes and the keeper of the Johnson kitchen.

"But you've had hard luck, Joe," she agreed pityingly.

This vexed him, too. Or perhaps the prickling, uncomfortable emotion it aroused, was not vexation, but something deeper—something nearer compunction. Of course he had had a rotten deal. But for Maggie to be the one to see it!

"How d'ye mean I've had hard luck?"

"Oh, well, every way! You weren't raised for this kind of work—and you hate it, and you keep thinkin' that you'd rather be somewhere else, doin' something else, an' you don't like these girls here in the Mack?"

"Does your mother cook well?" she asked.

"None. Doesn't know a darn thing about cooking," Joe confessed.

"Don't your father help her none any?" Maggie asked.

"Never. The old man is no more use around the house than a paper monkey!"

"Joe, I do think that's pretty hard on you! Who makes your bed?"

"Oh, anybody. Last night I had dinner with some friends of ours named Russell," Joe volunteered.

"And did she give you a good dinner?"

"Oh, yes—she cooks all right." An odd look came into Joe's eyes. "Her daughter was there."

"Daughter? An' her husband?"

"No. Mill—Milly's not married."

"The daughter ain't?"

"Nope."

"Just a little girl, huh?"

"Nope. Milly's about—nineteen."

"I guess she's pretty, ain't she?"

"She's beautiful."

But he told himself that he must stop this teasing, when he saw her suddenly daunted face, the gallant efforts she made to appear quite herself.

But he saw that her color had ebbed and that the little hand that steadied the boxes was itself unsteady.

He felt oddly shaken. He returned to his own business filled with a wretched sensation that he must somehow make this up to Maggie. Yet—hang it!—the very making up would carry the matter further, and it had gone far enough.

He shook himself physically. He could not shake the thought away. He unlucky—with the roadster parked a few blocks away, and the comfort of one of the State's most beautiful homes back of the roadster. He unlucky—a Merrill playing at work, here in one of the stores he would largely own some day!

More bewildering still, he was beginning to like this play work.

But oddly, unexpectedly, there were moments when the Mack filled his soul with a deep content. Joe revelled in the rush and hurry, the absurdity and yet seriousness of everything that went on in the Mack. Even Smith and Fleming sometimes took Joe into their counsels, as they wandered importantly to and fro.

Joe's championship of Maggie helped her from the very beginning—an obvious fact that made her still more his abject slave. On a dismal early January day Maggie first appeared in what might have been called her normal form he heard the congratulations that the busy girls flung at her from all sides, and congratulated himself that he was partly responsible at least.

She had done no more than electrify everyone by discarding magnificently, and without permission, the disfiguring ticking apron. That was all. But the effect was astonishing.

Everybody looked at her, everybody praised her, and the packing-room boys went down like a row of ten-pins.

It was on this same day that she said to Joe, with a carefully careless air:

"I'll bet, if you fell in love, Joe, it would be with a regular young lady, wouldn't it?"

"How do you mean, regular young lady?" Joe asked.

"Well, I mean—you know, a—a nice—sort of smiling—" Maggie floundered—"I mean—" she began again desperately—"mean, for instance, that there are lots of girls in this store that you couldn't call young ladies!" she said turning scarlet.

"No, you might call them nice girls," Joe conceded, "and you might call them smart girls. But no, you'd hardly call them young ladies."

"Like school teachers and lib'arians," said Maggie.

"Yep. I guess school teachers and librarians would be young ladies all right," Joe laughed. "Leave it to you to think a thing like that!" he said.

"My aunt was a school teacher, Joe," she said, "Joe, how would a person who wasn't a lady get to be one? Somebody must of commenced, once, you know."

"Well, reading the backs of newspapers and magazines about manners, for one thing."

"That helps a lot, and to be always looking for the right way to do things, to be quiet and gentle and listen to the way nice persons speak. And then, of course, there's always the rule that a lady puts the feelings of others before her own—thinks of others first."

"Nice things all join together, don't they, Joe?" she said, in deep thought.

"I don't get you Miss Johnson."

"Here's what I was thinkin': Last Sunday in church they said something about believin' that you have a good thing, and you have it. Not will have it, but have it. An' that's like the ideel life—I wrote that up on the same card. It was in my prayer book, an' I got it all straight. Now those two things go together, don't they, Joe?"

"They do," he said, struck. "But I think that you were smart to see that, Maggie."

When BABIES are Upset

BABY ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready?

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. It's gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant when he cannot sleep. It's mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria.

IMPROVING COTTON CONDITIONS

The Federal Farm Board has issued an appeal to "each individual farmer" urging him "to adjust his farming program in 1931 so as to produce cotton only on the more fertile land" as a way to reduce his cost of production.

The Secretary of Agriculture makes a definite plea in his annual report for efforts to improve the quality of cotton grown in the United States.

These and other official statements show that quality of cotton and economy in production are regarded as of fundamental importance to the agricultural situation in the South. A few active factors in the cotton industry are thoroughly alert to these problems. The Durene Association of America with its strict adherence to the Government's high standard for staple selection, and with its standard mercerizing stipulations never before so highly set, is fostering the Federal Farm Board's program by finding and improving upon increasingly large markets for quality cotton.

This manner of cooperation between the quality mercerized yarn group and the Federal Government is not only to the interests of the Southern farmers but also of distinct service to the American public making it possible for them to identify fiber and precessing excellence in cotton merchandise bought blindly until recently.

Farmers Advised Grow More Corn

That Alabama Farmers will profit by growing more corn is proved by figures released by F. W. Gist, statistician of the Department of Agriculture showin that "the corn crop of last year was about half of the needs of farmers, to say nothing of other folks who would buy from them if they had it to sell."

Mr. Gist reported that corn was harvested from 2,800,000 acres and at a yield obtained about five and a half million acres to corn would have been necessary to supply farm needs.

"If the yield of 1927 (15.1 bushels per acre) be the standard it would require about 4,000,000 acres" he said. This would take at least a million acres from cotton, or a reduction of about 26 per cent. This plan, while it might at present peak yields give enough corn, would still be unwise. The cost of corn production, as in all other commodities, depends upon acre-yields. The corn yield of 1927, while it was our highest, was still ridiculously low, and especially in some counties. In thirty-six counties that year the yield was below the average for the state, and last year only seven counties produced as much as 15 bushels per acre, while thirty-one produced less than 10. Corn can not be grown profitable at maximum yields and our minimums will always leave us short unless we use more acres than practicable.

Farmers have not only learned to produce profitable yields of cotton, but most of them are doing it when they get a fair price. Just as easily they can learn to produce profitable yields of corn. Readjustment of both corn acreage and corn yields is at the present time the chief problem of the Alabama farmer.

MANY FARMERS SCARCE OF HAY

Fifty-five per cent of Alabama farmers saved no hay last year, according to F. W. Gist statistician of the Department of Agriculture, who said: "Only Calhoun and Henry are outstanding in the large portion of farms saving hay, while in 16 counties more than three-fourths of the farms reported none."

Chilton County Abstract Co.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you looked at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

News Awarded Loving Cup For Service

nalism field from various part of the state.

The report of the Committee on Awards as read at the meeting of the press association in Montgomery Saturday, by Grover C. Hall, the able and distinguished editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, is as follows:

"There is no yardstick by which any weekly newspaper may be measured in promoting the welfare of its constituency. Your committee charged with the duty of selecting the weekly newspaper which has performed the most outstanding service to its readers, has chosen a newspaper which in its judgment has backed the needs of its county in the best manner. To quote from our circular letter of July 3, 1930, which was also given to the editors at the Birmingham midwinter meeting in January, 1930 we said: "——the main question is quality and quantity of service in determining the newspaper which has done the most for its readers." A newspaper is also judged by what it has tried to do, as well as by what it has done.

"Demonstrated leadership for higher standards of life is required. Your committee realizes that it is difficult and slow work to move civilization forward, and yet, this is the first great function of the American press: to record and sponsor progress.

"The Chilton County News of Clanton, Alabama, has sponsored a number of outstanding features for the benefit of Chilton County. We make no attempt to measure them or all, or to name them. From a study of copies of the News as they come to our desks we glean the following:

1. It stood for a county agent and helped secure one.
2. It furthered securing a county welfare worker.
3. It backed the getting of a rural school supervisor.
4. It sponsored the community chest drive successfully.
5. It is published: "In the interest of Clanton and Chilton County."

"Since both "Quality" and "Quantity" of news and editorials are to be considered, we submit still further particulars gleaned from copies of the Chilton County News. or sent us by citizens nominating the editor, Billy Smith, of Clanton.

Some of the Features Noted by the Committee

It has backed drainage for Clanton as an aid to industry and development.

It carries County Agent news weekly, also news from other County workers.

It gave widespread publicity to Farm Bureau drive in May, 1929.

It stood for 9 full months of school for rural Chilton County.

It gives liberally of school news from all parts of the County.

It has regular column for Chilton County High School news.

It has 4 to 8 columns of Chilton County local items and news.

It carries local columns from Thorsby and Verbena.

The County Ayent says he receives full cooperation.

Civic oryanizations, especially the Kiwanis speak well of news treatment.

It has a clean cut, constructive editorial page of 1 to 2 columns weekly.

It has an editorial page feature column by "Doug".

It carries features on home economics, farm news, State Capitol news, etc.

It boosts new home industries, see paper of January 17, 1929.

It uses cuts of new preachers, County Agent, groups of school workers, etc.

"The above are the main features gleaned from a limited number of issues. It is not meant that we have mentioned all excellencies, nor do we mean to give the editor all the credit for putting over all of the good things done in the County. Society is too complex to define credit in this manner.

"Your committee has judged what the editor tried to do, how hard and with what persistence he tried to do it and the probable results he should achieve. The Victor Hanson Cup is awarded for service and results and appearance and manner of service is secondary. We, therefore. 'award' The Victor Hanson loving cup for 1929 and 1930, for the greatest service to constituents to editor Billy Smith, of the Chilton County News."

Howard C. Smith, Feature Writer,
P. O. Davis,
Grover C. Hall, Chairman.

The cup was handed to the editor of the Chilton County News, following the reading of the report, by Dr. Frank Willis Barnett, widely known feature writer and speaker of Birmingham, Alabama.

Since the purchase of the Chilton County News in 1927, by J. B. Atkinson, attorney, it has been operated under a policy to work for a bigger and better Chilton County, striving to give to the people the news in a clear and precise manner, carrying as much helpful information in its columns as permitted, boosting Chilton County to the best of its ability, and offering its services to the people in a wholehearted manner.

Those comprising the personnel of the Chilton County News during the time covered by this award are J. B. Atkinson, as publisher, later selling to Billy Smith, editor; Vernie Teel, associate editor and in charge of the mechanical department, and John VanDerveer, Jr. Since last month an addition to the News force was made in the person of Bonnie Hand, apprentice.

Among other places sending in reports are South Clanton and West End. Reports and comments coming in indicate that much interest is being shown in this drive for funds for the needy of the county, and more interest has been shown in the past week, it was stated. This report is also shown in evidence of the vast amount of clothing and food sent in. The Chilton County Chest Fund drive will continue through this month or longer, and final reports will be published in the very near future.

Committees that were appointed or volunteered during the time arrangements were being made, are working more than ever on the drive this year, and are receiving the hearty cooperation of all citizens in this work.

Harvester Company To Observe Anniversary

ment of transportation, and the great industrial revolution. This revolution swept the United States and the world. Millions of people were enabled to leave their farms, settle new territory, and build great cities. The percentage of persons engaged in agriculture to the total population gainfully employed has decreased from about 80 percent during 1831 to less than 25 percent at the present date, which indicates clearly the increase in the producing ability of the average farmer. One readily realizes that this offers the opportunity for the remaining population to engage in the development and production of the many comforts and luxuries now enjoyed by all of us.

Throughout the United States and the world the International Harvester Company and distributors of their products are celebrating this advent which has meant so much to civilization. At certain points in every state and country special programs commemorating the invention of the reaper are being planned.

According to announcement received by the News from a representative of the International Harvester Company, definite arrangements were made at a meeting in Birmingham on Monday, January 19th, for holding this Celebration at Clanton, Alabama, on Wednesday, February 4th, beginning at ten o'clock a.m. and lasting until 3 o'clock p.m. The meeting will be held in the Wadesonian Theatre building here, in cooperation with C. E. Hornsby, local McCormick-Deering dealer.

The plans for the program consist of motion pictures, short instructive talks by officials of the Harvester Company and others. They will also have on display an exact reproduction of the original reaper.

Those in charge anticipate a great program here on February 4th, and urge that all those in this county and entire section make it a point to be present for this Celebration.

HARRIS BROTHERS STORE IN SOUTH CLANTON DESTROYED

Fire completely destroyed the Harris Brothers Store and filling station in South Clanton, early yesterday morning.

Origin of the fire had not been determined at this time, but early arrivals at the scene said it started in the rear of the building, a frame structure. The building was owned by A. C. Harris, and D. W. Harris, brothers, who had spent a neat sum of money recently on making the filling station attractive.

The local volunteer department answered the call, but due to there being no water connections in South Clanton, they were unable to assist but little, and that to only the extent of keeping a lookout for other buildings nearby. The building was a total loss with its entire contents.

Goodwill - A Community Asset

This being an address delivered before the Clanton Kiwanis Club at their meeting on Thursday of last week by Dr. D. W. Haskew, pastor of the Clanton Methodist church. Dr. Haskew kindly consented to allow the News to publish this address this week, for which we express our appreciation.—The Editor.

Friends of the Kiwanis Club, I am happy to be with you about this festal board today. I am glad of the opportunity to bring to you the message of this hour. We are thinking today about the question of Good-Will as a Community Asset, and I assure you that it is a question of vital importance to each of us and to all of us.

The most of you are fathers and you know what it means, and you know how you feel, when your child comes home with a hundred percent report from his teacher in school. That report makes you swell with pride, and whether you say so or not, your judgment is that you have a very fine boy in your home. The thought that I want to get home to you at this time, is that we should have a city located on the Montgomery - Birmingham highway, that is one hundred percent in her records as a community of civic pride. In order to do that we must be one hundred percent in our good will for Clanton. It is needless for me to ask you, "Do you really love Clanton?" That is evident among this bunch of men, but I may ask, "Are you a bundle of walking and talking propaganda for your home town?" I know a lot of men who have just as good a wife as any man need to want, but you would never think so if you were to listen to what he says, and watch the way he acts. You have a good town here in your midst, it is the capitol of Chilton County, and it may be that we have dropped down to that low level of accepting it, just about like we accept our wives, "It is hard to get along with them and hard to get along without them, and so we fume and fuss our lives away." It is difficult for the outside world to determine whether we love or hate our home town.

It is a fact that we make the citizenship of Clanton, and to us the citizenship of this community will be just what we think them to be. A wise old farmer was one day digging post-holes by the side of a highway. Along came a man who had all of his goods on his truck. He stopped to chat with the farmer, and to ask him what kind of people lived over in the next community. The farmer asked him, "What kind of people lived where you came from?" "Why, those people where I came from were terrors," said the man, "And that is why I am moving." "Well," replied the farmer, "You will find the same kind of folks where you are going." The mover traveled on with fear and apprehension. Late that afternoon another truck came along loaded with household goods. It stopped to have a friendly chat with the man. The man on the truck had his family with him,

SOUND BUSINESS METHODS

In time of economic depression most American business corporations bend every effort to retain the services of all employees, to avoid cuts in wages and salaries and to maintain the entire organization required for more prosperous times. Some businesses, of course, have been compelled to retrench and have been obliged to reduce personnel and reduce wage overhead, but as a general practice corporations are utilizing every resource to keep organizations intact.

Joseph Wilshire, president of Standard Brands Incorporated, recently made this statement:

"We have not so far decreased our personnel and we hope to avoid dispensing with the services of any employees, anywhere. We have not decreased wages. Everything else being equal, we believe in holding our organization together at any expense. As sales shows the whole-hearted cooperation of all our employees and justifies their retention. They are all working fulltime, and some of them overtime. which Standard Brands Incorporated was founded, namely, small stocks to the retailer, resulting in quick turnover, is not only fundamentally sound, but expressions received during the past year from the trade indicate that it is practically sound."

American buisiness, with such sound principles behind it, is playing an important part in hastening the day when this country will again enjoy prosperous times.

"INSIDE" INFORMATION

When cooking potatoes, score or prick the skin to let the steam escape.

Ice box cookies can be made from any stiff cookie dough. Instead of rolling out the cookies and cutting them into fancy shapes, roll the dough into a cylindrical piece, cover it with a clean cheesecloth, and store it in the ice box over night to become firm. With a sharp knife slice the cookies off thin when ready to bake them.

The vogue for tomato cocktails, made of the juice of canned tomato, seasoned with salt, pepper, and a little lemon and horseradish, is excellent because it adds to the day's supply of three valuable vitamins—A, B, and C. These vitamins are retained by tomatoes even when they are cooked or canned, and the inclusion of some tomato in the diet as often as possible is recommended by all nutrition specialists.

Leftover egg yolks have many uses. They are a valuable source of iron and so should always be utilized. Hard-cook them in the double boiler, mash, and season for sandwich filling. Or use either hard cooked or raw yolks as a foundation for salad dressing. Raw egg yolks can be mixed with chopped beef to broil in cakes or bake in a roll. Several good egg sauces for fish meat can be made with the yolks, only and soft custard for dessert does not require the whites.

Keeping dirt out of the house is easier than removing it when it has once come through open doors and windows, tracking in, and careless family habits. Remove dust regularly from window sills, porches, steps and walks. Use fine meshed screens, or cheesecloth where much road dirt may be blown in. Put mats and scrapers at the doors, and insist that muddy overshoes and boots be left outside. Provide a place for keeping them near the back entry. An empty orange crate on end makes a good receptacle for rubbers and galoshes.

EIGHT HOURS OF FRESH AIR EVERY NIGHT

By Dr. Christmas Seal

January is the time to make a resolution that fresh air is just as good in winter as in summer and that sleeping room windows shall stay wide open in spite of cold weather. The difference between closed and open windows is one of the chief reasons why there is more illness in winter than in summer.

Dr. Christmas Seal agrees with Professor C. E. A. Winslow of Yale University who says that fresh air is absolutely necessary to heatlh and reminds us that fresh air is outdoor air and the best way to bring it into the house is through open doors and windows. In warm, still air the body can not easily get rid of the heat which it constantly generates. Fresh air carries away this blanket of hot air, relieves feelings of stuffiness and lassitude, and helps us to keep quick and active in mind and body instead of degenerating into old fogyism.

My Best Girl

BY

KATHLEEN NORRIS

SIXTH INSTALLMENT

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter carrier, is the domestic drudge of the humble home where her mother does little except bemoan the fact that she has "seen better days" and her sister, Liz, who works in a beauty shop, lies abed late. Maggie has to get the family breakfast before she starts out to her job in the Five-and-Ten-Cent Store.

There's a new boy at the Five-and-Ten, Joe Grant. He tells Maggie that he has been assigned to work as her helper in the stock room. He seems rather dumb, but Maggie helps him through his first day at the store and shares her lunch with him in a cubby-hole of a place that belongs to a mattress factory next door to the Five-and-Ten.

They are looking over some cheap picture cards. One of them has a motto that strikes Maggie's fancy. "The way to begin the ideal life is to begin." She and Joe talk about that and Joe is surprised that the girl has higher standards than he had suspected. When he goes home that night he is thinking about Maggie. And his home is the home of the owner of the Mack Five and Ten-Cent Stores, though Maggie does not suspect that he is the boss' son.

Maggie, at home, begins to suspect that her mother's complaints are due to that lady's belief that happiness depends upon material things, while at the store she continues to surprise Joe by her appreciation of the realities of life.

Joe knew that Maggie was falling in love with him before Maggie discovered. But he was a little slow in discovering that he, in turn, was falling in love with Maggie. But he admitted to himself that his admiration for her was growing, and the girls in the store began to notice something different about her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"But now, lissen, Joe," she resumed seriously, "here's what I want to ask you. Could anyone who wasn't born to be a lady—now, f'rinstance, like me—my mother talks a lot about my grandmother Petheridge, but—but my mother"—she hesitated—"you wouldn't say she was always puttin' others first, and thinkin-ger an' serving-ger others before she does herself. You couldn't—honest!—say that, Joe. So that—" Again she paused. "An' 'Lizabeth positively is not a lady!" she admitted regretfully. "Well, anyway, I do not think Liz is a lady—not yet, anyway. But Joe—do you think——"

Again she floundered. "I guess I couldn't!" she said hastily, shrinking back, gallant, and she saw she was trying to save his feelings. "You don't have to tell me, Joe," she said.

"Maggie, I not only believe you could but I believe you will!"

"Well, if you say so," she almost sang, and she rattled joyously away.

On the next Sunday he went to see her.

He reached the Johnson cottage in the neighborhood of three o'clock.

He had to wait a few, cold, wet, silent minutes before footsteps, audibly approaching through the house, notified him that it had been heard.

Miss Elizabeth Johnson admitted him. For want of any guidance,—for Liz, after a shout of "Maggie! Man here!" had almost immediately disappeared into what later proved to be her bedroom door,—Joe had followed the little hall into an empty dining room smelling of rotting apples and dust, and had put his head in at the kitchen doorway.

Ma Johnson, a heavy, woolen kimono tied about her ample form with draggled tassels, was in the rocker.

At the sink stood a nondescript, forlorn little figure that Joe could not for some minutes at all identify with the gallant picture he had formed of Maggie's father.

Behind the table and between the sink and the stove was Maggie. She looked at him and said delightedly:

"Well, what do you know! I never heard you ring. If it isn't Joe Grant! Joe, have you had dinner "

"Just up from the table. Hello, Maggie," Joe said, grinning.

"This is my mother, make your acquainted with my father; Pop, this is Joe Grant," said Maggie.

Ma was evidently not favorably impressed by Maggie's friend.

"I didn't know you expected a caller, Maggie."

"I didn't, Ma. Sit down, Joe. You don't have to finish those if you don't want to, Pa I hate to have you—take off your apron."

"Sometimes—my father—kinier helps me, Joe," she stammered, with her gallant little smile.

"I don't mind wipin' 'em one bit, Maggie," her father's mild voice said surprisedly.

"I'll help you," said Joe, putting his hat and coat on a chair in the corner of the kitchen and helping himself to a dish towel.

"When we haven't a maid we eat out here. I'm one that's always had,' said Mrs. Johnson. "So it don't come very easy for me to put up with this sort of thing."

"I see," Joe said, nodding. He sat down on the edge of a chair, and cleared his throat, and said politely:

"Mrs. Johnson, if you've no objection, could Maggie go out with me for a while?"

"Why, I haven't no objections," Mrs. Johnson said discontentedly, after a moment. "Maggie isn't nothing but a child, Mr. Grant, an' her father an' I don't want her to get no silly notions into her head."

"Temp'rarily—temp'rarily she has accepted a position in a—well, in a five-and-ten," said Ma.

"I work there myself, you know, Mrs. Johnson."

"I've no doubt you do! An' I've no doubt it's a real nice place an' all that," conceded Ma loftily. "But it isn't Maggie's sort of place. To put the whole thing into a nut-shell——" Mrs. Johnson was resuming briskly, when Joe's opportunity to discover whether she was really capable of this elision was destroyed by Maggie's abrupt re-entrance into the kitchen, and in another minute they were out in the dull, cold, wintry Sunday street, and she was dancing along at his side.

"Want to go to a movie, Maggie?"

"Oh, I'd love it!"

"How about 'The Highwayman'?"

"Oh, Joe, no! That's a sixty-cent show. There are lots of nice little ones over on Chelsea Avenue here for twenty-five."

They were at the window, he put down his money. But there were nothing left on this Sunday afternoon but loges, at a dollar a chair. Maggie's face fell, and immediately her eyes widened and she caught at his arm.

"Joe, don't be a fool! Two dollars! It isn't worth it!"

But he saw her give a little bounce of sheer excitement and felicity as they went in past the mirrors and marble columns and red boundary ropes, and he thought it was. Their seats were in the very front of the balcony—deep, comfortable seats, with wide arms.

It was pleasant, somehow, to have that earnest little fragrant baby face come close to his in the dark, and that fuzzy aureole of gold brush his cheek, and that eager little whisper reach his ears.

Joe kept his handsome head bent close to hers, and leaned his shoulder even closer.

Her face was beaming with satisfaction and wet with tears when they came out into the chilly dusk.

In parting he presented her with an enormous box of sweets.

"Oh, Joe Grant! Oh, Joe — two pounds! Oh, thank you—thank you!"

"Oh, hush," he said. "Now you run in and I'll watch you until you're inside the door."

She fled up the path, tried the knob of the porch door, called a joyous "Good-night and thank you!" into the dark, was silhouetted against a gush of red light, and then was gone.

Joe walked two blocks to his car, raging at himself.

"Gosh, what a fool I am! What on earth did I do that for?"

Millicent Russell, sitting next to him at dinner, was a pretty girl. From a point an inch or two below her armpits, to a point an inch or two above her knees, she was packed into a tube of spangled satin. Her arms were heavy with links of gold and platinum, her legs looked bare, if they were not actually bare, her feet were elevated dipzily upon pinnacls of gold leather. Her cheeks were smoothly and brilliantly rouged, her lips stiff with grease, her eyebrows shaved into two startling, inky arcs. Millicent's breath was thick of alcohol and nicotine, her eyelids, colored with blue oil, were lowered with fatigue and boredom, and she had no more hair than her brother had.

"I thought you had to go to prison to get a clip like that!" said Joe.

"Isn't it adorable? They call it the cocotte," Millicent told him enthusiastically.

"It's a crown of glory. If I were a girl," Joe said, with sudden fire, "I'd have hair. Beautiful braids and curls and masses—of hair. It's pretty!"

"Say the word, Joe, and I'll be your little covered wagon," suggested Millicent, in an odd tone, and with a daring little laugh.

"Nothing doing. I'm in coll," Joe answered.

"You're not in coll! You're working. I like you an awful lot, Joe. You think I'm crazy, saying this. Perhaps I am. But,"—her voice was husky—"but I like you an awful lot, Joe."

Girls always said that to him, and presumably to all the other fellows, when an evening had reached about this point, Joe reflected. That was the way persons got engaged, nowadays.

Millicent was trying it now. Right here at the Carters' hot, crowded, stupid party, Millicent Russell was trying to land him.

"Nothing stirring," he said briefly. "Come on, let's dance."

Millicent raised the heavy eyelids, looked at him with superb insolence.

"Who's the other woman, Joe?" she drawled theatrically. "God, you are a brute!"

"There isn't any other woman!" He believed it. Yet, even now, when his face was close to Millicent's curled, perfumed bobbed head, he had a sudden memory of Maggie, childlike and eager, in a sleazy little faded white dress, with a mop of living gold tumbling upon her small shoulders.

Sunday night. It was an actual relief to think that tomorrow would be Monday, and he would be back in the clean busy stir of the Mack again.

He told himself, when Monday arrived, and he reached the store to find a demurely radiant Maggie prettier and more endearingly proprietary in her manner toward him than ever, that this nonsense must stop. Therefore, it was with a real surprise that he heard himself saying to her, late on Tuesday afternoon:

"What you doing to-night, Maggie "

"Night school," she answered, color and breath beginning their usual acceleration instantly.

"Night school! I didn't know you went to night school!"

"Why—why, but you told me to!" she accused him reproachfully.

"I—when did I? How do you mean?"

"Before Christmas. Just after we first began to talk. You said, 'Maggie, you ought to go to night school!'"

"Did I?" He was stricken. "What do you study?" he asked.

"Political economy and French," she answered bravely.

"That's a darn good choice!" Joe assured her. "If you ever go abroad, you don't want to be embarrassed about pronouncing words."

"Maggie!" came a harsh voice from upstairs at this point. "Maggie Johnson! What's happened you down there in the stockroom? Start your trotters up here with them felay medallions!"

"Oh, holy Nelly!" Maggie ejaculated, seizing the green cards upon which the medallions were stitched, and fleeing wildly from Joe's too seductive neighborhood. "She sent me down for them fifteen minutes ago."

She left Joe very thoughtful. He took an opportunity, when they chanced to be entering the automat together for a late luncheon, to say deliberately:

"Look here, Maggie. I've got something on my mind to say to you, and by George, I'm going to say it. I want to warn you. Don't waste time, at seventeen, taking any crush too seriously."

"Who do you think I've got a crush on, Joe?"

"I know damn well whom you've got a crush on!" Joe growled.

"Is zat so?" Maggie asked, flushing. "Suppose the person I had a crush on had a crush on me?" she asked.

"A person might like you a lot, Maggie, and wish for all sorts of good things for you," Joe said rather slowly. "Without—without, I say, having a crush on you!"

"Well, that'd be enough for me," she answered, still in the same audacious, high-spirited key. "I don't want any kissin', an' as for pettin' parties."

"Now, look here, you little idiot," he said, half angry and half laughing, "don't think you can get away with that sort of thing! When your hour strikes, my dear, you won't be so sure you can get what you want. You'll be sick for more than kisses, then, Maggie, and afraid to take them. The whole world will turn itself into a sort of blur, with a man in the center, and when he speaks you'll answer, and you'll say what he wants you to say, too Don't fool yourself. You and I are friends—friends—friends—I was down and out when we first began to talk together, and you gave me a right steer and it kind of made you like me. I like you—I love you—I think you're a perfectly keen kid. But that kind of love's different. You're too young to know anything about it. Believe me, it's got a lot of pain in it, and it leaves a scar—you don't get over it——"

Leadership

Alabama's Greatest Natural Resource

ALABAMA'S greatest natural resource is the quality of leadership inherent in her people. Alabama has an almost unlimited wealth of mineral deposits, timber, fertile soil and waterways. It is the center of a market of about twenty million people with a buying power of more than seven billion dollars yearly.

But these have little value without management—without that quality of leadership which in the past has carried Alabama safely thru every crisis.

Always in the past, leaders have stepped forth from the throng in periods of political disorder or of economic stress and carried Alabama's banner forward to new heights. But the line is not played out. The blood of these great leaders still flows through the veins of Alabama's sons.

In every county you will find today business leaders who have turned their backs on this depression, wiped off their losses, shut their ears to hard times talk and started planning for the good times which are coming back again.

By their courage and faith, their energy and vision, these business leaders will contribute in large measure to prosperity's return. Alabama's progress in this new decade will be determined by the response of our people to wise leadership.

After traveling thru the darkness of depression, Alabama's present business leaders have come into the dawn with a new appreciation of the great opportunity the future holds in store for our state and a new determination that Alabama shall go forward—at a far faster pace than she has ever yet traveled.

LEARNING BY MAIL

—o—

About two and a quarter million persons in the United States are now taking correspondence courses in various subjects, embracing almost everything under the sun. A majority of these courses are practical and helpful, while others are of questionable value.

Like every good idea, the correspondence plan of teaching and study has been exploited from time to time by unscrupulous individuals, who promise results which any intelligent person should know are impossible of fulfillment.

This should not deter any earnest seeker for knowledge from enrolling in a correspondence school, however, because there are many such institutions of established reputation that are rendering splendid service to thousands of students.

The correspondence plan of study is sound in principle. The important thing is to select a school whose methods are sound in practice.

Prohibition And Politics

The long-awaited report of the Wickersham Commission on the enforcement of the Prohibition law reopens on a national scale the whole question of whether or not Prohbition can be enforced. That means that the "Wet vs. Dry" issue will be one of the biggest, if not the dominant issue of the Presidential campaign of 1932.

The Wickersham report itself is definite in its main conclusions and recommendations. It is opposed to repeal of the 18th Amendment. It is opposed to the restoration in any manner of legalized saloons. It is opposed to the Federal or State governments going into the liquor business It is opposed to any change in the law to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer It believes that the cooperation of the states and the support of public opinion is necessary for complete enforcement of the Prohibition law, but believes that there has been an improvement in enforcement since the forces for that purpose were reoganized, although enforcement and obedience to the law are still inadequate, as are the agencies of enforcement.

The commission recommends that more money should be appropriated for enforcement, and the organization and personnel improved and backed up by more efficient laws for the prosecution of violations and the conduct of investigations. In addition, the commission recommended that "IF the 18th amendment is revised" it should give Congress the sole power to regulate the liquor traffic, and not leave anything to the states.

With this last conclusion President Hoover, in his message transmitting the report to Congress, disagrees. He thinks that the burden of enforcement should not rest entirely upon the Federal Government. He has previously expressed himself as feeling that the states have not done their full duty. But with the main conclusions of the commission he agrees.

All of the members of the commission agree on the general statements of fact in regard to Prohibition enforcement, but some of them disagree with the conclusions, although all signed the report. In separate memoranda different commissioners expressed themselves in favor of total repeal of the 18th amendment, of the Government going into the liquor business or authorizing the states to do so, of changing the Volstead law without repealing the Constitutional provision for Prohibition, and of other palliative measures.

Smoking Ruins

By Vernie Teel

Quite a [illegible] times I have been present at scenes [illegible] and each time there is something [illegible] that touches my heart [illegible] and the blanket of [illegible] ground, has reflected [illegible] destroyed. And again [illegible] the savings of a life [illegible] in the hearts of [illegible] strength to begin [illegible] the picture of a man who [illegible] establish a successful business. [illegible] have the good things of [illegible] the long trail again.

[illegible] wax eloquent, nor become [illegible] purely material things [illegible], a great many of our [illegible] result of what we have [illegible] sometimes more a part [illegible] gone.

[illegible] I viewed the smoking ruins of quite a [illegible] part of the night I made [illegible] We had had several days of dry weather and it seemed that on almost every hill there was a red ring of fire, and in the valleys and along the road was a stifling fog of smoke. 'Twas a grand scene to see the lights twinkling so, and I might well have imagined that they were camp fires of a vast army. And as an army in war is a gigantic machine of destruction, so this seemed to me I was prone to try to pierce the future through this veil of smoke. And each time the picture came back of our children seeking employment that might have been supplied by the lumber industry. Too, there was a view of those suffering from effects of disastrous droughts which might have been made less severe if our forests had been allowed to go unhindered about the business of making us a mammoth sponge for the storage of surplus water. And there was a glimpse of future farmers seeking new, rich soil, but finding only the hard, red clay, under a film of black.

As these stray thoughts passed thru my mind I concluded that it is easy for us all to understand and sympathize and help when man's handiwork is destroyed, but that we can not always grasp so easily the fact that nature is literally moving heaven and earth to give us all those things which contribute to our well being. Nor that when we through carelessness or thoughtlessness send these gifts up in smoke nature alone has the power to return them to us.

I present these thoughts to the readers of this newspaper for whatever they may be worth, with the sincere belief that nature is a bountiful giver, which makes it our duty to conserve our natural resources.

"ROUND TOWN"

--by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

"Don't part with your illusions. When they are gone you may still exist, but you have ceased to live."—Mark Twain.

* * * *

And so Mark cuts loose with a wise saying this week that hits me in a tender spot. It is illusions, the right kind that have furnished so many inspirations for some of the good things people have done. But to have an illusion, to later find it was a disillusion, is something not wished for.

* * * *

I extend a welcome to The Sweeper, who came into existence in last week's Union-Banner, under the column head of The Cinder Pile. The Sweeper made a good clean sweep with his broom, or whatever he uses, at his first shot, and if he is new in the game, I might be able to give him a tip or two, but, if he is not new, then maybe he will be able to give me a tip or two worthwhile.

* * * *

Pardon me just a minute, dear readers, while I send a message to fellow columnists in papers over the state. You columnists who took it upon yourselves to talk about this editor I have here and about his getting that loving cup, should not have been so frank with your opinions telling about how he blushed. I gotta come out and defend him, because I know him and if you knew him like I do, you would know why he blushed when given that cup, if he did blush. But anyway he appreciated the things you said about him and his newspapers, I know.

Brother W. J. Parrish was in town the early part of the week, and I found out that he is carrying on his fine wok of doing something good for someone as usual. I kind of like to talk to Brother Parrish, because I find he is interesting.

* * * *

Had a chance to have a few words with this Mr. H. C. Falkenberry the other day, and I find there another good man. Mr. Falkenberry came here from Selma, and is in business here as you already know, in the Falkenberry Cash Store. Went in there the other day and looked over his stock of goods, found it complete and with some attractive prices. I have an idea that Mr. Falkenberry is a wide-awake fellow too.

In my history making trips around town, I have a better slant on our bankers in Clanton and over the county. I find that they are holding things in line these days in a big way. You take John Page up here at the First National Bank, he is sure a fellow that looks ahead and takes care of the present as well as the future, and he has a crew of assistants that are doing the same thing. Frank Callen, at the Peoples Savings Bank, sits tight and holds things in the road too, doing fully his share of giving Clanton some banks that are sound and prosperous. His force of assistants are also among those found in the best banks.

This News office where I hand in this copy every week is sure on the go. I can walk in there and if I don't snap around right fast and furious, I'd probably get run over and trampled, cause all the workers there seem to be always doing something and busy. Now they are working on a Booster Edition for Clanton and the whole county, and if I might say so, it is sure going to be a wow, judging from what I have seen of it, and the photographs they are collecting up from over the county to put in it That fellow Bell and his assistant, Bob Gore, apparently know their onions in handling special write-ups and photographs, and I've seen some of their other work. If the News edition will be like that. Boy, it will be a beauty. Saw a list of the reservations being made for space in it and for extra copies the other day, and I've about decided I'm goign to try to get them to put my picture in there with the other "prominent people."

* * * *

Mr. Lande, up at The Leader, is sure one of those big optimistic and prosperous fellows these days. I find it something of a pleasure to talk to that man. He never says anything about business being bad, but just keeps on keeping on. That's the spirit I like, and that's the spirit that is going to win out in the long run. I'm with you, Mofris.

Was just thinking the other day about the youngsters that are coming up in our town, those who are to become the future citizens of Clanton and this county. In my mind, I went up one street and down the other, picking out the possibilities of great citizenship in the future for this county of ours. I found that there are some real possibilities linked up in the youngsters coming on. Of course then I reflected back to some thoughts about whether they are being brought up under the proper environment to make real outstanding citizens. And, at the conclusion I thought that was something to be given some thought by the older people, especially the men of our county, so that is one of my infamous tips again. Have had occasion to b out a little late at night recently and might add that I noticed several youngsters still hanging around with the older boys in the regular hang-out places at a late hour. That is not doing the youngsters any good either, because at their age, they are now no doubt forming their habits and opinions.

I send greetings this week to H. Clay Pless, at the Dadeville Spot Cash, in Dadeville, Ala. Clay, when I read your column, and then after I became acquainted through our editor, with you, I think I'm going to like you, but don't start kidding our editor like you did last week. You already know he is bashful, and blushes like that schoolgirl you spoke of.

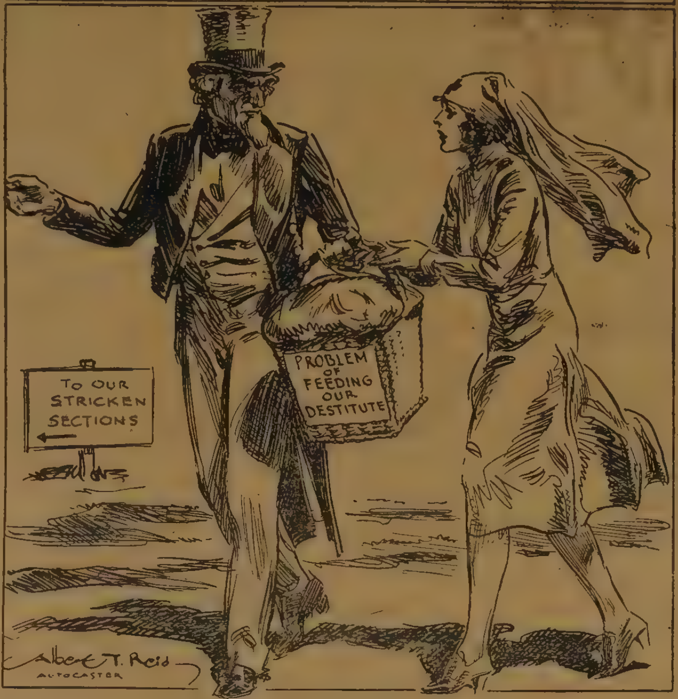
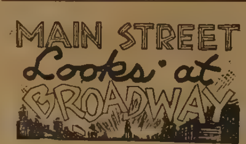
THE LUVERNE JOURNAL

PROBABLY MISINFORMED

The Luverne Journal probably was rather misinformed in its impression of the reception given the Alabama Editors by Gov. B. M. Miller when they called on him recently. It is difficult to understand how the Journal received this impression, so stated the Montgomery Advertiser, and this newspaper wishes to bear witness that the welcome shown the editors by the Governor of Alabama was exceedingly warm and generous, and apparently each member of the party calling on the Governor was impressed by his cordiality. His response to the invitation sent him by Howard C. Smith, was pleasant, although he stated he regretted he could not attend the luncheon on account of that being one of his busiest weeks.

When the Red Cross Calls—Give! By Albert T. Reid





MAIN STREET Looks at BROADWAY

Rural Manhattan

This city has not lost all its rural atmosphere. During 1930, permits were issued for goats, horse-shoeing, smoke houses, well water and carting fat.

Health Commissioner Wynne, who listed the above in his annual report, also said that more than 13,000 persons were bitten by dogs last year. He predicts a dogless city, and says that the dogs will be delighted and willing to go. He points out that no dog enjoys being shut up in an apartment all day except when he is taken out for an airing on a three-foot leash with his head in a muzzle.

Dr. Wynne's prediction, unfortunately coming just as the "400" of New York's dogdom is being groomed for a show, aroused the ire of dog fanciers. One of the enthusiasts declared positively that most of the dogs here are "perfectly happy."

Speak for yourself, Fido.

Apple Sauce

A taxi driver, arrested and hailed into court, was asked why he had deliberattly wrecked a man's box of apples by running his cab into it. The cabman declared that the man, supposedly unemployed, was his landlord, and that he was forced to pay him $75 a month for a $40 flat.

He didn't like it, he said, so he thought he'd even things up by exposing him as a fake.

The court, investigating, found that the cabman's story was true. Case dismissed. Now there's one less apple seller on the sidewalks of New York.

Little White Lies

Little scholastic white lies are daily being poured into guard's ears, but few rah-rah boys get past, they say. One youngster claimed he was here on vacation from Washington State college. Skeptical doormen asked him where it was located.

"In Seattle, of course," the boy answered, blushing nervously.

"Yah, yah! it's in Pullman, Wash.," they cackled. "Throw him out." So they threw him out.

Even a Talking Hen

And then there's the poultry show at Madison Square Garden. The entire basement looks and sounds like a giant poultry farm, what with cackling, crowing, quacking and so on.

Any city dweller who thinks that New Yorkers sneer at edible fowl should call at the Garden. Aside from the barnyard varieties there are turkeys, pheasants, peacocks and ducks, not to mention Mehitable, the robot chicken who actually lays a wooden egg upon request of almost anyone. Show officials say that she is the only talking hen in captivity, the miracle being accomplished by a phonograph concealed inside her covering of fine feathers.

What Prize Culture

Only "real scholars" will be allowed in the main reference room of the New York Public Library. That does not include college boys, however, so if you wear those klassy, kollegiate klothes and a big knot in your tie, it's useless to try to crash the gate.

The march of culture has so taxed the library's facilities that a regulation has gone into effect banishing college and high school students to libraries of their own schools.

The director says that 4,035,178 persons entered the library last year, an increase of 24 per cent over 1929. 11,864,160 volumes were issued for home use, 5 per cent more than in 1929.

Mother Earth

Suspended in a pit of one of New York's newest skyscrapers, the Daily News building, is a huge globe, slowly turning.

It represents the Earth, and completes a revolution every 10 minutes. Set in black marble around the sides of the room are diagrams, weather predictions and wind velocity statistics. Overhead are charted the stars in their courses.

When gazing at this man-made portion of the universe in action, there comes to one the eerie feeling that he has been transplanted to another planet, and is staring down, hypnotized, into endless space.

Rich Man (Poor Man)

A Wall Street financier who contributed $50,000 to establish a food depot for the unemployed wanted to see how it was functioning.

He left his limousine at home and made the trip in a taxi. He had the driver stop across the street, got out, walked over and entered the old church in which the depot was located. The cabman watched him in astonishment, then jumped from his cab and followed him through the door.

"Hey! Don't give this guy anything to eat!" he shouted to attendants inside. "He's got money. He took a cab down here!"

GROUNDHOG DAY

Of all weather superstitions, perhaps none has been more widespread than that associated with Groundhog Day, February 2. According to a belief held by many, the groundhog emerges from his winter hibernation on that day, and if he sees his shadow he goes back into his hole for another six weeks, during which a continuance of winter weather may be expected.

If, on the other hand, February 2, is cloudy, the animal will remain outside, which is a sign of an early spring.

Just how the groundhog keeps track of the date, including the extra day in leap years, is not explained, but many actually believe he does it.

Other animals than the groundhog are supposed to behave similarly. In Germany it is the badger; in England the hedgehog; in France the marmot, and among the Scandinavians the bear.

February 2 is also known as Candlemas Day in the church calendar, commemorating the presentation of Christ in the temple and among its observances is the blessing of candles for sacred use. It is also associated with weather signs identical with those attributed to the groundhog. There are several old rhymes similar to this:

"If Candlemas be bright and clear
We'll have two winters in the year"

JESUS, THE WORLD'S TEACHER
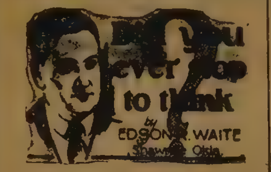
Luke 6:27-42

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D

A new term had been used when Jesus proclaimed the Kingdom of God. He set forth the principles of that Kingdom in all of His addresses but especially in the Sermon on the Mount, Matthew 5,6,7. It is thought that this great message was repeated in briefer statements in the Sermon on the Plain, from which this lesson study is taken. Give careful attention to all the items in Luke 6 for they have much to say about daily living.

Listeners must have been amazed at the nature of the teaching. In the past they had been urged to take an "eye for an eye" and if strength permitted they would probably seek to give back with added interest when an injury had been done. Now this Positivist says "love your enemies." Such direction must have caused about as much amazement as the miracles which held the people spellbound. In fact no limit is set upon the kindly attitude and active help for all who had sought to injure them. After doing all they could, they were advised to "pray for them that despitefully use you." What we call charity was to be dispensed with real kindness. Such teachings have an application today as we are importuned by the needy and worthy who are hungry because of lack of employment.

Some profound truths are hard to understand. Jesus, however, made His meaning very clear in our Golden Text We call it the Golden Rule. Note that it is positively stated and not in a negative form as presented by the philosopher Confucius. AS YE WOULD THAT MEN SHOULD DO TO YOU, DO YE ALSO TO THEM LIKEWISE.



Frank H. Smith, president of the Portland Cement Association, says:

That civilization without highways would be impossible.

There have been isolated civilizations but they did not last. For a civilization can not take root and become characteristic of a race or people unless there is some positive means by which the common fund of wealth, of methods of doing work, of legend and fact can be distributed among the people.

About a century ago the boundaries of western civilization were swept away by the introduction of telegraphy. Here was a means of communication incredibly swift. The telephone followed. And in this century we have already been given radio communication with the ends of the earth. Communication is the essence of civilization, but with every ramification of communication by word there comes an increasing necessity for communication by personal contact, by the actual exchange of goods.

So the highway, instead of retiring into obsolescence as communication by word has spread and quickened, has gained a new importance. The motor car has brought swift mobility within reach of the people; it remained for the highway engineers to make their roads useful to the motor car.

The engineers have done their work well. They have developed the concrete highway, a highway Roman in its strength but thoroughly modern in its smooth efficiency. Over the ever-increasing mileage of concrete highways the fore-runners of civilization speed—speed directly and easily into the ken of the great masses, the people to whom civilization brings its richest rewards.

Motor cars are measured by the millions. More and more insistently they clamor for place on the highways of the world. Far-sighted people are, here and there, building highways so wide, so direct and unobstructed that the flow of thousands of cars each day is swift and easy.

Col. E. S. Gorrell, president of the Stutz Motor Car Company, says:

That there should be no place in the great American system of publicly owned highways for privately owned bridges.

The existence of a great number of toll bridges at key points on the great, national and state highways creates an anomalous situation. Through the expenditure of public funds, great highways are constructed leading from metropolis to metropolis. The users of these roads have paid for them thru taxation direct and indirect. At some vital point on the road private enterprise reaches out to demand its tribute. The leech at the throat of travel is the ubiquitous toll bridge.

In the past toll bridges, just as toll roads, have been necessary for the development of the country. The opportunity for private gain was necessary to advance our frontiers. But now that our economic development has practically freed us from the toll gate on the post road, why shouldn't the toll bridge follow into oblivion?

The bridge is an integral part of the road. The people own the roads—why shouldn't they own the bridges? The roads are free. Is there any logical reason why the bridges should not also be?

RELIEF AND POLITICS

Every right thinking person has profound sympathy for all who through no fault of their own find themselves unable to obtain the necessities of life. Measures for relief in such cases have a strong appeal, and it is to the credit of human nature that this is so.

But, unfortunately, certain politicians are apt to play upon the generous impulses of the public by seeking approval of ill-advised and unsound schemes which are advanced in the hope of making political capital for their promoters. It is perfectly easy for a Senator or other legislator to gain a certain amount of publicity and applause thru introducing a bill for raiding the treasury under the guise of affording relief for the destitute.

To carry out their plans, they would not hesitate to hamper the recovery of business and industry by imposing oppressive burdens which would counteract the constructive efforts now being made to put more men on the payrolls. And right now bigger payrolls would afford the most effective and permanent means of relief.

These same politicians have not hesitated to reflect upon the Red Cross Society, the most capable and effective agency in the world in matters of personal relief. Red Cross officials declare that their efforts have been hindered by these attacks of politicians who want credit for themselves, which they seek to obtain by proposing vast government appropriations to be expended under the direction of other politically-minded agents.

President Hoover very aptly characterized such tactics as "playing politics at the expense of human misery."

When the judge asked Mrs. Bessie Salnitsky of Chicago why she had obtained three divorces from her husband, she answered, "It's because he is so nice to me between divorces then when we are married he gets mean."

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! As harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant — as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

Dr. Rutland Makes Dental Talk At Chapel with Use of Slides

By Mary Courtney Jones

Last September Dr. Rutland from the State Department of Health working with the dentists of Chilton County at Clanton, made a dental inspection of all the pupils. After the examinations were made with suggestions that each pupil's name be entered with a star when his mouth was corrected.

Dr. Rutland made our school another visit last Wednesday and gave us a most splendid talk. He showed by the use of slides and explained that pyorrhea is a condition of the teeth and not a disease. He also showed different stages of decay in a tooth. His visit was to emphasize to us that the teeth are an important factor in our health and the use of the tooth brush was a good habit. A certificate is to be awarded to the room that has 100 per cent teeth corrected.

School Campus Undegoes Complete Change in Use of Shrubbery and Flower Planting

Mr. Brewster from Auburn, gave us some good suggestions about improving the looks of the campus. These few days have seen quite a bit of improvement in the planting and rearranging of flowers. Almost any period of the day may be found some of the boys working on the campus under the directions of Mr. Walker and Mr. Varnell. This work is done by the boys in the agriculture classes and manual arts department. You will see a different campus we hope in the next few months.

Basketball—Jemison vs. C. C. H. S. Wednesday Afternoon

Clanton will play Jemison in a tight game of basketball Wednesday afternoon at 3:15.

Jemison has defeated some of the strongest high school teams in the state this season. C. C. H. S. has played real good ball. Selma defeated C. C. H. S. by only two points last Friday afternoon. Selma has not been defeated this season. From the above, it will seem that quite a "scrappy" game will be in store for all when the whistle blows Wednesday afternoon. Come out and encourage the boys to play their best.

C. C. H. S. defeated Holtville High last Tuesday afternoon to the tune of 65 to 13. There was no comparison between the two teams. Coach Walker used every substitute he had on the team.

Throw that excuse that you have to the winds and come on to church next Sunday as you know and as God knows you should do. You owe God just as much fidelity on His day as you owe your own business the other six days. Sunday is not a day of lounging and laziness. It is God's day and you should give him a square deal.

Sunday school at 9:45 A. M. and preaching at 11 A. M. The night service is at 7 P. M. We are anxious to see people who can go to church do so. If you have lost both legs you will not be expected to walk to God's house, but as long as you have the two that you use in going to business, you will be expected to let them take you to worship. If you have legs that will run you around the house on Sunday, you should let them run off to church.

Last Sunday we welcomed Luther Ellison into our church fellowship.

BIDS OPENED ON CEMENT FOR STATE HIGHWAY JOBS

Bids on 230,988 barrels of cement to be used in prospective highway paving projects in Montgomery, Escambia, Calhoun, Talladega, Cullman, Dallas and Baldwin Counties were opened at the offices of the State Board of Administration yesterday. Tabulation of the bids which are regarded as satisfactory showed it was stated an average price submitted of $2.42 a barrel, delivered.

All five of the Alabama cement manufacturing plants participated in the bidding. Awards which will take place some time within the next ten days, will be on the basis of one-fifth of the total amount bid on to each of these Alabama concerns.

The Way of Life
By BRUCE BARTON

What Does Your Butcher Say

One day last winter I was riding with the gentleman who runs a livery stable and provides food and lodging for my horse. It was some weeks after the stock market unpleasantness.

"How is business?" I asked him

He answered that he had never known it to be worse. "Only a few of our horses are saddle horses," he said. "The others are owned by the butchers and bakers and candlestick makers who supply the fashionable people on Park and Fifth Avenues. And do you know that those little merchants can't collect even to pay my oats bills? It is terrible."

A little later I was repeating the conversation to a friend who makes his home in a fashionable suburb. He has ample means but, compared with some of the multi-millionaires whose estates are in the same community, he is comparatively poor.

He told me that he had been protesting mildly to the butcher about the steady increase in his meat bills. "I do not understand," he had said. "We always pay promptly on the first of the month. We do not eat extravagantly, and yet our meat seems to cost us more all the time."

The butcher confessed that the bills were high. He shrugged his shoulders helplessly. "What am I to do? You and the other people of moderate means are the only ones who pay your bills. The rich men on my lists keep me waiting for six months or even a year. Everybody's meat costs more in consequence."

I suppose the percentage of four-flushers in the Park Avenue district and in the New York suburbs is very high. There must be thousands of families struggling to "keep up with the Joneses." But all over the country the same thing occurs to a greater or less degree. It is due not merely to the fact that people are living beyond their means. Much of it is nothing more or less than downright thoughtlessness.

I used to be a great believer in reforms. I enrolled in Causes and supported high grade Candidates, and was generally loud and vigorous.

In my old age I have come to feel that most of our troubles would be washed away if we would only be just reasonably courteous and decent to one another.

OFFER PRIZE FOR OLDEST PIECE OF HOME FURNITURE

Household Science Institute Seeks Materials for Exhibit During Chicago World's Fair

Have you a mohair-covered chair or sofa in your home? If so, you may be two hundred and fifty dollars the richer for it!

The News is in receipt of a message from the Household Science Institute, Chicago, asking for help in locating the oldest piece of mohair-upholstered furniture in the United States. The Institute feels that there is a possibility of its being found in this section. The style of the sought for furnitude or its use or non-use at the present time are not important, providing it is in good condition. The owner of the piece selected will be awarded two hundred and fifty dollars and the piece itself will be exhibited with other old-time furniture during the World's Fair at Chicago in 1933.

Back of the Institute's offer is the desire on the part of Grace Viall Gray, its director, to ascertain the longevity of mohair. Although innumerable pieces of mohair-covered furniture and mohair rugs have seen many years of hard daily service, it is claimed that unless deliberately injured no instance has yet been found of a mohair fabric ever wearing through.

Clanton people who feel that they have something of interest should communicate with Mrs. Grace Viall Gray, Household Science Institute, 7 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Illinois, giving the history of the piece they have in mind and all facts concerning age, color, condition and other pertinent information, Mrs. Gray will then decide whether the article is the one wanted and make arrangements for shipping it to Chicago

COAL and COKE
Build Buying Power

....Payrolls they Create
Are Spent at Home

EVERY Alabama cotton farmer knows that soil wears out . . . and that unless he keeps on putting back into the ground again health building plant foods it will cease to grow crops.

Exactly the same thing is true of Alabama business. Unless Alabama citizens enrich the Alabama market by putting back into it money they have made, the Alabama market will wear out and cease to grow profits.

Almost all of every dollar that you spend for Alabama coal or coke goes back into the Alabama market, enriching it again so that it can keep on growing profits for the Alabama merchant, farmer, manufacturer, lawyer, doctor and business man.

Almost all of every dollar that you spend for Natural Gas leaves the state, taking money from the pockets of Alabama people who buy from you—impoverishing instead of enriching Alabama soil.

The Natural Gas line from Louisiana which runs thru Alabama, has an annual capacity of about thirty-six billion five hundred million cubic feet of gas. This is the equivalent of about one million three hundred and fifty thousand tons of average Alabama coal or coke per year.

Production of this supply of Louisiana gas requires absolutely no Alabama labor, and creates no payrolls for the state.

Production of its equivalent of Alabama coal or coke would furnish a years work to about one thousand Alabama miners.

The transportation of this supply of Louisiana gas requires practically no Alabama labor after pipe lines are once laid.

The transportation of its equivalent of Alabama coal or coke requires over 27,000 freight cars, gives employment to many Alabama railroad employees and produces gross revenues for Alabama railroads of about one million seven hundred thousand dollars.

This is the seventh of a series of advertisements, published by Alabama coal and coke companies about Alabama coal and coke.

To help all Alabama business—your business—burn Alabama coal or coke in your home or power plant.

FARM BOYS USE POWER

A new type of farmer is developing among club boys who are learning the advantages of quality in production, and at the same time getting a first hand demonstration of efficiency from the cost standpoint, according to a recent bulletin.

Some examples are given, among them that of Robert Dobbin, a high school junior of State Center, Ia., who is also a club boy living on a 320-acre farm. In December he exhibited the reserve champion beef carcass steer at the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago.

In combination with his club work, young Dobbin assists in the operation of the farm, which is equipped with a large and a small tractor. The larger is used for soil preparation and silo-filling. With a one-acre corn picker attached it picks the 120 acres of corn. The smaller tractor is used for corn plowing and other suitable tasks. The modern methods employed make for more economical production and consequently more profits.

A Southern boy, Oscar Hoyt, of Louisiana, improved on the methods of older farmers and proved the superiority of narrow rows in cotton growing by producing two bales of cotton on one acre last summer. Next season he will use his father's tractor exclusively in his cotton project.

On the farm, as elsewhere, modern machinery and improved methods make for greater success, and in the adoption of these the farm boys are leading the way.

DEATH RATE LOWER

For the first time since records have been kept, the death rate in 81 principal cities of the country fell below 12 per 1,000 of population during 1930, according to the Census Bureau. The rate for the year was 11.9.

The best health years previously experienced were 1921 and 1927 with 12 and 12.3 per 1,000 respectively. The highest death rate recorded was 19.6 in 1918, when influenza swept the country. In the last 10 years the highest rate was 13.2 in 1926. The city death rates are slightly higher than those for the entire country, but less than 1 per 1,000 higher.

The United States average of approximately 12 deaths per 1,000 population is about the same as that of England, Germany, Sweden, and Switzerland; a small fraction higher than that of Norway and the Netherlands, but lower than the rest of Europe. The rate in Soviet Russia is the highest of any country for which statistics are available, being about 25 per 1,000, or more than twice as great as that of the United States.

DR. CALDWELL'S
THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headache, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello.

The Legislature And Its Grist

By Bob Vail

The lamp burner of Wilcox continues to trim wicks! Employees are being dropped almost daily from the state's payrolls. Gov. Miller considers these dropped as surplus. He is getting down to bed rock. Heads of some state departments affected feel he has already gone below bed-rock. When it is demonstrated to the governor that the state's business requires more clerks and helpers than he is leaving in the various departments, he has let it be known that he will authorize adding sufficient help to conduct the business properly. But he says he must be convinced that more help is needed. Some criticism is being heard concerning some of the governor's appointments. The assertion is frequently made that he is not giving his friends proper consideration. The governor takes the position that the state's best interests must first be conserved—then politics may be served. Aye, verily, the lamp-burner of Wilcox continues to trim wicks!

State Senator Bart I. Cowart of the Third Senatorial District, (Blount, Cullman and Winston Counties) hails from the strongly Republican County of Winston. Senator Cowart who is a highly successful business man is the first state [illegible] elected from Winston County. He is a staunch Democrat who has long served his party. Among other [illegible] appointments given [illegible] the Senate is [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] houses of the present Alabama Legislature are as follows:

Legionnaire House Members

Bullock County, C. D. Norman, Calhoun, Percy M. Pitts, Clanton, Cleburne, F. B. Parker, Heflin, Colbert, C. F. Carmichael, Tuscumbia, Conecuh, J. F. Kelly, Repton, Coosa, Felix L. Smith, Rockford, Elmore, Arthur Glover, Wetumpka, Franklin, W. H. Key, Jr., Russellville, Jackson, John M. Snodgrass, Scottsboro, Jefferson, John C. Morrow, Birmingham, Lewey Robinson, Birmingham; Lee, Roy L. Smith, Phoenix City, Marengo, Robert E. Sutton, Linden, Mobile, Edw. I. Grove, Mobile; Talladega, Richard B. Kelly Jr; Washington, J. Massey Edgar.

Senate Members

Lawrence-Morgan, J. Marvin Kelly, Hartselle; Jackson-Marshall, C. D. Scruggs, Guntersville; Talladega, D. Hardy Riddle; Roanoke, Paul J. Hooten, Jasper, Coleman Shepherd; Monroeville, E. T. Millsap, Troy, G. J. Hubbard; Hurtsboro, C. G. Brown; Selma, J. W. Lapsley; Eutaw, E. F. Hildreth; Goodwater, John A. Darden; Dothan, Hubert Farmer.

Representative Cooper Green of Jefferson, is one of the new and young members of the present House. Though he comes from a county where school conditions are probably the best in the state, he makes his shibboleth "Better rural schools." He says he wants to see the best of school houses, containing adequate facilities under the direction of high grade teachers conducting full nine months of school, in every school district in Alabama. He pledges [illegible] and work to that end.

[illegible] ers in the House at present are Representatives Hubert Davis of Macon and Tom M. Arrington of Montgomery. They are the only members of the 1901 Constitutional Convention in the lower house of the present Legislature. A gracious gesture by Speaker Tunstall was in placing these two men on the committee to receive the picture of Chairman Knox of that convention, which will be presented to the Legislature early in February, a special event on the House program. Messrs. Davis and Arrington serve with Representative McElderry of Talladega on this special committee.

Clerk Handley Stewart is the "working member" of the state Legislature. His work starts when the others quit and keeps up far into the night. It would be truer to say his work starts when the others start and never stops. He has been Clerk of the House a number of years and is a splendid official.

Representative Burns Parker of Cleburne is a live member of the Alabama House of Representatives. He is an ex-Sargeant in our well-known Uncle's army—and those Sargeants were allegedly hardboiled. Some folks who opposed him in the recent campaign say he qualifies! He carries "among his souvenirs" an affidavit prepared by [illegible] political [illegible] attest [illegible] for him and his political prowess. Active and alert, he is an outstanding member of Alabama's [illegible] body.

There are three Republicans in the [illegible] Representative Percy Pitts of Chilton [illegible] Posey of Winston and Lloyd of DeKalb. There are three "Independent Jeffersonians" or followers of Tom Heflin in the House—Representatives Burton and Hollingsworth of Chambers and Jordan of Clay.

Representative Charlie Coates of Clarke County introduced the celebrated "Tom Heflin Resolution" in the House. It criticised Heflin in caustic terms for his "poor sportsmanship" in connection with his conduct since the November election. It was probably the most interest-compelling document brought before the present Legislature and attracted thoughtful attention of the members when presented. It carried in the House 91 to 3—only the 3 "Heflin Democrats" voting against its adoption. The three Republican members voted for it. Representative Coates received nationwide publicity following its passage, calls being made from papers all over the country for stories about the resolution and about its modest author. The Senate adopted the resolution 33 to 0—two senators being absent. It was moved for passage in the Senate by the Senator from Heflin's own district—Hon. Paul J. Hooten.

For the theft of 40 cents, Anthony Carbinari of New York was given a 7-year prison sentence [illegible] was recently [illegible] to take bets on the races.

State Anti-Rabies Vaccine Now Used

Manufacture and distribution of anti-rabies vaccine from the new State owned and operated laboratory at the State Health Department was begun Monday, Dr L. C. Havens, director of the State Laboratories, announced.

Manufacture of the anti-rabies vaccine will result in a saving of about $15,000 annually, it was estimated, as all vaccine heretofore has been purchased by the department.

Figures supplied by Mrs. H. C. Brown, supervisor of the antitoxin division, showed that the cost to the state of distributing anti-rabies vaccine to persons who had been bitten and were unable to pay for treatment for the past six years was $156,190.

The expense to the State when vaccine was purchased is shown by years as follows: 1925, $20,942; 1926, $25,137.50; 1927, $25,492.50; 1928, $31,043.50; 1929, $26,059.50 and 1930, $27,514.50.

Until August, 1929, Pasteur treatments were used, which cost nearly twice the amount as the new and more economical Semple treatments which became available and have been used since that time.

GOOD LIGHTING PAYS

Skimpy lighting in industrial plants lowers production, increases spoilage of materials and causes many accidents, according to Charles H. Weeks, labor commissioner of New Jersey, whose department has made an extensive study of the subject. Poor lighting also causes serious eye strain which further reduces the efficiency of the workers.

A concrete example is given by Mr. Weeks, in which the installation of a modern lighting system in a large industrial plant led to an increase of 12 to 16 per cent in production and reduced spoilage of material more than 50 per cent. It was also found that 18 per cent of industrial accidents in the state were caused by defective lighting arrangements.

Not only in factories, but in business houses, offices, school-rooms and homes as well, good lighting pays in efficiency comfort and improved eyesight. Its cost is trifling in comparison with the benefits it confers.

A few days after Mr. and Mrs. John Keuhner had moved from Rush Hill, Mo., to Newark, N. J., their cat walked in after a foot journey of over 1,000 miles.

ENJOY YOUR TRIP.

There is one thing that people who go South on ships do not complain of, and that is the trip itself. That is the reason why so many automobilists who have tired themselves out in past years are now engaging passage on to the Clyde-Mallory Lines at New York in order to make the journey a delightful part of the visit to Florida. Returning travelers who have garnered rich returns in the wholesome atmosphere of shipboard life, and strolled the decks, enjoyed the spacious lounges, music rooms, tea rooms, musical entertainment or social hours, declare with emphasis that the way to go South is over the bounding deep, via the Atlantic Ocean. They say the happy, carefree atmosphere of shipboard life is the place where troubles are forgotten, and land-born worries are banished, with the result that Florida, the famous land of sunshine becomes a success, bodily and mentally when the steamship lands you at the dock.

After all, why go on a vacation if you have to work harder for it than you would if you stayed at home? Thousands of people need a rest more when they get back than they did before they went away. It is the realization of this fact that is turing our investigating and discriminating American travelers to try something else besides their skill at driving automobiles at breakneck speed to playgrounds of the South.

Mt. Pleasant Junior High School News

On last Thursday afternoon Prof. Williams and Mrs. Strock brought the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth grades of the Baker school over to Mt. Pleasant to compete in their second Spelling Bee this year. The contest was lively, interesting and worthwhile throughout its time.

The long hallway of the Mt. Pleasant building was ideal for this purpose. Immediately after arriving the Baker group formed a long line and marched in, lining up in the hallway just opposite the Mt. Pleasant students. Fifty-three pupils from each school participated in the match.

Words were given from the State adopted textbooks. Intermediate, and Junior High Speller. This contest ended with four Mt. Pleasant pupils still standing. Those four were Renfro Price, Lucile Price, Dorothy Jones and J. P. Culp. The last two up for Baker were Willis Baker and Myrtle Powell, and what a thrill they put into this contest is something everyone should appreciate. These two clever spellers flashed many surprises to everyone by spelling with seemingly great ease words that are ordinarily considered difficult.

But to their regret and to Mt. Pleasant's exultant joy, the word "Parliament" was called, after a brief pause, two attempts were made by the last Baker Speller, Miss Myrtle Powell, the word passed to Miss Lucile Price. 'Finis' was written to the contest. Amid great cheering and noise the Baker classes departed everyone feeling greatly benefited from the friendly contest.

Mt. Pleasant added another victory this week to its winning column. The Stanton Junior High School boys came over last Friday and after an interesting basketball game had climaxed the scores revealed that a rather one-sided victory had been chalked up, in Mt. Pleasant's favor. The final score was 16 to 8. The Mt. Pleasant boys took an early 6-point lead and never relinquished it during the game.

The Junior II and III Home Problems Class, under the supervision of their instructor, Miss Littlejohn, gave a Reception in honor of the basketball team last Friday night. The entertainment was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. V. B. Edwards. Several new games and contests were introduced. A delightful time was had by all present.

The attendance at school has been good during the last month. We feel fortunate in not having an epidemic of some dreaded disease to break into our school as it has some other schools.

The Parent-Teachers meeting will be held at the school building next Thursday afternoon, February 5, at two-thirty. The President and teachers all urge members to be present. Several interesting and important matters are to be discussed.

Several of the pupils have been inquiring recently just why Miss Littlejohn and Miss Raney went to Montgomery last Saturday week. They supposedly went on business, but this year their seems to be a marriage epidemic sweeping through the teaching profession, and too, the larger percent secretly, so naturally how are you going to keep suspicion from arising? But nevertheless, the report "Not Guilty" so guess we may rest contented at that.

We were glad to have a large number of patrons to visit our school last Friday afternoon. We cordially invite you to come again. It is encouraging to both teacher and child for the parent to manifest this interest in visiting the schol. Remember the P.-T. A. meeting next Thursday.

Our County School Superintendent, Mr. Lawrence, has promised to come out to our school within the next few days and make a talk to the Junior III Civics class. The subject has not yet been announced, but will be by the next issue of this paper.

Through the sale of garden seed the school has raised $4.15 which will be applied for school equipment.

The Junior III English Class is having a series of debates. On Monday (this week) Misses Luettie Cooper and Vera Jones will match their arguments against Messrs. Woodrow Price and Grady Miner. The girls will uphold the affirmative side of the question: 'Resolved that the fly is a more deadly enemy to mankind than the mosquito.'

On Tuesday the subject will be: 'Resolved that the Radio is more enjoyable than the Victrola.' Julia Edwards and Renfro Price will speak for the negative side, while Eunice Holley and Grady Miner will support the affirmative.

The fast Junior High boys basketball team from Jemison High School will meet the Mt. Pleasant team on the latter's court next Friday, February 6. Jemison presents a well-balanced team and a good hard fought game is in store. Game called at 2:45 p.m.

Everyone try and see this game.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Geiger and family came down Sunday and spent the day with Mrs. Geiger's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tyus.

JUST a tasteless dose of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in water. That is an alkali, effective, yet harmless. It has been the standard antacid for 50 years. One spoonful will neutralize at once many times its volume in acid. It is the right way, the quick, pleasant and efficient way to kill the excess acid. The stomach becomes sweet, the pain departs. You are happy again in five minutes.

But don't depend on crude methods, try the best way yet evolved in all the years of searching. That is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind that the physicians prescribe.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

and he let it be known that he was moving into the community just over the way, and said he to the farmer, "What kind of people liver over there?" Again the farmer asked him what kind of people lived in the community out of which he had just moved. "Just the finest folks in the world," said the man "and it broke our hearts to leave them." "Well," said the old philosopher, "You will find them same kind of folks wha' you am going." In other words you will determine what Clanton is to you. If you look at Clanton through a yellow glass, the whole city will look yellow. If you look at it through a green glass, the city looks green to you. That is just the reason why so many of us are constantly lamenting the times and the citizenship with whom we have to live. Get a clear glass and look thru it and you will see the sunshine and hope will come down upon you like the falling of the dew.

This is a day when political lines are drawn and we pride ourselves that we belong to the Republican party, or the Democratic party. It is all right for you to be a Democrat or a Republican if you so desire, but I would like to organize a new party in these days of gloom. I would not make it a "Duke's Mixture" as the most of our parties are today, but I would make it clear and full of sunshine. I would name my new party, "The Radiance party." I would call a meeting of all those who believed in my party, and together we would lay down the planks of our platform. The first plank that I would nail down good and hard would be the plank of working and not weeping. We would put every man in our party to doing something. He would not be allowed to stand on the street corners weeping for a job while the soil was calling for someone to come and make it a well of production. The second plank that we would nail down would be that of boosting and not knocking. Do not understand me to say that I approve of some of this wild, reckless boosting that we hear before Rotarians, Kiwanians, and other clubs, but I keeps hope and courage alive. There would be no place for knockers in my new party. The third plank would be that of cheerfulness and not grouchiness. A grouchy man can be a Republican and he can be a Democrat, but he can not belong to the Radiance party. One of the serious troubles of today is that we are going about as though we had a grouch with the government, the weather and the Lord. The soil has not gone out of business, the weather man is not on a strike, and God is not dead, and why should we go moaning about the streets? My fourth plank in my Radiance party would be courtesy and not adbruptness. These Democrats and Republicans have about forgotten the fundamentals of courtesy. They are abrupt in their speech, mannerism and ways. The members of my new party would be required to speak in courteous language, act in a courteous way and deal with his fellow man in a courteous spirit. We would live together in courtesy and kindness. A fifth plank in my party platform would be patience and not complaining. The members of these old line parties are acting today just like they have never known of such times as we are now having. Business ran down in 1914 and in 1921 just like it is now. It is coming back just like it did then. We need a new party of patience so that we will not go wild with complaining. I visited a sick patient not long since and he filled the room with his groans. I asked the family if he were in agony? They said not that they could detect. They told me that he had formed the habit of grunting whether he had pain or not. I sometimes think that we are about like that patient. We have formed the habit of grunting, whether we suffer or not. The Radiance party members should be patient. The last plank that I would nail down in my Radiance party would be that of economy and not wastefulness. I would drive this plank down with twenty penny nails and then I would clamp it with iron. It does not matter which party held the governmental reins, the most evident thing in practice was that of wastefulness. We have wasted enough in the last ten years to tide us over any kind of depression times. While the dollars were rolling toward us, we caught them and rolled them away, and now we are crying our sad bosoms empty because we have no more dollars to roll. You note that I have made work to be the beginning plank and economy the closing plank of my new platform, and that is not a mere happen so. They are where they belong. The Radiance party is founded upon work and economy, and it thrives upon boosting, cheerfulness, courtesy and patience. I would take this new party with its platform and I would stand it in the streets of Clanton, and I would face it to the future and not to the past.

I know no place where conditions are more favorable for the growing of this Radiance party than right here in Clanton. We are in the center of the State. We are near the half way line between Montgomry and Birmingham. We have a county filled with country white people, the very bone and blood of American life. We have a farming section that can not be surpassed anywhere in the State. We are the heart of the Alabama Power Company. We are out of debt as a county. We have a link up of the best school system to be found anywhere. We have fine churches in Clanton and nice country churches on every hill top in the county. It looks to me that this new Radiance party should grow in this favorable soil.

If this Radiance party has your good will, may I not ask that you show it. Show it by taking off that slouchy garment that is to be seen thrown around our city in some places. When Nehemiah traveled around Jerusalem he discovered that there was much rubbish scattered in every section of the city. They secured wagons and carted this rubbish off to the dumping grounds. You Kiwanians look around Clanton and see if you can not find much rubbish. When there are unkept lots, rubbish piled here and there, the city looks just like a woman with a beautiful face and yet with a slouchy dress. The first thing that I saw on entering Clanton was that unsightly swamp that you find almost within a stone's throw of your business section. Mud, slush and weeds. If you have a good will for your own community, you will do your best as an individual and as a club to remove the slouchy garment that is to be seen resting on the body of our beautiful little city. If you will join our new Radiance party, we are asking that you show it, not only by removing the slouchy garment, but clothing your city with a bright garment of care, pride and prosperity. The premises about our homes need more care. Our buildings need painting. There should be a wholesale plantin gof flowers. The man's heart that is right toward his own town, will clothe his home and premises with a new garment that shines. In the thrid place, you should show your willingness to join this new party by entering into the progressive movements of your city and county with a heart that is all aglow with interest and enthusiasm. It is easy to be a well wisher for progress, but it is hard to lead in the ranks of progress.

I close with this statement, the good will of the citizenship of a community means as much to the well being of that community, as the blood means to the body of an individual. If the blood that goes flowing through your veins is an asset to your life, then your good will for your city is an asset to the place where you live. I thank you.

CARELESSNESS NOT BLAMED IN CONAWAY CHILDREN'S DEATH

The attention of the News has been called to the article appearing in last weeks issue in regard to the death of the two Conway children, of the Isabella community, and the statement made about them possibly having been poisoned by eating syrup from an old bucket they had found. It has been stated that it was not through carelessness of any kind that these children were able to get this syrup bucket, and that how they got hold of it, the older persons are at a loss to determine.

FARMERS URGED TO LIVE FROM LAND BY CHIEF

Chief Statistician Joined By State Department With Program

In order to help farmers to help themselves, the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries hopes to cut the cotton acreage in the state by 2,100,000 acres next year and to substitute corn and hay crops in its place, according to F. W. Gist, Chief of the Bureau of Statistics.

This plan of the state department links up directly with a program being sponsored by the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, entitled "Farming for profit in 1931." The plans show that farmers should plant enough food and feed crops to take care of themselves and their workers and to strive for increased diversification of farm products, with an addition of hogs and poultry as "cash crops."

It was stated that the plan is intended to prevent suffering from unfavorable conditions as experienced last year and to permit the Alabama farmer to "Live from the land."

Mr. Gist stated that he told farmers shortage in feed and food was caused by the drought and business conditions were responsible for the low cotton price. Mr. Gist was quoted as saying, "I told them that to prevent a return of these conditions they must change their practices so as to have enough food on hand for their own needs and some left over for sale."

DEAD NEGRO FOUND ON HILL NEAR COOSA RIVER RECENTLY

The body of a negro man was found last week near Coosa River between Norman's Camp and Mitchell Dam, and after the decomposed body was brought to Clanton, it was found shortly after burial that it was a negro by the name of Macaroni Wright, age 17.

The discovery was made by a Mrs. Easterling who was passing through the woods on a trail to a neighbor's home. J. Mell Martin, Clanton undertaker, and coroner, was notified. He went down to the scene of the discovery and reported that evidence showed that the negro had been dead approximately a month or more.

No clue could be found when the discovery was made and investigated, as to the identity of the negro. Preparations were made and the body brought to Clanton and buried. Shortly after the burial, an old negro man came up to the office of the undertaker and after viewing the cap and shoes and other wearing apparel, he stated it was his son, who had disappeared from home about two months ago to go to the home of an uncle. Beside the body of the negro, Coroner Martin stated they found a quart jar with a small amount of whiskey in it. No definite clue had been advanced at the time of this writing, as to the cause of the death.

Kiwanis Sponsors A Pig Contest

Mr. Earle Thomas, vocational teacher at Isabella, and chairman of the Agriculture Committee of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, was instrumental in getting the Kiwanis Club to sponsor what seems to be a splendid project for the boys this year. C. E. Stapp and S. J. Ezell are on the Agriculture Committee with Mr. Thomas, and all of them are pushing the program heartily.

The plan is as follows: To get at least 20 boys who are interested in pigs to take a litter farrowed early in the spring, say March or April, and care for them properly until this fall when most of the pigs will be about six months old. All of the pigs will be finished out about the same time and on a set date all the boys will be asked to bring their hogs to Clanton where buyers from the packing houses will bid for the lot.

It is preferred that the boys take a good sow so they can get the experience of properly handling the sow and pigs from before farrowing time until they are ready for market. This will encourage the boys to take care of the sow and litter at farrowing time so as to have as large a litter as possible to enter the contest with.

The boy who has the heaviest and best finished out litter on the date of sale, age taken into consideration, will be awarded a nice prize.

County Agent Stapp states that the outlook for hogs is pretty good, and he is anxious to see this project go over in a big way. He is now ready to enroll boys who want to enter the con-

Another Poultry Car To Be Through Soon

With the price of eggs so low and with indications that eggs as well as chickens will go still lower, another poultry car has been scheduled as follows:

Verbena, Wednesday, February 18th, 2 to 5 P. M.

Clanton, Thursday, February 19th, all day.

Jemison, Friday, February 20th, until noon.

This will likely be the last car for some time as prices are expected to go lower.

The following prices will be paid at the car:

Colored Hens	15c
Leghorn Hens	12c
Roosters	8c
Stags	12c
Friers (1½ to 2½ lbs.)	22c
Turkeys	20c
Geese	8c

Cull your flocks close, because at the present price of eggs only your best hens lay enough to pay for their keeping. Your good hens will still make you a little money.

County-Wide Spelling Bee

It seems that there is some misunderstanding about the Spelling Bee which is to be held in connection with the County Play Day. According to a report from the office of the Superintendent of Education, each school in the county may send its one best speller. The school is to select this one best speller from any grade through the ninth grade. Then the two best spellers in the County Spelling Bee will go to Jacksonville to spell in the District Spelling Bee.

A handsome trophy will be awarded to the winner of the Jacksonville Spelling Bee. This trophy will not be awarded to the individual but to the county represented by the winning contestant.

'A MAN AND A MULE'

Editor's Note: This article was carried sometime ago by the News, and by a large request we are publishing it again.

Over the hill trailed a man behind a mule drawing a Dixie plow. The clod hopper was "broadcasting."

"Bill, you are a mule, the son of a jackass, and I am a man made in the image of God. Yet, here we work, hitched together year in and year out. I often wonder if you work for me, or I for you. Sometimes I think this is a partnership between a mule and a fool. For surely I work as hard as you, or harder. Plowing here we cover the same distance, but you do it on four legs and I on two. So, mathematically speaking, I do twice as much work per leg as you do.

"Soon we'll be preparing for a corn crop. When the crop is harvested, I give one-third to the landlord for being kind enough to let me use this corner of God's universe. The other third goes to you, and what is left is mine. But while you consume all your third with the exception of a few cobs, I divide my third among seven children, six hens, two ducks and a banker. Bill, you are getting the best of me; it ain't fair for a mule, the son of a jackass, to rob a man, the lord of creation, of his substance. And, come to think about it, you only help to cultivate the ground. After that, I cut, shock and husk the corn, while you look over the pasture fence and 'hee-haw' at me.

"All fall and part of the winter, the whole family, from granny, down to the baby, pick cotton to help raise money to buy a new set of harness and pay interest on the mortgage on you. And, by the way, what do you care about that mortgage? It doesn't worry you any. Not a darn bit. You leave that to me, you ungrateful, ornery cuss.

"About the only time I am your better is on election day, for I can vote and you can't. But if I ever get any more out of politics than you do I can't see where it is. Alabama Farmer.

LOCAL FARMERS ARE TO GET DROUGHT RELIEF

Co. Agent Points Out Specific Instructions To Those Who May Apply Here

County Agent Stapp, Mr. W. L. Popwell, Mr. J. C. Page and Miss Zora Guy attended the Drought Meeting in Montgomery Sunday.

A representative of the Federal Government addressed the meeting and explained who was eligible for the Government loans.

Only farmers in the drought stricken areas will even be consideerd. The Act of Congress pertaining to loans in the drought area states plainly that only farmers whose crops were materially decreased by the drought last year will be considered. It further states that only such farmers who can not get help anywhere else, (as from banks, supply merchants, etc.) will be eligible.

Mr. Stapp is holding meetings this week as follows:

Verbena High School, Tuesday night, February 10th, at 7 P. M.

Enterprise School, Wednesday night, February 11th, at 7 P. M.

New Cedron School, Thursday night, February 12th, at 7 P. M.

He is asking that only farmers in the drought area of this County who can not get help from other sources attend one of the meetings.

Farmers who live in the south end of the county, probably Beats 5, 10, 6 and 15 and maybe others, and were damaged by the drought and who do not get to attend one of the above scheduled meetings are asked to call at Mr. Stapp's office Friday, February 13th.

Mr. Stapp is anxious to find out this week who may be eligible for Government loans.

This is going to be a difficult task and Mr. Stapp asks that only farmers in the drought area and who can not get help anywhere else make applicatio for a loan.

Mr. Stapp states that it will be necessary for him to cancel all engagements for terracing, orchard work, etc. until he has finished with the drought relief work.

There are many details involved in loaning government money, and Mr. Stapp will have to stay in the office and give practically his full time to these loans for the next two weeks.

Administrative Officer in Charge of Farmers Seed Loans in the United States, gave full instructions to all county loan committees as follows:

1. Have farmed in 1930.
2. Must have suffered severe crop losses due to drouth, storm or hail in 1930.
3. Must be unable to secure finances or supplies from any other source for making a crop in 1931.
4. Each farmer must swear to the correctness of his statements to above conditions.
5. Farmers receiving drouth loans must use funds only for the purchase of feeds, seeds, and fertilizer.
6. The committee of Chilton County is composed of Mr. W. L. Popwell, Mr. T. F. Patterson, Mr. J. C. Page and Miss Zora Guy. This committee will receive applications for loans at Farm Bureau Office, Clanton, beginning on Monday morning, February 9.
7. The county agent will assist farmers making applications. The Chilton County Drouth Loan Committee will forward applications to Farmers Seed Loan Office in Memphis for final consideration. Where passed upon favorably loans will be made by Memphis office.

10. Farmers receiving these must give a first mortgage [illegible] crop and this money must be paid back to the United States treasury from the first sales of 1931 crops with [illegible] 5 per cent per annum.

If not, bring him next Sunday. Judge Lewis L. Fawcett of the State Supreme Court of New York says, "my experience during 23 years on the bench, in which time over 4,000 boys under the age of 21 weer convicted of crime, of whom but three were members of Sunday Schools."

Sunday schools and churches cost something in money, effort and energy, but it is well worth the cost. If all the boys and girls would attend Sunday school and church each Sunday it would not be long till every jail and prison house in the land would be closed. There are four kind of church goers. 1. Those who attend when they feel like it, but do not often feel like it. 2. Those who attend the revivals and special days, as Easter, but are afraid of getting in the habit of going to church. 3. Those who attend when nothing prevents, but are satisfied to fall back on any old excuse for staying away. 4. Those who allow nothing to keep them away from their work. Be a loyal church goer. Come to Sunday school next Sunday.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

A company of Clanton ladies were seated in the sitting room of a certain home. They were talking as ladies usually talk. At last a bit of community gossip came up for review. It was noted that one lady in the company closed her lips and had nothing to say on that topic. It was remarked of her later, "That is a very fine lady. One of the most commendable thing in a woman is not to take part in chewing the rag when gossip is on review." To that statement we wish to give our most hearty approval. It is the safest plan to say nothing, when something kind can not be said. The sage has said, "There is enough meanness in the best of us to make us ashamed to say anything about the rest of us."

In one of Chilton County's schools there was a teacher who thought much and talked much about planting shrubbery and grass about homes and school houses. He believed in it and tried to get others to see things as he saw them. One day he stopped in front of his own home and looked at the place where he lived. Not a bush of shrubbery, no grass, not even a drop of paint on the building. His premises did not measure up to his message. He changed things. He hushed speech and went to work. He built a new house painted it, planted shrubbery and sowed grass. Then everybody in the community became interested. When we learn the art of doing the thing ourselves that we want other people to do, then it will be no trouble to get them to do the same thing with us. Actions speak louder than words. What you want other people to have, first have that thing for yourself.

I stood at the depot and watched the conductor of the Birmingham train. With watch in hand he was ready to give the signal to move on. Just a moment before he was to lift his hand a woman dashed up out of breath "Please conductor," she gasped, "Let me get a ticket and get on that train." The accomodating conductor held his train for the belated passenger, but it did not suit his ideas of promptness. One of the most annoying habits is that of always being late. Some people stem to be born about ten minutes late, and they are never quite able to catch up. They go to church late. They go to engagements late. They even try to hold up a railroad system because they are late. It is just as easy to be on time as it is to be late. Form that habit and see how it works.

When I was a student in the Southern University I was told by my wise professors that certain subjects were "Elective," and that certain subjects were "Compulsory." The authorities of the school told me what studies I must take. I had no choice in the matter. If my course called for three hours in history, I had no right to call in question that regulation. In the Christian life there are certain things that are compulsory. It is not a matter of option with the believer. We must keep the laws of God. Then there are things that we must do in our church loyalty. You have no right to get up on Sunday morning and make church going an "Elective" act of the day. If you are a Christian and you are in good health, it is not left for you to decide whether you will go to God's house. That is one of God's "Compulsory" requirements. When you choose to stay at home, you take the bits in your own teeth, and by your actions say, "God or no God, church or no church, I am going to stay at hem." Church going is not elective in the Christian's life, but it is compulsory.

Not many afternoons ago I was riding along the highway this side of Thorsby, and out in the field that stretched along the road I saw a little barefooted boy following the plow. He moved with dignity and my heart went out to him as he followed the mule. The steadiness of his plow showed to me that he was master of the situation. He was not much taller than his plowhandles, but he knew what he was about. Be patient with the boy who is following the plow today, for he is going to be your preacher tomorrow. Do not look upon him with pity today, for tomorrow he will be your doctor, your lawyer, your banker, your mogul drivers, your song leaders, your great teachers. That boy on the farm is learning how to do things, and you can count on it, he will be doing them tomorrow.

Amzi Barber of Jefferson County, the "handsomest member" of the lower House, made a rousing speech favoring the appropriation for the confederate Veteran's Reunion to be held in Montgomery later in the year. Representative Barber paid fine and worthy tribute to the old soldiers and was warmly applauded. The bill carried overwhelmingly.

Clanton Methodist Church

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

In spite of the gloomy weather of last Sunday, we had a good congregation. Our Sunday school is growing. Our people are becoming more interested and loyal. Our young people are attending church. Last Sunday there were fourteen boys sitting on one bench, all about the same age. A beautiful sight for church life.

Next Sunday do not make going to church elective in your case. Make it compulsory. Be in Sunday school at 9:45 A. M. at preaching at 11 A. M. and at 7 P. M.

We believe in doing everything in connection with our worship in decency and in order. The church is not a place for amusement, but worship. It is the voice of God that says, "Be still and know that I am God."

We insist that you form the church going habit.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our appreciation to the many friends and relatives, and also to Mr. Mell Martin, for their help and kindness during the sickness and death of our father, Anderson Baker. We pray God's blessing on each and everyone.

Representative Massey Edgar of Washington has introduced a bill to limit the number of times a shot gun may be fired from one loading. It is in the interest of game protection. If his bill becomes law it will be illegal to fire any shot-gun more than three times from one loading. This will limit the hunter to three shells at a time in his pump or automatic shotgun. Representative Edgar feels that the birds should have a better chance with the hunter.

The Legislature and Its Grist

By Bob Vail

The "Bus Bills," as they have come to be known, brought hundreds of interested persons to Montgomery during the past week, some to urge and some to oppose passage of these bills. The bills are to regulate trucks and busses on the public highways of the state. They are being studied by the Committees on Commerce and Common Carriers of the two houses. Representative Beebe is chairman of the House committee and Senator Cowart is chairman of the Senate Committee. The public is vitally interested in this matter. Though there has been a great deal of fireworks surrounding this proposed legislation, we predict when the bills come out of committee and are presented to the House, which will probably be during the week, they will be in good form from the standpoint of the public. They will protect this new transportation industry without infringing too much on the railroads, or permitting the general interests of the public to be abused. The person who would use the public highways for personal gain should pay for such use of them. That is fundamental. The public must be protected on the highways from traffic hazards. That is also fundamental. One-light vehicles, over-loaded trucks, vehicles too long or too wide or too high for public safety, must be regulated and made safe; careless, indifferent and the "road hog" type of drivers must be removed from the highways. These things are demanded in the best interests of the public. We believe they will be forthcoming when the new bills are finally enacted into law.

The legislature of Alabama and surviving members of the Constitutional Convention of 1901 paid tribute to John B. Knox Tuesday, on the occasion of presenting to the state a portrait of him as the chairman of that convention, such as seldom falls to the lot of a living man. Mr. Knox was given much credit for creation and ratification of the constitution which forever restored white supremacy to the people of Alabama. The portrait, which shows the Anniston statesman as he appeared 30 years ago, will hang above the speaker's chair in the hall of representatives. Mr. Knox was a handsome man in those days and still retains the upright carriage, clear eye, magnetic presence and powerful mind which made him the beloved leader of the 155 framers of the basic law of the state. His speech in appreciation carried the ring and force that stamped him then, as now, a man among men.

Senator John Craft of Mobile was a useful member of the legislature when he was young in years and initiated many of the humanitarian measures now in force in this state. As the dean of both the branches of the assembly, he is now proving even more useful, giving his colleagues the benefit of his long service and wide experience.

The senior member of the Mobile delegation in the House is Edward J. Grove, who has served three terms as representative. He is a young man, a lawyer and a "scrapper" for the port of Mobile. It is observed that he never takes the floor unless he really has something to say.

Representative George A. Sossman of Mobile is one of the youngest members of the House and one of the most promising of the new crop of budding statesmen. He is making a great fight to restore the Mobile Bay pilots to their original status under which they developed both fame and efficiency. He was once the "King Felix" of the Mobile Mardi Gras but resumed his Democracy the day after the carnival.

William C. Taylor, the second new member of the House from Mobile, was firing a locomotive on a "jerk-water" railroad not many years ago and then he became a switchman. He studied law, became a leader in organized labor circles, was admitted to the bar and later elected to the legislature, all within a few years. "Bill" is a hustler, a real doer.

Charles Albert Coats, Sr., representative from the county of Clarke, awoke to find himself famous after his introduction of House joint resolution rebuking Senator Heflin for some of his remarks about the latest Alabama election. Mr. Coats has been justice of the peace and also sheriff of his county. He lives where he was born, in Clarke county, and looks somewhat like Will Rogers in the face.

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you looked at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

The new Ford is an economical car to own and drive

Low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation mean a distinct saving to every purchaser

THE NEW FORD is a splendid car to own and drive because of its attractive lines and colors, safety, comfort, speed, reliability and long life.

There are, in addition, three other features of importance to every far-seeing automobile owner . . . low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

During the life of the car, the day-by-day economy of owning a Ford will amount to considerably more than the saving on the first cost. You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.

The reasons for this economy are simplicity of design, high quality of materials and care in manufacturing and assembling. Many vital parts are made to limits of one one-thousandth of an inch. Some to three ten-thousandths of an inch. Throughout, the new Ford is an outstanding example of fine craftsmanship in automobile engineering.

The more you see of the new Ford—the more you talk to Ford owners and experienced mechanics—the more certain you become of this fact. . . . It brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

It Is Worth It After All

Chilton County is at present in a position and in such a spotlight that results can be accomplished in the way of making it a bigger and better county, and there can be no sound reason why the citizens should not put forth a united effort to take advantage of this at this time. To accomplish such results, there must be an outstanding willingness to bury jealousies and differences of the past. A feeling should prevail that the people of the community either stand or fall together. If the spirit of "every man for himself" prevails, there is not much hope for any community with a population of people with that spirit.

There are enough broadminded men in the towns and communities of Chilton County to put over anything they should undertake to promote the interest of the county. But before this can be done, past differences will have to be shoved aside and all work together, bringing about a condition that there will not be any great amount of effort on any one individual in such undertakings. Clanton has ceased to be in the roll of small town stuff where one man will refuse to cooperate merely because he doesn't like the other fellow. Clanton has reached the point where the citizens here are going to have to be big, talk big and act like big men. Clanton and Chilton County are almost up the hill,,and a good shove will do a great deal of good, provided it has enough strength behind it.

There most certainly must be a spirit of ambition for the community's interest in the future, in the minds of the people in order to promote the development of a town. The future of their town and county will have to be very dear to their hearts, and pride in its welfare, regretting its losses, hope earnestly for its future, must prevail. It would be very difficult to prevent a town from forging ahead, if its people would feel that way. One good way to put that idea across and make a success of it is for tht people of this county to make it a fixed habit to speak well of their county, point out with pride the excellent things it has accomplished, and forget its failures. Are you a citizen proud of your county, interested in its future, or is your slogan, "every man for himself," and let the devil take the tardy ones?

Three Kinds Of Farmers

One of the drawbacks to any discussion of the farmer and his problems is the uncertainty as to what sort of farming is under discussion. There are three different types of farmer, and in almost every part of the United States all three are to be found side by side.

The most widely distributed type is what may be called the "non-commercial" farmer, the great group with whom farming is not so much a business as a mode of living. This type raises no considerable amount of any one "money crop," but grows on his own land the means of subsistence for his family and, counting out the eggs, butter or other marketable produce traded in town for store goods, handles very little cash in the course of a year.

The group of farmers who are specialist, "one-crop" farmers, is probably the largest numerically and in acreage under fence. They are business men, in the broad sense, producing nothing but a single commodity which they sell or hope to sell, for money, and growing nothing, or almost nothing, which they themselves consume. The single crop may be cotton, tobacco, wheat, corn, oranges, apples, celery or potatoes, depending upon location. Dependent upon their money returns from the single cash crop for everything which they eat and wear, these are the first to feel the effects of a general business depression and are constantly at the mercy of competition and over production in their staple crops. This is the type of farmer at whose relief most of the political remedies for agricultural ills are aimed.

The happiest farmers are the third class, those whose farming operations combine those of the other two. They live off the soil and can continue to live independently and comfortably year in and year out, except for natural catastrophes such as floods or drought. They grow enough of one or more cash crops to figure as important factors in the produce markets, but failure in any one year to cash in on such crops or livestock does not reduce them to penury or plunge them into debt.

For forty years and more the United States and the various State departments of Agriculture, as well as the agricultural colleges have been preaching the gospel of diversified farming in the one-crop regions. Every once in a while some natural or economic disaster drives the one-crop farmers of a district into diversification, and the result is always greater prosperity and stability, not only for the farmer but for all the people of his district or state.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

"The man who talks about himself may be conceited, but that's better than talking about others, as some do."

* * * *

Now that ought to clear up some of your opinions about this featured columnist talking about himself so much. And yet, after all, it is others that I write about extensively. In fact it is others who furnish the greater part of my topics from week to week. If it were not for the others, there would be no need for me writing this column, and if it were not for others, where would I get enough material to fill this column each week? I ask you.

* * * *

Getting peoples' attention might be termed an art, and many business men are studying it. That very art developed the idea of advertising. So you see I have to do a bit of advertising about myself now and then to get the attention of people.

I wish I had seen Dr. Haskew's address last week in time to have called your attention to it, and that it was going to be published in the News. There was some exceptionally fine thought in it, and if you did not read it, you should dig up last week's issue of the News and read that address headed, "Goodwill—A Community Asset."

* * * *

Folks, if things about something local remain as they are, I have an idea that soon I will be giving you something about something that will be very interesting to some people, and rather a pain in the neck to others. But frankly, I hope that some folks will change their minds.

* * * *

It occurred to me not so long ago that some people can certainly be real small about some things. Now, I admit that in the past I have allowed things to get under my skin, but never again, since seeing how some others have acted. Straining at gnats and swallowing camels, so to speak.

* * * *

Speaking of getting peple's attention, who ought to know all about the art of getting attention? Why, the printer, indeed. He has those makings of every word that can be spelled, and ink for any color that can be printed. And he has the paper to produce the effect. Now take for instance the newspapers, they are here ready to serve ready to take your message out to the people in printed form, and set in such a manner that it will get the attention of the people. Can you beat it?

* * * *

Some people had an idea that advertising over the air would be detrimental to the newspapers, and possibly cut down on their business from advertising. Well, in my opinion, radio advertising will soon pass on into the limbo of used-to-be things, because it can readily be seen already. What happens to you when you are enjoying a number over the radio and the announcer steps up to the mike and begins talking about some make of shoe, or some reducing cream for would-be-thin women, or talks about the advantages of using this and that. Why, you want to turn to another station right away, and if you do, and there's no music there, then you turn to another. In other words, advertising coming in over the air, is in most cases shunned by those with radios, and they don't care to listen to it. But put it in the newspapers and it catches the eye, not the ears, and it is read. For an illustration, if you should HEAR female footsteps, and not SEE the one making them, you would not know whether she was a good-looker or not, but if you should SEE her, then you would be able to form your opinion right there. Ain't I right?

* * * *

During the past several days, I have had occasion to overhear some conversations and the idea expressed in a recent address always came to my mind. It is about our town and county. Do we love it? Do we take pride in it? Are we interested in its future growth? De we want it to be advertised to the outside world? Unfortunately, I have been shown that apparently we have some citizens in our town who never give those questions a thought, but just go along, thinking of themselves, and the Dollar. Maybe they do not know that there is such a thing as a future. Maybe they do not realize that a town can go backward a lot easier than it can go forward, and that to make it go forward, it takes some power, some united effort, from lots of sources.

If I might say so, just now is a bad time to call people names, or to tell them they with their ideas are undesirables. There was once a certain purchasing agent who has been trying to make mince meat of every man coming in contact with him, building up for his own future, the hatred of people he may some day need. The other day the president of the company handed the agent a communication something like this:

"Dear sir: Thanks for your quotation of $2,225 for remodeling the right wing of our office. We think your price 'ridiculous, unwarranted, insufferable, and the whole idea rotten.' Those are hard words, but we quote them from your own purchasing agent. He used them on the last three quotations we made to him on printing."

Everybody was made to feel bad on account of the rileness of that agent. He wanted to show his authority, but didn't know he was making enemies by doing it.

* * * *

Robert Popwell, down at Popwell's Pressing Shop, put an ad in the paper last week, and heard that he said this week that he had done more business since then, than before the ad. Just another convert in the idea that it pays to advertise. They are falling every day when their ads appear in newspapers.

* * * *

This Chilton County News I'm writing for is about to put me to work, since they have started actual work on that big booster edition of the paper that will come out soon. Was around there Saturday and Bill Coggins drove up to the back door with his dray with a truck load of paper. I asked him how much was there and he said there was over one ton of paper. And I found out that that ton of paper would be used in one edition of the News. Got to doing a little figuring myself then for curiosity, and found that there will be something like over two hundred thousand pages to shoot out of the News office in that special edition, if I didn't figure wrong. Maybe I can get the editor to put my picture in it. Looks like most every other important person in town has got their picture in it. But in the editor's opinion, I don't amount to much these days, so I know what to expect from him.

Farm Board Salaries Denounced As "Exorbitant"

Washington, Feb. 11—In a discussion of the Independent Offices Appropriation Bill in the House, Representative Woodrum (Dem., Va.) made the following statements concerning salaries paid by the Federal Farm Board, which have been denounced as exorbitant:

"We found that a gentleman by the name of Milner is manager of the Grain Stabilization Corporation and the Farmers' National Grain Corporation. . . He had formerly been connected with the Grain Stabilization Corporation at a salary of $36,000 a year. When he took over the additional duties as manager of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, he was given an additional salary of $14,000, so he gets a salary of $50,000.

"He has an assistant manager who receives $27,000 a year.

"Then of course, the Grain Stabilization Corporation has to have a treasurer. He gets $20,000 a year.

"The Cotton Stabilization Corporation has to have a manager and he is guaranteed a minimum salary of $25,000, with a graduated scale that may run up to $75,000, according to the earnings."

On the question of who pays these salaries, Mr. Woodrum said that while theoretically they are paid by the two Corporation agencies referred to, that "the only funds which the Stabilization Corporation has are what it borrows from the revolving fund, and in case of loss, the loss comes on the revolving fund. . . So it is idle and ridiculous to say that because these salaries at this time are being carried on the books of the Stabilization Corporation and the Grain Corporation that they are not coming out of the Treasury of the United States. They are coming out of the Treasury of the United States, and the loss, if and when it comes, must be borne by this revolving fund."

Mr. Woodrum predicted that the next Congress will be asked for another $100,000,000 for the Farm Board revolving fund, for which $500,000,000 already has been appropriated.

President Hoover and Political Judicial Appointments

Washington, Feb. 11.—Attorney General Mitchell and Senator Schall (Rep., Minn.) are in open controversy over the proposed appointment of Ernest A. Michel, Minnesota lawyer, endorsed by the Senator for a Federal judgship. Attorney General Mitchell holds that appointments should not be made "to pay political debts." He states President Hoover's attitude as follows:

"President Hoover has raised a standard of judicial appointments in which political 'usefulness' does not enter. He has refused repeatedly to be bent by such motives."

In this connection it is recalled that the appointments of Judge Parker of North Carolina to the Supreme Court, Judge Watson of Pennsylvania and Judge Hopkins of Kansas to the District Court were all opposed in the Senate on the ground that the appointments were political.

Attorney General Mitchell's references to the proposed appointee have led to a retort on the part of Senator Schall that the Attorney General used "less than good taste."

After citing this statement, the New York Times remarks that "he (Mr. Mitchell) might better be charged with a lack of memory." Although the paper points out that the Attorney General resisted the Pennsylvania and Kansas appointments, Mr. Hoover, however, did not withdraw either name and they were both confirmed, but only after strong opposition.

New York policemen are not all as hard boiled as might be imagined. When the dog of Louis Dominick, 71, was impounded for non-payment of license, for which the owner could not raise the money, Patrolman Perretti paid the necessary $2, sending the mutt and his aged master home happy.

Justice Zoul of Cleveland says he has kissed 10,000 brides for whom he has performed the marriage ceremony. Admitting that kissing may be unhygienic, he declares he has never been sick. He also observes that "any man who lets fear of disease prevent his kissing a pretty woman isn't much of a man anyway."

Hoover Tries to Drag Red Cross Into Politics, Says Baltimore Evening Sun

Washington, Feb. 11.—Referring to the controversy between President Hoover and the Senate as to whether relief funds for food to drought sufferers shall be made by Congress or the Red Cross, the Baltimore Evening Sun recently said:

"By persuading the Red Cross to undertake the whole burden of relief—even though he (the President) has to use pressure to do it—he obviously places himself in a better position to defy Congress.

"But we wonder whether this effort to drag the Red Cross into politics isn't a little too transparent. The Red Cross has an excellent reputation which it would be a pity to injure. In the past its appeals have been taken at their face value and the people have always responded generously. So, in consenting to become a tool of politics and thus lowering itself in the eyes of the public, it stands to gain little and lose much."

Miss Lucille Taylor, the intermediate grade teacher, was called to Montgomery Monday on account of the serious illness of her brother.

The Junior II Class party at Lucille Griffin's last Friday night was a great success. Games were enjoyed through the evening and afterwards cakes, candies and nuts were served in the dining room. Besides the class members, Miss Nita Campbell, Miss Jewel Vessels and Miss Elizabeth Griffin of Clanton were present.

The girls' goals are up, and the girls are playing every day now.

The boys had a nice game over at Thomas Junior last Friday. The regulars played the first quarter, while the subs completed the game, giving all the boys a chance to play. The final score was 18 to 7 in favor of Enterprise.

Miss Lee Silas will entertain for the Junior I Class at her home Friday night. Only class members are invited.

Our attendance hasn't looked so good this past week. Let's get together and make next week a perfect one.

Good Cotton Seed Saved In Alabama

Auburn, Ala., Feb. 9.—In Alabama a remarkable achievement was attained last year in replacing inferior varieties of cotton with those varieties which make a staple 7-8 of an inch or longer. J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, has received reports from the county demonstration agents showing that 119,070 bushels of good seed of the 1930 crop were saved at special gin days. These seed will be planted this spring and it is estimated that at least 1,000,000 bushels of seed will be saved next fall for planting in 1932.

The reports received by Mr. Lowery from the county agents show that 84,710 of the 119,070 bushels of seed saved in this way are the D. P. L. variety. Cook 1627 is second with 25,810 bushels and other varieties total 8,550 bushels. Farmers in 18 counties participated in the work.

The varieties of which seed have been saved are those recommended by the Alabama Experiment Station on a basis of experiments conducted at Auburn and in cooperation with farmers throughout the State. These varieties yield well and the length of staple produced by them is 7-8 to 1 inch or more.

Improvement of cotton in this way is a project which has wide appeal. Bankers, business men, teachers of vocational agriculture, farm bureau officials and ginners as well as county agents and farmers are cooperating in promoting it, Mr. Lowery said.

This work, he added, seeks to solve a major problem of Alabama agriculture and the cotton spinning industry by producing cotton that is profitable to the grower and also supplies spinners with what they need and want.

Editorial in Montgomery Advertiser, Jan. 30, 1931

"J. C. Dickerman, engineer-examiner of the Federal Trade Commission, who has been looking into the affairs of the Alabama Power Company, makes a report to the Commission, which has been summarized as follows, according to Russell Kent, The Advertiser's Washington correspondent:

1. The company's steam plants are of high class, strategically located, and protect their immediate areas from serious interruptions of service usually supplied from hydro system.

2. Operations are well organized with efficient staff. Use is made of modern methods for recording and directing operations.

3. Book fixed capital of several of the plants built by the company now show low or moderate unit costs.

4. Average revenues from all sales have ranged between one and 1.21 cents per kilowatt hour sold in the past four years.

5. Rates have been closely supervised by Public Service Commission.

6. Rates set at a moderate initial figure, 5½ cents per kilowatt hour being the top step and falling in domestic schedules to 1½ cents. Power schedules scale down to ½ cent.

7. Ownership of property and direct conduct of operations are limited strictly to Alabama.

8. The company is large and well organized and equipped.

This is doubtless unpleasant information for the people's evangels in journalism and politics in Alabama. But it is not unpleasant to those callous individuals who are merely interested in advancing the industrial welfare of the State, in seeing its key industries conducted along sound and correct lines, and in seeing judicious compliments paid by disinterested non-political critics."

State Sales Agency For Truck Farmers

Cooperative marketing of perishable truck farm products in carload lots on a state-wide basis will make its initial appearance in Alabama with the opening of the 1931 shipping season, it is announced by the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, which has provided a central sales agency.

The new service for growers was made possible by the signing of a contract with a nationally-known produce selling agency which has representatives in 200 markets and handled last year more than 43,000 carloads of products, said President Edward O'Neal, of the Farm Bureau.

Mr. O'Neal said the new plan offers an improved outlet for strawberries, Irish potatoes, early sweet potatoes, beans, watermelons, cucumbers, roasting ear corn, radishes, and other perishable products, of which Alabama truckers ship annually from 6,000 to 8,000 carloads. Business will be cleared through the Alabama Farm Bureau Mutual Supply Association, of which A. N. Culver is treasurer.

The larger volume that will be handled on a statewide scale will give the truckers greater bargaining power and enable them to get the highest market price on an f.o.b. shipping point basis, Mr. O'Neal said.

The service is open to county farm bureaus, local shipping associations, and carlot growers and shippers, and contracts will be made between the local organizations and carlot shippers and the state associations, it was announced.

My Best Girl

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter carrier, is the domestic drudge of the humble home where her mother does little except bemoan the fact that she has "seen better days" and her sister Liz(who works in a beauty shop, lies abed late. Maggie has to get the family breakfast before she starts out to her job in the Five-and-Ten-Cent Stors.

There's a new boy at the Five-and-Ten, Joe Grant. He tells Maggie that he has been assigned to work as her helper in the stock room. He seems rather dumb, but Maggie helps him through his first day at the store and shares her lunch with him in a cubby hole of a place that belongs to a mattress factory next door to the Five-and-Ten.

They are looking over some cheap picture cards. One of them has a motto that strikes Maggie's fancy. "The way to begin the ideal life is to begin." She and Joe talk about that and Joe is surprised that the girl has higher standards than he suspected. When he goes home that night he is thinking about Maggie. And his home is the home of the owner of the Mack Five and Ten-Cent Stores, though Maggie does not suspect that he is the boss' son.

Maggie, at home begins to suspect that her mother's complaints are due to that lady's belief that happiness depends upon material things, while at the store she continues to surprise Joe by her appreciation of the realities of life

Joe knew that Maggie was falling in love with him before Maggie discovered it. But he was a little slow in discovering that he, in turn, was falling in love with Maggie. But he admitted to himself that his admiration for her was growing, and the girls in the store began to notice something different about her.

Maggie's interest in her job stimulates Joe's own. He begins to think perhaps it isn't so bad after all to have to work in the store. And he and Maggie begin to talk about love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

She had begun by laughing, boldly. But she had sobered to listen to him, lashes wide, lips slightly parted, little felt hat pushed back to show a film of gold across her earnest forehead. The colour had ebbed from her face, and putting her elbows on the table, she had covered her face with her hands—those small hard, red hands that Joe found so infinitely pathetic.

"Gold help me, it's that way with me now, Joe!" she whispered, not meeting his eyes.

They walked back to the store in absolute silence.

One night in early February, it chanced that at the Merrill table there were dining but three men: George Howard Merrill, president of the entire chain of stores, his trusty right-hand man and general manager, one Frank Flint, and the son of the house, Joseph Grant Mackenzie Merrill.

The last name was included in the party merely because he happened to be in the house, with no dinner engagement and because a wild rain was falling. George Merrill cared no longer whether his son and heir came or went.

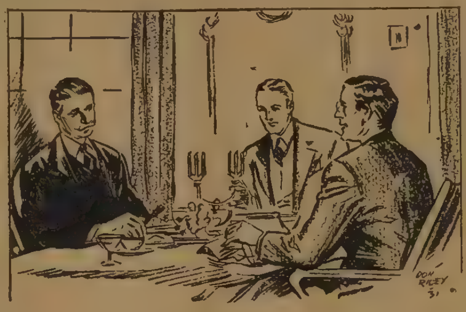
Yet he had blindly idolized his son.

That young Joe had shown a lamentable indifference to society, and had flunked in college, after disposing of a small fortune in various idiotic, if not actually harmful ways, had been a bitter blow to the father's honest, hard-working pride.

Since, however, he was actually living, they had begun, for the first time in his twenty years, to permit him, in their disgust and disappointment, to find his own level.

So that on this particular evening, upon seeing three places set at the family board, his father, scowlingly interrogating the butler, merely shrugged when the answer was that the third place was for Mr. Joseph.

"Oh, he don't matter!" said George Merrill. "We want to talk business. But Mr. Joe's all right. He won't hear a word we say!"



"I wish he would," Frank Flint, a big, rosy, silver-headed man, said politely. "We want that boy in the business, some day."

Mr. Merrill responded simply: "Frank, I don't know what he's doing, or what he wants to do! They're too much for me, nowadays. He's busy about something—it won't last. But while it keeps him out of mischief—or out of jail——"

"I'd be glad enough to have him get interested in the Mack. If he seems to catch on to anything to-night, as we talk, Frank, see if you can draw him out."

"Sorry to be late," said Joe, at this point coming in.

"You're not late," his father assured him ungraciously. Sometimes, in the course of the last few years, his disappointment in this boy had risen almost to actual hatred.

But just of late, ever since, in fact, that terrible scene when his mother had called him a "commoner, without one single gentlemanly instinct in his mind or soul," and when he, his father, had shouted at Joe that he was not better than a pickpocket, there had seemed to be a queer change in the boy.

"Tired, Joe?"

"I beg pardon?"

"Say you look tired, my boy. Research——" said George Merrill, with a wink for his general manager.

"Nope. Yes, I am a little tired. Not much," Joe said unsatisfactorily, falling upon his soup.

Then Joe said mildly, in a pause: "You say that it's the ruined stock that costs in the Mack Stores—not the labor. I've thought of that. It seems to me that every day enough collars and writing paper and candy and toys and socks fall on the floor and are trampled to set up a sperate branch!"

"Where'd you get this, Joe?" asked his father.

"I went into—Number Seven, I think it is," said Joe.

"On Eighth?"

"About there."

"That's Number Seven. Good for you! I hope you got service," said Flint.

"They have a great staff there," said Joe.

"That's a good store. That's a good store," Flint agreed.

"What occurred to me," Joe said leisurely, "was that you—we, I might say—could handle all that small stuff very much better with an automat.

"That's an idea, Joe, but, unfortunately it's not practical," his father said genially, comfortably.

Then his eye and the eye of his general manager met.

"Why isn't it practical, Frank? It works all right on the food—they're opening those damn nickel-in-the-slot places all over town," George Merrill said. "They're practical."

"We-ell——" Frank Flint hesitated.

Joe broke in:

"Take the whole back wall of a store and handle the five- and the ten-cent stuff there. Let 'em drop pennies for their spools and soap and ink and pencils and can openers and hairpins. You could have a girl there to change their money——"

"I'm not at all sure, Joe," said his father explosively. "I'm not at all sure that you haven't given us an idea."

"I could look into that, Mr. Merrill," Flint said. "It might—catch on, Mr. Merrill. It would be an exclusive Mack feature, you know!"

"Frank, the more I think of that, the more I suspect that—there's—something—in—it," George Merrill, drawling his words portentously, said slowly.

"When could you see Burke?"

"See him to-morrow."

"Take that up with him, will you, Frank? Find out who makes that machinery. We might as well look into it, anyway."

Joe wanted to keep that look in his father's eyes, that proud, vindicated look that said: "This boy of mine isn't—such—a—damn'—fool, after all!"

An hour later, he was reading in his room when his father came, rather shyly, rather awkwardly in. The boy had taken the trouble to come upstairs, Joe reflected, gratified.

"Joe, seen that girl who sings that 'Mouse-trap' thing, in the Revue?"

"Yes, sir. Saw it opening night."

"I've got two seats." George Merrill displayed them deprecatingly. "I was going to take Flint," he said.

"I'd like to see that darn show again," Joe said.

Fifteen minutes later, they left the house together. It was the first time Joe Merrill had gone to the theatre with his father since the day of his fourteenth birthday treat.

"I passed along that idea of yours, about having an automat for the notions, to one of the heads," Joe told Maggie. "I took the credit for it, too!" What made me feel rotten was that I didn't say that you had thought of it first."

"Oh, well, we sort of worked it out together, that day we were at the automat," she said, anxious to reassure him.

"Worked it out together nothing! You began it, it was entirely your idea."

"But what's the difference, as long as one of us gets the credit?" she asked innocently.

Joe could only laugh uncomfortably.

When he went downstairs an hour later, he managed his own way through the moving river of the departing employees of the Mack, and found himself beside her.

"Why so fast, Maggie?"

She raised blazing eyes to his.

"How dare you speak to me! You ought to be ashamed to speak to me! I hate you!"

"For heaven's sake, what's the matter?" Joe stammered, aghast.

But she went quickly on, shabby little untidy head held high, and disappeared in the crowd before he could catch her again.

Joe walked briskly toward his car, got into it, and drove toward Goat Hill.

"My gosh, I never saw her like that before! I wonder what the deuce I've done?" he kept saying aloud as he went.

The dinner was at the club tonight; it was for pretty little Katrina Fairchild. Millicent, next to Joe—was beating powder into her father coarse-pored, colorless skin with violent jerks of her elbow.

Everyone in the room was bitterly bored: guests, waiters, musicians. Millicent asked languidly:

"When are we going to announce it, Joe?—Don't interrupt me, Marion," she said to another girl, who leaned across the table for a hysterical confidence. "I'm proposing to Joe Grant."

"It can't be done. I tried it myself, didn't I Joe?" said a third girl, handsome and big.

"I don't seem to remember that, Carol," Joe said, eating. "But some night when I've had too many cocktails one of you girls will get me, and that'll be that."

There were shreiks of laughter, and then the conversation suddenly died, and nobody could think of anything to say.

Conversations were entirely personal, usually first-personal at that.

"My dear, I—well, I—well, if you ask me—I couldn't—I told mother—I she and I—but it isn't as if I—exactly. I couldn't—I simply—if you could have seen me——"

"Marjorie, did you see Mrs. Madison?"

"My dear—wasn't that terrible!"

"Oh, well, my dear, if she would bring that impossible girl——"

"Well, exactly!"

More lip-red, more powder, more cigarettes.

"Of course, Mother felt dreadfully about it."

"Well, but, my dear!"

"Well, exactly—that's what I said to Mother."

"Listen, Maggie, you can't keep this up. Sooner or later you'll have to make it up with me and tell me what the trouble is, so why not now?" Joe pleaded.

She was in the hardware department, and was attempting to straighten up the counter. When she heard Joe's voice, close beside her, she brought her proud little chin up with a jerk, her cheeks crimsoned, and her tone was cutting, if a trifle shaky, as she said:

"You broke my heart. But it doesn't matter. Please get out of my way."

"How in the name of St. Pete, did I break your heart?"

"We'll not—" she was being magnificent—"we'll not discuss it," she said

"We will discuss it," said Joe. "I haven't done anything, and I object to your acting this way!"

"Oh, no—no!" she said, in a low trembling voice shaken with anger. "Oh, no. You didn't take Paulo Younger to lunch, and pay for her lunch, at our place—at our place!—and then walk with her, and stroll around the streets with her, and have all those horrible girls at the lampshades making fun of me, and saying that Paula had gotten you away from me."

"Now, listen, Maggie—that's utterly ridiculous. In the first place, I went in alone—alone—to have my lunch at the Old South Tea Room—but I swear to you I went in there with no more idea that Miss Younger was lunching there than you had! I saw her at an empty table—the place was packed, and, naturally, I sat with her."

"Oh, naturally!" Maggie said, trembling, beside herself.

"Well, would you have me cut the girl?" Joe asked, warming in his turn. "I sat with her, and later I paid the tip, twenty-five cents, and our bill for two sixty-cent lunches. There! If I'd known that you expected me to ask permission——"

"I'll never," she gritted between her teeth, "I'll never speak to you again!"

She had finished her task now, the hardware counter was in order, and went down to the girls' washroom, washed her hands and, after a while, her tear-swollen eyes in cold water and wiped them on the soggy lengths of the exhausted roller towel.

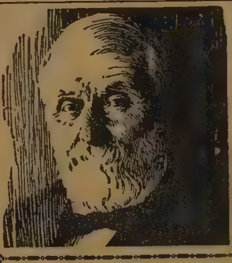
Take Thedford's Black-Draught for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness. Only 1 cent a dose.



OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

FOUR MILES A MINUTE

A new automobile record was made on the Daytona beach a few days ago, when Captain Malcolm Campbell drove his racing car at the unprecedented speed of 246 miles an hour, nearly 15 miles an hour faster than the former world's record held by the late Captain Segrave.

While the ability to travel at this terrific speed is of little practical value in itself, it does serve to illustrate the great advance made by automobile engineers in recent years. This new record of more than four miles a minute is almost within hailing distance of the best airplane speed, which is a little in excess of five miles a minute.

The skill and daring of those who perform these extraordinary feats of speed can not fail to excite admiration, but conservative folks will have little desire to emulate them.

Most people are satisfied to travel slower, with the probability of traveling longer.

MORE POLITICAL BUNK

Among the many economic fallacies now being advanced by certain groups of politicians, none is more absurd than the idea that government ownership and operation of public utilities would be in the interest of the public. This applies especially to the electric industry, about which there is considerable political agitation just now.

The theory put forward by those of socialistic tendencies is that by government development of water-power sites cheaper electricity would result. The fact is that waterpower is rapidly losing its importance as a source of electric energy, due to the increasing efficiency of steam plants. In 1930 only 32 per cent of the electricity generated in the United States was produced from waterpower.

As an illustration of the improvement in steam generation it may be mentioned that only ten year ago it required an average of 3 pounds of coal to generate a kilowatt hour of electricity, while at present only 1.6 pounds of coal are required.

That the savings effected by the use of modern equipment are reflected in rates charged the public is evidenced by the fact that average rates for household electric service are now 30 per cent below pre-war levels, while other living costs are 60 per cent above those of 1913.

In view of these incontrovertible facts, it is somewhat difficult to understand what all this socialistic shooting is about. The only plausible explanation is that it is just plain political bunk.

Mrs. Mollie Roberts Died Last Monday

o

As the dawn was beginning to light up the face of nature last Monday morning and the hands of the faithful family clock pointed to the hour of six, the worn and weary spirit of Mrs. Molly A. Roberts winged its flight to that eternal shore. She was the wife of Mr. H. C. Roberts, who departed this life some ten years ago. She was the mother of eight children, five of whom she had followed to the grave and the remaining three were with her when she crosed over the river Monday.

Mrs. C. L. Branch, Mrs. Maude E. Corley, and Mrs. B. F. Roberts, all of Clanton, were the children who were left in sorrow by her departure. She had twenty grandchildren, six of whom, by her special request, were pall bearers at her funeral. They were Messrs. Guy and Norman Roberts, Hugh Branch, and Harry, Ewart and W. B. Corley. She left eighteen great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Roberts spent the major part of her life in Alabama, marrying Mr. Roberts upon his return from that cruel Civil War. She was a Miss Stanfield in girlhood. She was born in 1844 and had just a few days ago passed her 87th birthday.

Dr. Ezell conducted the funeral services in a manner both beautiful and sympathetic. A lovely testament of beautiful flowers were kindly sent in by friends and the sorrowing ones most earnestly extend their thanks for this most thoughtful remembrance in the dark hour of their grief.

The relations all extend to Undertaker Martin their warmest thanks for his efficient service and helpful and sympathetic handling of the burial. She was laid to rest beside her husband in the family burial lot in the Clanton cemetery.

Spring Football Training Begins
By Herman Harris

Now in a few days according to Coach Walker's promise to the boys, spring training for football will start off with a bang. More interest is being manifested about spring training than ever before. There is some splendid material to pick from, and many of the boys say they are coming out for practice.

The basket ball season is nearing the end. We feel the boys have enjoyed a fairly successful season. The tournament is the 20th. It will be held at Tuscaloosa. While in the Druid City Coach Walker and the boys will be the guests of the University of Alabama. Other courtesies will be shown the various visiting tems from over the State while in attendance at the tournament. The only expense to the boys will be to Tuscaloosa and back to Clanton. Mr. Walker's influence for clean athletics is reflected in the playing of every member of his team. He plays to win, but never at the sacrifice of the high principles of manhood and good sportsmanship. The school appreciates the services of such a gentleman.

Mr. Haskew Honors School With Another Visit
By Esther Lee Dennis

Mr. Haskew made our school another visit last Monday morning at the 10:15 assembly period, and gave the student-body a most interesting and inspiring talk. It was about the "Little Things in Life." He showed very plainly how the little things lead to greater things, either for good or bad. He explained how the habit of taking another's pencil, tablet, book, or pen, would probably lead one to take things of even greater value belonging to another and in the end develop in one a most serious and deplorable trait. He urged the students to hold consistently to the things that are honest, upright, and good.

Musical Number At Chapel

The student body last Tuesday morning at the assembly period was delightfully entertained by a violin duet by Miss Annelu Burns, instructor, and Miss Josephine Martin, a member of our faculty. This is the first number from our music department, but the entire school is looking forward to next Tuesday morning when Miss Burns has promised to present the entire music clas in an ensemble number. The work of this department is progressing rapidly and the school feels fortunate indeed to be able to secure the services of this splendid musician.

Boy Scout Activities of Clanton

This is a great week for Boy Scouts and it should be observed with much respect. Why? Because it is the 21st anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America. Boy Scouts all over America are celebrating it with programs, banquets, hikes, etc. On February 8, 1909 the Boy Scout movement in America was starting and now on the streets of towns and in the country you see a boy dressed in khaki suit, a Boy Scout and proud of it.

But I must not write any more about that now. I must tell you about our own local troop and our celebration. To get everything right I will begin with the first Tuesday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock. All the Boy Scouts of this troop with some exceptions met in front of the Baptist church to have our picture made. The reason for taking this picture was to have it put in the Booster Edition of the Chilton County News. The picture was made by Mr. Scott, local photographer. Tuesday night we met at the church to plan a hike for Wednesday, February 11. We planned to leave about 3:30 o'clock and go to the camp on the river and stay until sometime at night. The other part of our program this week is a basket ball game with the Lay Dam troop. As we go to the camp we will stop and play this game at the dam.

Sunday all the Scouts will attend the Baptist church. This will conclude our program for the 21st anniversary week. Troop meeting Friday night, Feb. 13, at 6:30.

Attorney General Knight announced some time ago his intention to appoint Mr. McCall to the position in which he is now commissioned.

BOOSTER ISSUE WILL BE MAILED ON FEBRUARY 26

Fine Cooperation Found By Those Helping In Compiling Special Edition

The Chilton County News is very much gratified over the progress made publishing the forthcoming special Booster Edition which is to appear and be presented to the public on Thursday morning, February 26th. The News is certainly surprised, but pleased, at the spirit of optimism and feeling of hope that characterizes our people.

In view of the depressed conditions that prevailed over our country, Chilton County has suffered its share of losses and depression, and the News rather expected to find many who who would not respond to the appeals of this newspaper for material for this booster edition. But, the News believes it can truthfully state that at no time during the highest peak of prosperity would the people have cooperated better than they have done in assisting to put this forthcoming great edition of the News over.

If every county and city in the United States was as optimistic and cheerful as our local people, Mr. Gloom would have packed up his grip and left us long ago. From the News' point of view, business is fifty per cent better at this period than had ben hoped for even three months ago. Our community problems are being solved and we are moving onward to greater success.

It is the opinion of the News that it has been fortunate in securing the services of J. H. Bell, and R. C. (Bob) Gore, of the J. H. Bell Advertising Agency of Birmingham and Columbus, to assist in the compiling and publishing of the Chilton County Booster Edition of the News. Their services have been outstanding in this work, and judging from expressions from these two gentlemen, they are pleased with the future prospects of Clanton and Chilton County, pointing out many advantages here, that have possibly been overlooked in the past, although this newspaper has always seen bigger and better things for the county.

Mr. Bell and Mr. Gore have been in Clanton for several weeks, rendering untiring services toward making the special edition of the News a success, and one that will be more than appreciated by the people of this section.

Mr. Gore's work as a special feature writer is very unique, and his various outstanding talents along that line have shown up clearly in this forthcoming edition. During the countless interviews Mr. Gore has experienced in this writing, he has found for himself many friends. In an expression from him, it was learned that he looked upon these connections as real pleasures, commenting on the extreme cordiality of the people of Clanton. Mr. Bell, who was secured to handle the general managing of the booster edition, and to have charge of the designing and photography, and the articles, has more than once stated that he has been impressed with the warm receptions from local business and professional men.

Mr. Bell has had the opportunity to address the local Kiwanis Club, and his talks on advertising and community good will spirit have been thoroughly enjoyed, and it is the opinion of many that the visit of these two gentlemen to Clanton has furthered the good will of this community.

The entire force of the News in every department has been taxed to its limit, and the opinion has been expressed that the cooperation and willingness from each member of the staff has been outstanding in the News plant at all times. The News will devote a special section to those members in the office who have strived and succeeded in making the special Chilton County Booster Edition a success as far as their part of the project was concerned.

Although this special edtion is practically completed, the News finds it necessary to ask for a bit more information from various sources to make this edition next week one of the most attractive and interesting editions ever published in this section of the country.

From time to time in the next two or three days, citizens of the county will probably be called on to assist in the gathering of information to complete the informative value of the special edition. The News wishes at this time to thank those who have already assisted in this work, and will appreciate any further cooperation to place this coming edition at the top.

NEW LAW GOES INTO EFFECT ON STATE ACCTS.

All Accounts Against State Must Be Registered Before March 1, If Outstanding

"The registration of the State debt is being rapidly completed," said S. H. Blan, State Treasurer, when questioned by a representative of this paper.

"The law requiring registration was signed by Governor B. M. Miller on January 30th. The law requires the registration of all outstanding warrants and accounts against the State, which were due and unpaid at that time, January 30th. Thirty days are allowed by law for the registration of these outstanding warrants and accounts against the State. All debts due by the State not registered within the thirty days are barred by law for a period of two years."

Mr. Blan stated that March first will be the last day upon which warrants and accounts may be registered, and that therefore anyone having an unpaid warrant or account should send the same to the State Treasurer for registration. The sooner these are sent in the better, as they are paid in order of registration.

After March first the registered State debt will be totaled and the Governor will then treat with the Legislature as to the best and most economic method of handling the same.

L & N SAYS RAILROAD LAND GRANTS WERE NOT GOV. GIFTS

Attention is called to an advertisement from the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company appearing in this issue of the News, in which they are pointing out that railroad land grants were not gifts from the government and that the government is receiving annually the worth of the land occupied by the railroads. In part the ad reads as follows:

"The June 30, 1930, 132,173,225 acres of land, the great bulk of it lying west of the Mississippi River, had been actually certified to the interested railroads. During the twenty-year period, 1850 to 1870, when most of the grants were made, the average price received by the Government for land sold to others was 94c an acre. In other words the railroads received title to land worth, in the aggregate, $124,242,831; but, in return, the land-grant lines are required, under the law, to handle Government troops, munitions of war, and other Government freight, at rates substantially lower than commercial rates, and United tSates mail at 80 per cent of the standard or authorized rates. Because of these reductions the actual monetary saving to the Government

O. O. ROPER HAS LARGE LOSS BY FIRE SAT. NIGHT

One Mule Burned to Death In Fire Destroying Large Storage Barn

Clanton suffered another fire loss last Saturday night when the large barn belonging to O. O. Roper, who resides near West End, was completely destroyed.

The barn, which was rather roomy, was located just at the rear of the Roper home. The blaze was discovered about midnight by neighbors, who aroused Mr. and Mrs. Roper, the former turning in the alarm.

Volunteer firemen and the city apparatus were soon on the scene, but very little work could be done by the fire department, due to the fact that the flames had almost enveloped the entire structure, when discovered.

Information stated that a large quantity of corn, hay and other feed stuff, one mule, and some farming implements were destroyed. There was also a cow housed in the building, but Mr. Roper managed to rescue the animal before the flames reached her. As to how the fire originated, no information could be had, as it was stated that the origin was undetermined. It was also stated that no insurance was carried. Mr. Roper is well known over the entire county, and owns considerable farming interests in the county, spending practically his entire time to that line of work.

Dr. Julius Jones Died Thursday Night, 12th

Dr. Julius Jones, age 73 years, died at his home in Rockford last Thursday night, ebruary 12, about two o'clock. His death is said to have been caused by heart failure, of which he was a sufferer for the past several months.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mattie (McDonald) Jones, three sons, Julius, of Birmingham; Sherrill, of Vernon; Walter, of Rockford; and two daughters, Mrs. Marie Ashcraft, of Lakeland, Fla., and Miss Carrie Love Jones, of Rockford.

Funeral services were held at Rockford Baptist Church Saturday at eleven o'clock, conducted by Rev. C. H. Herd, of Georgia, a former Baptist pastor of Rockford. He was buried with Masonic honors, and Service Funeral Home of Alexander City, in charge.

Dr. Jones was a highly respected citizen of this community, having been born and reared in Coosa County, and spent a great portion of his life in Rockford. He was actively engaged in the practice of medicine, until a year or so ago, when he had to retire on account of feeble health.

He was a Baptist, and his life was sincerely devoted to the cause of Christianity. Among his neighbors and friends, he was loved, honored, and respected for the stand which he took on the side of right living and clear morals.

A vast throng of friends and neighbors, and loved ones were present Saturday when his body was laid to rest.

The deceased is the brother of C. Fenn Jones, one of Clanton's prominent citizens, and former hardware and furniture merchant, who survives him.

Frank Anderson, former Chilton County resident, and now of New Orleans, La., was in Clanton several days last week visiting his mother, Mrs. Kate Anderson.

Mr. Anderson is now a Marine Engineer of outstanding prominence at his post in New Orleans. Too much can not be said as to Mr. Anderson's accomplishments. He is one of Chilton County's boys who have made good in the world, and can be termed a self-made man. His perseverance has been placed out in prominence, and carried him to the dizzy heights of success.

COUNTIES WILL RID SELVES OF SHORT STAPLE

Plan To Provide Large Quantity of Pure Seed for Planting In Next Year

Farmers of Cherokee, Clay, Calhoun, Shelby, Chilton and Elmore counties have definitely joined the movement to free Alabama of short staple cotton.

After a trip to these counties, J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist of Auburn, reports that, in cooperation with county agents and ginners, farmers are planning to hold gin days in the fall of 1931.

Farmers living around certain gins will plant this spring seed of either D. P. L. 4-8 or Cook 1627 varieties, and then next fall on one day only cotton of these varieties will be ginned on the gins of the community.

The aim in each case is to provide a large quantity of pure seed for planting in 1932 at a price which farmers can afford to pay.

Lowery says that nearly half of the Alabama cotton crop is of staple below 7-8 inch in length and that farmers are being penalized from $5 to $10 per bale on this cotton.

Bankers, business men, Farm Bureau leaders, teachers of vocational agriculture, and others are cooperating in the movement to make the better seed available.

It is expected that at least one carload of pure seed will be planted in each county this spring.

A & P STORES MAKE REPORT ON SALES OF RECENT MONTHS

o

Sales of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company for the five weeks ending January 31st were $97,558,824, which compares with $104,270,933 for the same five weeks' period in January, 1930, and is a decrease of $6,712,109, or 6.44 per cent.

Although dollar sales were smaller this January than they were a year ago, due to the continued decline in retail food prices, the actual quantity of goods sold in the January period, 1931, showed a gain of 3.65 per cent over the corresponding period in 1930. In fact, more goods were sold in January this year than in any other January in the history of the Company. Estimated weekly tonnage in January, 1931, was 102,084, compared with 98,485 in January, 1930; an increase of 3,599.

The Legislature and Its Grist

By Bob Vail

By Bob Vail

Pete B. Jarman, Jr., is Alabama's recently inaugurated Secretary of State. He is admirably equipped for rendering notable service in this office. He has started off with a bang! Governor Miller's economy moves having stripped the Secretary of State's office of five out of seven clerks, the work in that office has piled up. Mr. Jarman in an effort to get relief has appealed to the Legislature. The administration forces have opposed his appeals. Some spirited clashes have resulted. The Senate was evenly split on two roll calls on so-called "Jarman" votes—16 to 16. The tie was broken by Lieut.-Gov. Merrill, who voted with the administration forces, thus defeating the sponsors of the Jarman measures. In the House a recent vote on a "Jarman" bill was 60 to 36 in favor of the administration forces. What the end will be no one has predicted. Many feel that the Secretary of State needs more assistance. The feeling is also prevalent that in time the Governor will give him relief. In the meantime the Legislature is considering a bill, which has pased the House, to remove a substantial amount of work of the Secretary of State's office to the State Tax Commission.

o

We nominate Hon. Earl McGowin of Butler as the "Champeen of Erudition" in the House. Mr. McGowin, we are informed, is an alumnus of Alabama, Columbia, and a graduate of Oxford College, England. He won in a highly competitive field the coveted Rhodes Scholarship several years ago. Mr. McGowin is perceptably "growing" in the House. He is keenly interested in forestry problems and aviation.

o

Senator Harry Walker of Limestone is the only newspaper man in the upper house of the Alabama Legislature. He is also a cotton planter and general farmer and is Chairman of the important Senate Committee on Agriculture. Being a printer, Senator Walker is also interested in a safe plan for having just as much Alabama printing done in Alabama as possible. It is now going out of the state in large quantities.

o

"No use monkeying with revenue bills during the short section of the session," says Representative Finis Ewing St. John of Cullman. As Mr. St. John is chairman of the ways and means committee and also vice chairman of the rules committee what he has to say on the subject has weight. He can enforce it by refusing to call a meeting at this stage of the game. His committee will have to prepare a general revenue bill during the second section of the regular session, so he can see no special reason for taking up the time of the house and senate with segments of revenue legislation at this time. The subject of revenue will be considered as a whole with the view of getting the state out of the hole.'

o

Senator Timothy Sauls Faulk, of Samson, in Geneva county, would take all of the special school funds, such as those derived from the "nuisance" taxes and such, put them in a lump, then give the elementary schools the first whack at them and if any of these funds were left after that he would prorate them with the higher institutions of learning. It now appears probable that matters relating to appropriations will go over until after the recess, just the same as will the revenue bills. It is one of the functions of the fact-finding committee to find out what money is really needed in the several state departments.

o

One of the most popular young members of the House is Representative R. B. Kelly of Talladega. As Capt. Kelly thousands of World War Vets. throughout Alabama will remember him.

o

Atticus Mullin's Buck Doe stories in The Advertiser are about the first thing the average legislator looks for in the morning when the solons are in Montgomery. His daily column is highly personal in a good humored way and contains whole undigested grains of Meek wisdom and wit.

o

Chairman Charles R. West, of the house committee on education, has kept his committee busy during the off days devoted to such hearings. He hails from New Castle, in Jefferson county, and has devoted much of his life to the cause of public education. Senator G. J. Hubbard, of Troy, at the head of the education committee in the "House of Lords," as the late Lee Long frequently called the senate, has also kept up with the gist that has come to his branch of the legislative mill. The most important part of the legislative work is done by the standing committees and the least important is the oratory, directed at the galleries and reporters.

o

Governor B. M. Miller has rigged up a press room for the capitol reporters, which will prove of great convenience to the men covering the legislature for outside newspapers. Governor Kilby installed something of the same kind during his administration. It is observed that Governor Miller is following some of the same paths that made the Kilby regime one of the most progressive in the state's history and is also breaking in new paths of his own at the same time. The appreciation of the active newspaper bunch is a good asset for any governor to acquire and preserve.

Three-cornered wire sink baskets make good receptacles for dusty and oily cloths in the cleaning closet, as they permit a circulation of air and reduce the danger of fire. They take up very little space in a small closet.

Always iron with the thread of the goods and iron until the garment is dry. Otherwise it will pucker. To remove the shiny gloss on seams, tucks, or hems, moisten a piece of soft cloth in clear water, wring it dry and wipe it quickly over the shiny surface.

Thin, crisp slices of oven-dried toast are delicious with soup. When you have a large part of a loaf of stale bread on hand, trim off the crusts, which can be dried separately for bread crumbs, and, with a sharp knife, cut the loaf into slices as thin as possible. Place in a moderate oven until crisp and delicately browned. If kept in an airtight tin, these pieces will be crisp for several days.

WOODS FIRES & BOLL WEEVILS

In some sections of the South, farmers are still attempting to get rid of the boll weevil by burning their woods. In combating the boll-weevil it seems to be the united opinion of experts on the subject that fence rows and ditch banks should be burned each year, but in all cases fire should be kept out of the woods. The following statements of opinion and recommendation from Federal and State authorities should be helpful:

Dr. C. L. Marlatt, Chief, Bureau of Entomology, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"It has come to the attention of the Bureau of Entomology that quite frequently cotton farmers practice fall or winter burning of forest cover for the purpose of destroying boll weevils in hibernation, thereby doing irreparable damage to forest reproduction. The Bureau of Entomology is in full accord with the Forest Service in the view that such practices should be discouraged. Indiscriminate forest burning is not recommended as the loss out-weighs the gain. This is due to the fact that weevils leaving the cotton field to enter hibernation concentrate immediately around the filed and it is only in shelter immediately adjoining cotton fields that the population is heavy enough to warrant any winter cleanup measures. Consequently, we emphasize the burning only of ditch banks, hedge rows and similar situations immediately adjoining the cotton fields and recommend most strongly against the burning over of woodlands."

Dr. R. W. Leiby, State Entomologist, Raleigh, North Carolina.

"I do not consider that the burning over of wooded lands adjacent to old cotton fields has any value in the ultimate amount of injury that may be caused by boll weevil the following season. Injury to the timber crop by fire is in all probability much greater than a possible small benefit by burning up a very few weevils that might die a natural death during the winter anyway. I think Entomologists in general would agree to the above statement."

Dr. Haliard De La Parelle, Former State Entomologist, Atlanta, Ga.

"The practice of buring over forest lands should in my opinion, be discouraged. It is our understanding that this practice is done not only to control the boll weevil but also to aid those men who gather the turpentine, in facilitating their movement through the forest and lessening the danger from the attack of snakes which might be concealed in the grass. As far as the benefit from this burning in killing the boll weevil is concerned, we do not feel that the destruction of young trees is in any measure compensated by the destruction of the boll weevil. While we have not exact investigation data upon the amount of boll weevils hibernating in the forest grasses it is our opinion, and also that of other authorities, that the relative number is very small."

"We are doing all that we can to discourage the burning over of timberland and are glad to cooperate with you in this matter."

Mr. E. C. Westbrook, Cotton and Tobacco Specialist, State College of Agriculture, Athens, Ga.

"At one time a great many farmers believed that by burning the forests in the early spring that they could destroy a great many weevils before they emerged from their winter quarters. Thorough investigation made it absolutely cetrain that only a very small number of boll weevils are killed in this way. The damage to the forest very greatly exceeds any possible benefit that could be derived from burning the forest. Most weevils are too securely embedded in old stumps and dead trees, and in the moss, to be effected by fire."

Dr. George A. Maloney, Field Crop Insect Investigations, Tallulah, La.

"We deprecate very much the practice of some farmers of burning over their woodlands every winter with the idea of destroying bool weevils. The weevil does not pass the winter in large numbers close enough to the ground for the burning to be effective. The damage caused by such fires inflicts greater harm than would be possible by the few weevils which perchance might be destroyed by fire."

Excerpts From L & N Employes' Magazine

Edward R. Manson, 114 W. 34th St. Covington, Ky., retired to the pension roll of the L & N Railroad after having served the company as fireman and engineer for more than 52 years. Mr. Manson is 68 years old. He began firing on the old Kentucky Central R. R. (which became part of the L & N in 1891) at the age of 15 and was promoted to engineer one month before his 18th birthday. In all his service not a single suspension or other disciplinary action was recorded against his record.

Other veteran employes of the L & N whose retirement is announced in the L & N Employes' Magazine for February, include: George N. Chappell, age 66, agent, Sonora, Ky., for the past 36 years; total service 46 years; Elijah P. Donnell, age 80, baggage agent, Milan, Tenn., 42 years service; Richard T. Sipes, age 52, brakeman on Owensboro Division, living 1103 Central Avenue, Louisville, Ky., 30 years; Evariste Fayard, age 74, painter, Bay St. Louis, Miss., 42 years; Thomas E. Willis, age 71, locomotive engineer, 2002 8th Ave., S., Nashville, Tenn., 50 years; O. T. Grant, age 62, Shepherdville, Ky., section laborer, 20 years; William M. Scott colored, fireman, age 57, 1021 5th Place N., Birmingham, Ala., 34 years; and Bryant Moore, colored, fireman, age 56, 712 9th Ave. N., Birmingham, Ala., 26 years.

At a meeting of the General Assembly of the Louisville & Nashville Veterans' Club at Louisville, Ky., in January, Ben Hund, retired yardmaster, of that city, was elected president of the club which comprises several thousand veteran employes of the L & N Railroad. W. H. Ford, Rocky Hill, Ky.; J. A. Mudd, Louisville; P. P. Doll, Louisville; and Dr. Chas. W. Welch, Louisville, were re-elected senior vice president, secretary, treasurer and chaplain respectively.

The annual convention of the club in 1931 was fixed on June 6 at Nashville. Tenn. An amendment to the by-laws was voted, fixing eligibility for membership in the club at 20 years service instead of 25 as heretofore.

During 1930 crossing accidents on the L & N Railroad were cut in half as compared with the previous year, and casualties resulting therefrom reduced 48.5 per cent. The consolidated record of all railroads in the country showed a decrease of 17 per cent. The prime factor in the L & N's record, according to the February number of the L & N Employes' Magazine, was the change in the grade crossing whistle signal inaugurated in March, 1930, in which the engineer is required to blow two long, one short and a final long signal at each crossing—the last long whistle to end at the crossing.

Three engineers of the Nashville Division of the L & N Railroad, William M. McMurray, Thomas E. Wilils and Thomas Burns, having completed half a century in the service of the road, were recently awarded 50-year diamond service buttons. The emblems were presented at a banquet given in honor of the three veterans in the dining room of the Union Station at Nashville on January 15, attended by 65 officers and fellow employes of the L & N.

Engineer Willis retired on January 1, just after completing 50 years, but Messrs. McMurray and Burns are still in the harness.

Mobile, Ala., is rapidly becoming known as the "City of Azeleas" according to the L & N Employes Magazine for February. It was not until 1929 that Mobile recognized fully the value of her azeleas and began to cultivate them in earnest. An azalea trail was mapped out and blazed with steel markers. By blosom time in 1929 more than 4,000 plants had been added, and since that at least 20,000 more azaleas have been planted along the trail. Each year the Azalea Trail is officially opened for the season, with impressive ceremony, during Mardi Gras festivities.

Railroad land-grants were not gifts from the Government. . .

L&N
LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE R.R.

According to an official press release issued by the War Department, the Secretary of War, in a recent address at St. Louis, said:

"Long stretches of the public land domain were freely bestowed upon the railroad companies that built our great railroads."

This statement has since been frequently repeated by others, principally by the proponents of waterways and bus transportation, with the clear implication that the land-grants were outright gifts.

Instead of being "freely bestowed," long ago such railroads as received land-grants—and many did not—compensated the Government for them, and it is still being more than amply rewarded.

To June 30, 1930, 132,173,225 acres of land, the great bulk of it lying west of the Mississippi River, had been actually certified to the interested railroads. During the twenty-year period, 1850 to 1870, when most of the grants were made, the average price received by the Government for land sold to others was 94c an acre. In other words, the railroads received title to land worth, in the aggregate, $124,242,831; but, in return, the land-grant lines are required, under the law, to handle Government troops, munitions of war, and other Government freight, at rates substantially lower than commercial rates, and United States mail at 80% of the standard or authorized rates. Because of these reductions, the actual monetary saving to the Government now averages about $5,000,000 per year. Moreover, other competing railroads that did not receive land-grants were, and are, likewise subjected to these reduced rates, which serves to increase further the Government saving.

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

It is seen, therefore, that the value of the land is repaid to the Government, at the least, every twenty-five years.

Not only has the Government already been handsomely repaid—more than once—for every acre of land turned over to the land-grant lines, but payment, under the law, will continue indefinitely.

The railroads built this country, and railroad transportation must remain the backbone of industry. Give them a square deal. They are asking for nothing more.

No Dole

The effort in Congress to pauperize vast numbers of Americans by voting money from the public funds as a free gift seems to have failed. The time-tried American method of relieving economic distress by private charity is working out. The Red Cross has the drought-relief situation well in hand and the people of the United States have responded in full to its appeal for funds.

Such money as has been appropriated from the public treasury for the relief of the farmers who are compelled to make a fresh start in life because of the drought will be made available to them on terms which will not sacrifice their self-respect nor render them objects of Government charity. There are a few in every community who would rather get something without working for it than to do an honest day's work, and they are usually the ones who are most vociferous in their demands for help. But the time has not yet come when any considerable portion of Americans are ready to confess that they can not support themselves, and are willing to live in idleness at the expense of their fellow-citizens.

o-o-o-o

No Ground For Fear

It is useless to deny that the present state of mind of many Americans is fear of what the future may bring.

Fear seems to be prevalent in all public thinking on economics today. People are afraid that things are not going to "come back," that somehow we have lost our stride as a nation and are not going to be able to get going again at the old pace. There is more money now in savings banks than ever before in history. Much of it has been put there in the past year because people were afraid to spend it. Merchant have been afraid to replenish their stocks, for fear prices would go down still farther. Individuals have been afraid that conditions were going to get continually worse.

There is nothing in our history to warrant such fears. The only way to judge the future is by the past. All of our past history reveals a succession of forward steps, never a backward one. The pace has slackened at times, as it has slackened in the past eighteen months, but the movement has always been forward. There is not a single reason for the belief that our economic progress has stopped or that we are going backward. On the contrary, all the signs point in the other direction. There is no ground for fear.

o-o-o-o

Farm Relief

There is talk in Congress of an increase of 50 per cent in the tariff on all agricultural products. That would go a long way toward helping the farmers who have something to sell, or who will have something to sell this year. The whole world is in the same state of agricultural overproduction as we are, and everybody is trying to dump surplus grain, cotton, potatoes, fruits, wool, sugar and other agricultural commodities on us.

If we are to have a tariff wall, by all means make one as high for the farmer as for the manufacturer. Industry has had more than its share of protection in the past; it is the farmer's turn now.

Another encouraging sign of better times ahead for the farmer is the agreement which wheat growers in the Texas wheat belt, another group in South Dakota, still another group in the Pacific Northwest, are making themselves, to reduce their wheat acreage by 40 per cent. It is encouraging because it is the first, so far as we can recall, that any considerable body of growers has started intelligent self-help on sound economic principles. The cry of the farmer has been too much that of wanting somebody else to step in and help him. The only people who can give the farmer any permanent help are the farmers themselves. If the educational campaign against overproduction initiated a year and a half ago by the Farm Board results in cutting down agricultural acreage in all of the staple crops, the Board will have justified its existence and its cost if it accomplishes nothing else. And with acreage reduced and a tariff high enough to keep foreign foodstuffs out of the country, the farmer's problems will be solved.

Editorial Joys and Sorrows

The reading public, which nowadays includes pretty nearly every person above the age of three or four years, is always inquisitive and sometimes very critical regarding the mysterious personages called editors, whose function it is to pick and choose the daily supply of printed material for the insatiable maw of the printing presses.

What qualifications should a good editor have? How should he make his selections? Are present-day editors performing their duties effeciently and effectively? Is the public satisfied with them?

All these questions were brought sharply into the public eye a few days ago in a remarkable radio address by Sumner Blossom, editor of the American Magazine.

"The editor's job," he said, "is comparable to that of a mail carrier. He has to go out and get something and deliver it. When this is done, he has to go out and get something else and deliver that. The minute he stops delivering he has turned from being a good servant to being a poor one. Nothing counts except a continuous and effective performance.

"The search for the fresh, the new and the original is his unending task. Able writers are the scarcest and most valuable things in the world. Competition for ability is so great among editors that no potential source of talent can be overlooked.

"Above all, the editor must remember that the public does not grow old along with him. The individual grows older—but the public, always changing, is always young. And so it is that I suggest to editors and writers that they keep young. Youth is the age of enthusiasm, and enthusiasm is the most useful quality a writer can have.

"No job I know is more difficult than that of editing material for public consumption. Other creative folk can stand face to face with their audiences and catch reactions immediately. But the editor must lay his decisions on paper and send them out into the world, knowing that from then on he is their slave. Fortunately for his peace of mind, people in the main are generous, and for every letter of criticism there is sure to be at least one expressive of appreciation of his efforts."

The Cost of Bad Roads

A survey by J. L. Tennant of Cornell University shows that the benefits accruing to the farmer from year round, surfaced, secondary roads are almost unlimited.

Mr. Tennant summarizes his findings with the statement that good roads add to the farmer's income by saving time, by reducing expenses, by improving marketing conditions—all resulting in a more profitable type of farming. On the other hand, poor roads often cause the farmer expense in actual cash. It costs him more to have his fuel and supplies delivered, to operate his motor vehicles, to go back and forth to town, to summon medical aid. The Iowa State College estimates that the average cost of operating automobiles on high type roads is 5.44 cents per mile; on medium type roads, 6.43 cents; and on low type roads, 7.50 cents. In other words, it costs the farmer two cents a mile more to ride on a poor road than a good one.

Still another benefit is in land values. Farmers living on dirt roads in New York, according to Mr. Tennant, estimate that their land would increase in value to the extent of $15.58 per acre if adjacent roads were surfaced.

Five or ten or twenty miles back from the splendid main highways that go from city to city, we cutsomarily find roads essentially the same as in the horse-and-wagon days. This barrier to agricultural progress must be removed if permanent farm prosperity is to be achieved.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

Much to my chagrin, this column for this week is going to be cut somewhat short, and I'll explain just the reason for its brevity.

The editor and the whole crew of the News is just head over heels in work in this booster edition that is coming out next week. I've fooled around down at the News office long enough for them to put me to work so that the edition will be a success, if you pardon my saying so. Tried to check up on some data about that edition next week and tell you about it now, but articles and photographs have been coming in so fast that I've just completely lost track of them all. I will estimate that there will be around a hundred photographs of people in these parts of the county, and judging from what has gone to press it is going to be something.

* * * *

I told you something about something locally that might happen and I would throw some light on it for you in a most truthful way, but fortunately, that will not be necessary, because it didn't happen, and I'm glad of it.

* * * *

Noticed a reservation for space in the special edition next week for a photograph of the Clanton Fire Department and the truck. Now, folks that is going to be fine for the boys, those fellows who jump up any time of the day or night and answer a call for help, and seldom ask any favors. They are a fine bunch of boys, and their meetings are important every Wednesday night. I found out that they have some very strict rules and regulations that they abide by at all times. Not bad at all, and may they keep the good work going. I'm with you, boys.

* * * *

Will have to ask you to stand by for some very prolonged station announcements, now, until next week. Have not been making my rounds as usual this week, and will see you in great style next week.

Today & Tomorrow

OPERA

Deems Taylor, American composer, has had another opera produced in New York. That doesn't mean much to most people. Grand opera is a form of musical entertainment which appeals to only a comparatively few people, with highly developed musical tastes. One reason is that the theme of grand opera is always tragic. Most of us prefer so-called "light" opera, which is tuneful and amusing.

To be accepted by any of the world's great opera houses, of which there are not more than a dozen, is however, a great triumph for any composer. For only musical compositions which are purely original in every phrase and bar can pass the rigid tests. Few composers of popular music are original. Nearly all of them rework old musical themes, most of them originally composed by the composer of grand opera.

It is said to cost Otto H. Kahn, patron of the Metropolitan Opera in New York a quarter of a million a year to make up the company's losses. When Mr. Kahn passes, unless some new "angel" with a taste for musical and a bottomless purse comes to the front, grand opera in New York will be a thing of the past. It will continue in Europe, where opera is supported by the taxpayers' money.

CHAPLIN

The funny little English Jew who has for years been the world's most popular entertainer has proved once more that, in the hands of really competent artists, pantomine is as effective as words. Charley Chaplin's new picture is a "silent" film, one of the kind that needs no translation to make it intelligible to everybody, whatever language they may speak. Long ago Chaplin began to discard "titles" from his pictures, relying on the action alone to tell the story. And he has a larger following and has made more money than any other figure in the pictures.

There was a time when it seemed as if the movies would make it necessary for actors to learn the art of expressing emotions by action, but the talkies have dispelled that hope. It is so much easier to do it with words, but also so much less effective. It takes a real artist to be a good pantominist, and except for Chaplin and W. C. Field I think of no first-rate pantominist playing either on the stage or in the pictures.

SILVER

Forty years ago the dominant political issue in the United States was whether we should put silver on an equality with gold as the basis of money, by coining silver without restriction at the ratio of sixteen ounces of silver to one ounce of gold. That would have given silver a stable price in the world's markets of $1.25 an ounce, or thereabout, gold being worth about $20 an ounce.

Only once has the price of silver reached the ratio of 16 to 1. That was in 1919-1920, when for two years the price ranged between $1.25 and $1.34 an ounce on the London market. Early in February this year silver was sold in London and New York for 26 1-2 cents an ounce! The principal reason for this is the establishment of the currency of India on a gold basis, in 1926, leaving in the hands of the Indian government some five hundred millions ounces of silver bullion to dispose of, of which only about a fifth has found a market.

There is not enough gold today to meet the world's needs as a basis of money. There was a long period, after the gold discoveries in the Rand and the Klondikes, when there was more gold than was needed. Probably the present situation will revive the movement for bimetallism. But in time we shall measure money values neither by silver nor gold, but by the average supply and demand of commodities and labor.

DEATH

The automobile death toll for 1930 has been compiled, and it is a terrifying record. 32,500 Americans were killed in motor accidents, an average of almost a hundred a day. Nearly a million others were injured, 962,325, to be exact. The total number of automobile accidents reported for the year was 835,250.

These figures mean only one thing—reckless driving. Not fast driving, necessarily, for one may drive reckless at 20 miles an hour. Turning a sharp corner at even that speed is reckless driving. Almost half of the deaths occurred when a car struck a pedestrian. Sometimes it was the pedestrian's fault, of course. A quarter of those killed were crossing streets in the middle of a block. Less than a quarter of the deaths occurred from collision with another car.

The pitiful thing about the figures for 1930 is that the number of children between five and ten who were killed in motor accidents was nearly doubled during the year.

Two things may help this useless slaughter. Every state should require a license after an examination, before anyone is permitted to drive a car. And every person convicted of reckless driving should have his or her license revoked, and in aggravated cases be sent to prison without the option of a fine.

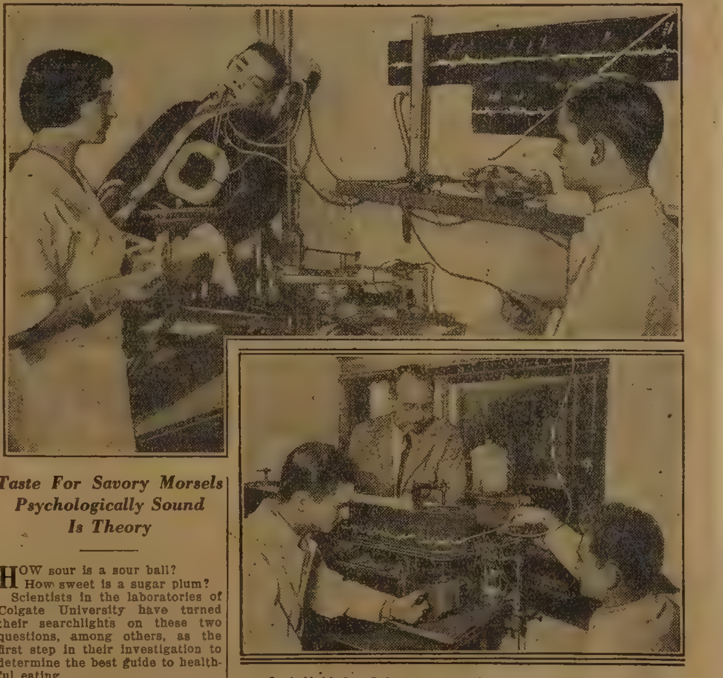
Should We Eat the Foods We Like? Colgate Scientists Probe For Answer



Oreb Hubbel, a Colgate student, is shown above having his "taste reactions" recorded. The tubes are attached to the Kymograph machine (below) which chalks up a "hunger record" and the extent to which a cream puff makes his mouth water. Dr. Laird is shown watching the results.

Taste For Savory Morsels Psychologically Sound Is Theory

HOW sour is a sour ball?
How sweet is a sugar plum?

Scientists in the laboratories of Colgate University have turned their searchlights on these two questions, among others, as the first step in their investigation to determine the best guide to healthful eating.

Working on the theory that foods which please the eye and palate are an aid to digestion, the laboratories, under the direction of Dr. Donald A. Laird, Director of the Department of Psychology, have already begun a check-up, using members of the student body as human guinea pigs.

As a basis for the investigation, Dr. Laird points out that food fads, which have flourished in recent years, have kept thousands of persons from eating foods they really liked and wanted.

"The tendency has been," according to Dr. Laird, "to consider human beings as machines, functioning on proteins, fats, carbohydrates and other chemical elements. Whether human likes and dislikes—the taste of foods rather than their chemical make-up—are not the best general guides to healthful eating, is one of the questions which we hope to answer through research."

"Sweetness, for instance," Dr. Laird continues, "is an almost universally liked flavor. Past research in our laboratories has shown that sweet foods are one of the best sources of quick energy. The research which lies before us may further prove the sound basis for a liking for sweets, by showing that sweetness is an excellent guide to the foods we need for general good health."

A unique scale, known as a "taste thermometer" has been constructed in the laboratory as one of the devices called into play to measure the degree to which the taste of foods affects the mood of the eater and the process of digestion. Through this instrument it is possible to set a standard for the intensity of taste of all sweet, sour, salt and bitter foods, and to answer the question as to just how sweet, sour, salt or bitter various foods in these groups are.

Other instruments carefully record the contractions of the stomach, showing how that important part of the body reacts to types of foods. From these records, Dr. Laird hopes to show the importance of a psychologically sound diet, emphasizing the need for consideration of taste, odor and appearance along with the chemical make-up of foods served on the family table.

RED CROSS FUND REACHES $7,887,476

Washington, D. C., Feb. 13.—Contributions to the ten million dollar drought relief fund totalled to date, $7,887,476, the Red Cross announced today.

Chapters which have reached their quotas are as follows: Charlestown, New Hampshire, Loudon County, Virginia, Roane County, Tennessee and Middletown, New York. The Chapter at Van Cortlandt, New York, with a quota of $2,000, has raised $5,100.

The Red Cross has bought 322,000 assortments of garden seeds, with an average of eighteen packets in each assortment, for distribution in fifteen of the drought affected states. Some of these seeds are already being planted in southern states. The seeds, estimated to supply a quarter acre garden plot, will go to Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana, Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, Georgia and Alabama.

In the assortments are the following: beans, beets, cabbage, carrots, corn, lettuce, kale, mustard, squash, tomatoes and turnips.

The sacrifice being made by the more than ten thousand men and women volunteers in Red Cross relief, who are carrying on this humanitarian task in twenty states, is illustrated in an account received here today of the work of H. B. Keith, 70-year-old farmer, who is an investigator for the Breathitt County Chapter, in the mountain districts of Kentucky.

"Mr. Keith, who lives at Spring Fork Creek, arose at 2 o'clock yesterday morning and rode horse back 26 miles over mountain trails to meet a Red Cross field representative from Washington," the report stated. "He placed the list of families, whom he had found to be in need in his community before the committee. His judgment on every case had more horse sense than any of us had ever seen in this work. After a three hour meeting he started out on the twenty-six mile return trip to let his families out there know that the Red Cross was going to continue to look after them.

"I call that good Red Cross volunteer spirit," the report concluded.

Sunday School Lesson

International Sunday School Lesson for February 22
JESUS BEARS GOOD TIDINGS
Luke 8:1-15
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Once more read the entire chapter to observe the context and get the related teachings. Now is the time when Jesus is in popular favor and crowds throng about Him as he comes into any community. At that time it is said there were over 200 cities and villages in Galilee and the population numbered two or three millions. The codition is decidedly different today, though the number will be largely increased soon if the Hebrews continue to return and reestablish themselves in their Promised Land.

At times the Twelve went with Jesus and on other occasions, they, and even the Seventy, were sent forth in independent itineraries. The plan from the coming of Jesus has been to send out individuals as personal messengers of the Gospel. Note that certain women are named. A group of women is mentioned which seems to have been a Committee on Ways and Means as they helped provide the cost involved as Jesus and His workers went about. Even the simplest ways of living costs something daily and these women made it possible for the men to render their extensive services.

Many parables are given at this time which tell about the Kingdom of Heaven that Jesus came to establish. A definition that is still good calls a parable a heavenly story with an earthly meaning. The Master Teacher took many of His illustrations from things in everyday life. This time He calls attention to the seed that is scattered by the farmer. It is the same kind of seed that falls on the four kinds of soil. The application indicates our reception of that always good seed, which is the Word of God.

V-C FERTILIZERS FILL EVERY ROW WITH PROFITS

The farmers who follow the best methods and push their yields to the highest point consistent with good practice, will be the gainers. It is the man who grows the average or less than average crop who loses.—Missouri College of Agriculture.

"Better" is the word

Better profits from better farming—who gets them? The better farmers! V-C fertilizers have the call with better farmers because V-C fertilizers are better fertilizers—the fertilizers that can be depended on when nothing must fail. Put your own reliance in V-C—"better" is the watchword now!

There is an old saying among farmers that the cheapest time to cultivate a crop is before it is planted.—Arkansas Experiment Station.

The good farmer is always a good credit risk.

The best scientific minds failed to foresee the progress which has been made in agricultural research.—U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

We find farmers on our poorest soils planning their crops without considering the matter of feeding the plants. These men arrange for the largest crop their resources will permit, and then get whatever fertilizer they can—often very little or none at all. This results in an immense acreage of non-fertilized, non-profitable crop, increasing the total and reducing price without adding to profit.—A. and M. College, Mississippi.

MAIN STREET Looks at BROADWAY

Calm As The Night Life—

Green grass will be growing on Broadway if the threat of the police department to toll the 1 a.m. curfew on all night clubs goes into effect.

That is the woeful prediction of the proprietors, who say that night life, flickering feebly enough as it is, will be completely extinguished. They say it will banish every night club from the street they made famous.

The threatened early closing is the result of the recent shooting in one of the clubs. Police believe that it was a flare-up of a gang feud, and hope to break up sinister trysts of members of the underworld by prohibiting operation in the wee, sma' hours.

Up In The Air—

The great concentration of activity in New York is graphically brought out when one compares this city with others. In Detroit, for example, factories cover acres and acres of ground.

Here they are built one on top of the other. Rent for ground floor space being prohibitively high, it is a common thing to see a factory employing hundreds of men operating on the 30th floor of a towering skyscraper. Whatever their salaries may be, employees cannot complain that they are not high up in the world.

Ups And Downs—

The latest design to save building space is the perfection of a type of dual elevator with two cars operating in the same shaft.

The upper car of the two is the express car. It starts from street level and runs without stops to the 11th floor serving all floors from that point to the top. It is automatically restricted from running downward while the lower car is running upward.

As soon as the express car is out of the way, the lower, or local car, which has been waiting at the basement level, rises to the street level and serves the 10 lower floors.

The operation of both cars is so timed that both reach their upper limits about the same time. The only great open spaces left on this crowded island are skyward, and already we have to double up to reach those. Yes, things are looking up, all right.

Wild West—

Eight real cowboys, two-fisted, hard-riding guys from the West, are appearing in a newly opened play.

The producers wanted them realistic, to they turned down professional actors and engaged these men who a short time ago appeared in a rodeo here. The cowboys were all set to head for the West, but the show offer was so lucrative that they decided to stay. Only they're afraid that the folks back home will hear about it.

One of them has traveled from Texas to Oklahoma in an oxcart. He has also ridden in an airplane. He still prefers the oxcart. Another can throw six head of cattle in 62 seconds and is an expert at "breaking" wild horses.

He says that New York is tougher than any wild horse.

Pleasure Palace—

S. L. Rothafel, "Roxy," who planned and built the Roxy theatre, described as the largest theatre since Rome fell, is retiring to take charge of a great amusement center to be known as "Rockefeller City." The millions of that family will play an important part in the financing of the project.

The amusement center will include the broadcasting stations of a large radio concern with offices in a 60-story skyscraper which will dominate the whole development. Laboratories and one of the theatres will be built with the idea of experimenting in television.

Although entirely unsolicited, we make the suggestion that the name be changed to "Roxyfeller City."

Rejected? Oh, well.

You Won't Be Missed—

There are a great many people in New York, and a great many of them die. But few leave this mortal sphere as "unmissed" as a retired assistant foreman of a municipally-owned company. So quiet was his passing that the city apparently failed to note it for seven years.

They've been sending him pension money regularly. The strange circumstance was revealed by a judge.

The city hopes to recover about half the money.

Fair And Warmer—

Various reasons have been given as to why New York no longer has its good, healthy snowstorms. One author, in a book about the city, claims that its many skyscrapers and feverish magistrates give off so much heat that a decent snowstorm, descending with the best of intentions, is melted as soon as it gets above the city, and arrives as rain.

Reunion—

A resourceful reporter with a bagful of gumdrops restored order in Harlem court when three dogs, all relatives, met for the first time in several months and proclaimed a family reunion in such volume that it sounded like a dog pound.

When they had sunk their canine teeth in the gumdrops they ceased their barking version of "The Gang's All Here."

The occasion was the decision of ownership of one of the dogs. His brothers were brought in to prove his pedigree. That's when the joyful greetings began.

FARM INVENTORY VALUABLE

An annual inventory of the farm is seen by Prof. B. F. Alvord, of the department of agricultural economics of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, as "one of the most valuable tasks a farmer can perform." It enables the farmer to know of his activities during the year, and it also gives him valuable information to be used in a business way, he said. Such an inventory should be made at the beginning of the year when farmers ordinarily have plenty of time for work of this kind.

"Such an inventory," he continued, "is just a classified list of the farm property with the estimated value of it. If taken every year it shows from one year to the next how much the farmer's net worth has increased or decreased.

"A farmer may feel that he has done well because he has money at the end of the year and he may feel that he has done poorly because he is short on money at the end of the year. A carefully taken inventory may show that he sold products during one year that were produced in another year. In this way the more successful year may have been the year in which money was scarce.

"An inventory statement showing the assets and liabilities is appreciated by bankers. A banker is in a better position to lend money if the inventory shows the farm has, for example, $200 worth of hogs nearly ready for sale, $200 worth of chickens that will be laying soon; $400 worth of cattle that are producing cream for sale; and $200 worth of cotton seed; and that the farm is worth $6,000 above any mortgages, than if he merely knows that the farm and livestock are worth $7,000. The inventory statement tends to show not only that the farmer can repay the loan, but it helps show when he can repay it."

Bilious, Dizzy, Drowsy Feeling

"WHEN I was a child, if I did not feel well, or if I had a cold, my mother gave me Black-Draught," says Mrs. Orpha Hill, of Wofford, Ky. "When I was married, it became a family medicine in my own home, as it was in my mother's.

"I take it for headache and especially for constipation. When I get bilious, my skin gets yellow and I have a very bad taste in my mouth, and a drowsy feeling all during the day. My eyes burn and I get dizzy, or my head is 'swimming.' When I take Black-Draught, it seems to drive the impurities out of my system and I feel fine. I am seldom without this reliable remedy."

Kudzu Is Good Hay And Grazing Crop

Kudzu for hay, for grazing, and for soil improvement is being recommended by the experiment station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn. The recommendation is based upon the fact that kudzu is more promising than any other perennial plant being grown in Alabama for hay and grazing. It withstands drouths exceptionally well.

To acquaint farmers with facts about kudzu the experiment station has published a new bulletin on it. The authors are R. Y. Bailey, assistant agronomist, and E. L. Mayton, assistant in agronomy. It contains a vast amount of general information about kudzu and also specific facts about research studies with it to date.

During a 6-year experiment at Auburn kudzu produced an average yield of more than two tons of hay per acre without fertilizer, Mr. Bailey and Mr. Mayton report. When used to enrich soil a crop of kudzu plowed under in 1919 increased the average yield of two crops of sorghum hay by 2,536 pounds per acre; 4 crops of corn by 19.3 bushels per acre; and 7 crops of oats by 7.9 bushels per acre.

The flavor of kudzu hay is relished by livestock. The nutritive value of it is high. It is relished as a grazing crop.

To get started with this crop Mr. Bailey and Mr. Mayton advise farmers to buy enough crowns to make a small planting from which crowns can be obtained for planting larger areas. This method requires more time but very little money is involved.

Contrary to a general opinion, they say that kudzu is not a pest. It may be eradicated by heavy grazing followed by plowing. At Auburn no trouble was encountered in preventing its spread to adjacent land over a period of 25 years.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you looked at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

My Best Girl

BY

KATHLEEN NORRIS

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter carrier, her mother a lazy woman who has "seen better days," and her sister a bootlegger's swwetheart who works in a beauty parlor, is stock girl in the "Mack" stores, the Five-and-Ten of San Francisco. A boy whom she knows only as "Joe Grant," but who is really Joseph Grant MacKenzie Merrill, son of the owner of the "Mack" is learning the business by starting at the bottom. He doesn't like the job until he meets Maggie. And neither of them realizes that they are falling in love with each other, at first. Joe is impressed, however, by Maggie's intelligence and goodheartedness, and gives her advice on the subject nearest her heart, how to live the ideal life. She makes a suggestion for a better way of selling certain lines. He tells his father, as if it were his own idea, greatly pleasing the old man. He finds that the girls he used to know don't interest him as much as Maggie does, and when Maggie discloses her love in a burst of jealousy, he realizes that he loves her, too.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Her face burned, her hands were icy, her confused mind was only a blur, and her heart one heavy, unendurable ache.

It had been pretty bold of her to question him, to rebuke him about Paula Younger. After all, it was Joe's affair.

Her thoughts burned, stung, writhed together. The one unbearable thought was that the half-past five o'clock whistle would sound, and Murphy begin to close the big jointed iron grills against the world, and that she would have to go home—what else could she do?—heartbroken and alone, and bear the week end with Joe "mad" at her.

He had already been elevated to the offices, which were placed in a position of some dignity and seclusion, on a mezzanine deck at the far rear of the store.

Sometimes, when a customer brought in a defective article, Maggie had to guide her upstairs to the window marked "Complaints," and once or twice other errands had taken her to the offices. But she had no excuse today.

She turned the knob of the glass door rather timidly, and saw Joe standing at the window in the back of the room with Simmonds, a buyer, both intent upon the inspection of some sort of material.

"What is it?" Simmonds asked sharply.

"Excuse me," Maggie faltered, "but is Miss Pope up here?"

Simmonds came toward her. And Joe—as she saw with a sinking heart—casually turned away and began to study a bloated, bursting book of "swatches."

"Was Miss Pope up here?" Simmonds asked.

"Miss Pope," Joe said, in a quiet voice, "is downstairs in the music department."

Maggie's face was very red, she looked only at the older man.

"I didn't see her there," she said thickly.

And somehow she got herself out of the glass door again, and somehow flew down the stairs, and was feverishly busy instantly with a large cardboard box of lockets and chains, in the jewellery department.

And all the while her heart pounded as if it would hammer her to pieces, and her shamed thoughts almost suffocated her.

"He knew I went up there to talk to him—what'll he think I am! He didn't want to speak to me at all—and I bluffed that Miss Pope was up there—he seen right through me! He saw right through me. Oh, I wish I was dead! I can't have him thinking like that about me! I wish I was dead. What'll I do? I can't ever look him in the face again."

She was standing at an angle of the jewellery counter that was placed in a sort of niche between columns.

Suddenly she knew that a tall, lean man was lounging on the counter beside her, his shoulder almost touching her own.

"Still mad it me?" It was Joe's voice.

"Joe——" Her voice wouldn't come.

"Joe, don't be mean to me," she said in a low tone, holding her words steady, not raising her eyes.

"Was I mean to you, Maggie?"

"Of course—of course you're not, Joe! It's just that I'm—I'm an idiot! It's none of my business who you lunch with—and I'm sorry I—blew up."

"It is your business, if you care, Maggie," he said, nicely, kindly, even a little gruffly.

"But I am going not to care."

Joe experienced a queer little twinge of pain. She looked so small, so weary, so exquisitely pretty in this soft light, and she was such a loving little thing!

"I'm glad we're friends again," she said awkwardly.

"Yes, I am too."

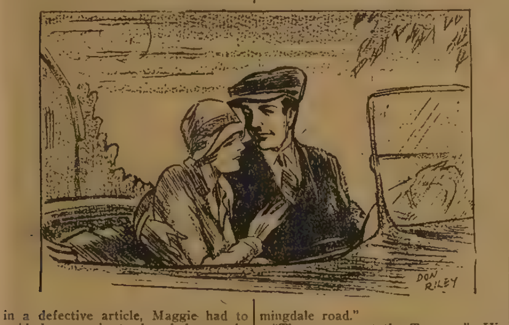
"I couldn't of stood it," she confessed.

The other employees of the Mack were streaming through the side door when Maggie came flying up from the locker room. Joe was lingering at the top of the stairs.

"I thought I'd walk with you to the corner."

"Oh, that's grand! Which way do you go, Joe?"

"Down past the city—out on the Elmingdale road."



"Then you want the Ten car." His arm was under her elbow, and she gave him once more the delicious sensation of nearness, confidence, and sweet smallness and youth.

He had never seen her so deliciously pretty, so small and loving and enchanting. She could hardly keep her little feet on the ground. Tired? Depressed? Hungry? Not when Joe Grant tall and lean and protective and most appreciative, was beside her, was guiding her along the lighted street.

Her walk was a combination of jump, bounce, and dance step. Joe had to laugh sympathetically at the laughing face, the eager eyes that demanded his sympathy.

"This is my corner, Joe."

His steps had been quite automatically turned toward that particular quiet block where he had parked his roadster. They were close to the handsome, low-slung car now.

"You'd wonder he'd have any business in this neighborhood," the girl innocently commented.

"How far away do you live, Maggie?"

"Oh, not so far. Pop and I walk it every morning. 'Bout—I think it's thirteen blocks.

Joe had palmed his key.

"Want me to run you home in this car?"

"I get so sick of my automobile, it's a treat to me to walk!" Maggie assured him. She was horrified when he slipped into the machine, and challenged her cheerfully.

"Joe Grant, get out of that car! Do you want to be sent to jail?"

"Oh, come on, get in, Maggie—don't be so scary."

"But, Joe, isn't it locked?"

"Nope. Key right here! Get in, Maggie, and—listen! I'll bring it back to the other end of the block and let him hunt for it awhile, to teach him a lesson about forgetting to lock it!"

"Joe, you could be sent to jail for that!"

"Oh, come on—it won't take five minutes!"

In the end, she yielded.

"Maggie, how'd you like to own a car like this, and have a big, fluffy white fur coat, and be riding along here this way—down to Elmingdale, or the Westbeach Arms, or one of those fashionable places?"

"Joe, b'leeve me, I've seen girls do both ways, and there's nothing in letting fellers buy you coats and take you out riding. You don't mind being poor, do you, Joe?" she asked anxiously.

"Don't you?"

"I? Why, but what else would I be?" she demanded blankly.

"Don't you ever think of yourself as rich, with beautiful clothes, and a maid, and a big, comfortable room?" He glanced sideways.

"I think of myself as straight," she said briefly.

"Anyway, we're pretty near living the ideel life now, and my father says that all day long he thinks about—our house, and how nice and shady and quiet the kitchen is, and all the new dish towels——"

"We're getting out of debt, and even Liz said it was some comfort to come home to our house now—and she s-s-said—Liz said that s-s-she——"

"Maggie! For heaven's sake! What are you crying about?"

"Be-because—because they said I did it, Joe! Even Ma said that I made them all comfortable—and happier—and it—it makes me cry to have them love me so!"

He abruptly ran the car into the curb, and stopped it there, and put his arms about her, and tipped up her face.

"Now, look here, stop it. Stop this bawling right away, or you'll have me crying, too."

His big arm held her tightly, jammed against him, and her bewildered ecstatic, tear-stained little rosy face was close to his own.

"J-J-Joe Grant!" she said breathlessly.

"Maggie Johnson! You've known this was coming, haven't you?"

"J-Joe Grant!"

"Surprised?"

"No—but—but — I guess — maybe I thought——"

"Go on. Don't stop. Maybe you thought what?"

"I thought you were kinder—kidding me along."

It was at this juncture that for a terrible moment Joe Grant disappeared from his own consciousness for a few seconds, and the Joseph Merrill who was a truant from college, who belonged to the same world at this smart roadster, took his place.

To play a part was all very well insomuch as it concerned only himself. But here was this bewildering little madcap armful of passionately earnest femininity in his arms, her tear-soaked lashes almost touching his cheek, her whole being only too obviously ready to yield itself to his guardianship forever.

How on earth was he going to get out of this with Maggie Johnson?

When he spoke, his tone and manner had subtly altered.

"Why shouldn't I kid you along?" he said. "You're too much of a kid. yourself to get mixed up in love affairs!"

She drew herself up, fumbled in her bag for a handkerchief, wiped her eyes quite openly, and said, in a composed, cold voice:

"You must drive me home, Joe. My father and mother will be wild if I'm late."

"Maggie—listen. Don't take that tone! You know how much I like you—I've got to stop this, I've got to stop this, I'm a fool if I don't stop this," he added, in his heart. "Why, you're not eighteen—you're a little girl!"

"I'm eighteen tomorrow, and I'm not a little girl at all," she said, with swift dignity.

"Eighteen! Wh— what would your father think if you married at eighteen, Joe protested. "Damn it—and damn me for a fool!" he ejaculated. "Now I've said it! This is the first time that word has come into our conversations, and I'm the one that introduced it."

Maggie cleared her throat.

"I've had a great deal of responsibility in my life, and there's nothing so developing to the character as responsibility" she began. "Since I was ten years old, I've been tryin' to earn a little and spend a little less, to bear wrongs patiently. Pop says he's always been anxious to live the ide-al life, too but he never thought it could be done on a postman's salary."

"Listen, Maggie. Listen, darling—"

"Since Christmas," she went on, "it's been you, Joe. Everything I done—everything I've done," she corrected it, "has been done because I was thinkin' of you."

He caught her small agitated hands and held them tightly.

"Maggie, just be quiet, dear. There's no need for you to get so excited and upset. Listen, dear. I like you immensely. I think you have more character than any girl I ever knew. I wouldn't give up your friendship for anything in the world. But you're only a little girl, Maggie you're going to have a dozen beaus before you pick out the man you want to marry." He winced interiorly. "I hope our friendship—"

"I know, Joe. I know. That's you. That's your side of it. But I was talking about me."

She caught at his lapel with a small bare hand, and raised her beautiful wistful, childish eyes.

He laughed suddenly, boyishly.

"Ah, Maggie! You little idiot!"

And this kiss was a different kiss. The little figure rested against his breast, the little hand was crushed against his heart, and the fragrant soul of her seemed to be drawn through her fresh, half-opened lips.

Then they talked, Maggie's hand locked in his, her head resting luxuriously against his shoulder.

"I'm getting thirt-five a week Mary Margaret. And I'm not going to have my wife work!"

"Oh, Joe—I'll die—to hear you say 'my wife!' "

"That's about one forty a month."

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by [illegible] bowel movement. Do not [illegible] but go to the nearest druggist [illegible] one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB. Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

now averages about $5,000,000 per year. Moreover, other competing railroads that did not receive land-grants were, and are likewise subjected to these reduced rates, which serves to increase further the Government saving.

"It is seen, therefore, that the value of the land is repaid to the Government, at the least, every twenty-five years.

"Not only has the Government already been handsomely repaid—more than once—for every acre of land turned over to the land-grant lines, but payment, under the law, will continue indefinitely.

Boy Scout Activities of Clanton

Dan Smith, Troop Reporter

In my report last week I told you that our troop would go on a hike on Wednesday, February 11, but it was planned for Friday, instead of Wednesday, and after all we didn't get to go because it rained. Friday night, Feb. 13, we had a troop meeting. We also found that Friday, 13th, was unlucky. A Ford coupe, 1931 model, belonging to Grady and Morgan Reynolds was stolen from in front of the church. After the excitement was over sandwiches were served and much to our sorrow we had no drinks because they were in the car. Bad luck I call it. After eating the sandwiches, games were played between the two patrols, each patrol winning a game. The first game was the familiar Crane and Crow, which the Kangaroo patrol won. The Scoutmaster played on their side, because it would be uneven if he didn't. We had agreed that the losing patrol would have to run through the gauntlet. After each member of the Wolf Patrol, the losing patrol, had gone through the gauntlet, we played, "Capture the Flag." In playing this game the lights are cut off and this makes it an exciting game. The Wolf patrol won this, and Hal Broadhead, one of its members, was the star player, because he got the Kangaroo's flag. As soon as each member of the Kangaroo patrol had run through the gauntlet we were dsmissed by repeating the Scout oath.

Alabama's Rat Tax Is $3,000,000 A Year

Under the direction of W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist of Auburn, and Roy Moore, special representative in rodent control work for the U. S. Department of Agriculture, systematic work is being done toward the eradication of rats and other rodents in Alabama. This is being done because rats are destroying annually three million dollars worth of property in Alabama, Mr. Ruffin and Mr. Moore said.

Systematic poisoning campaigns accompanied by the cleaning up of premises for immediate relief and the gradual rat-proofing of farms and cities for permanent riddance of rats is the program outlined. Towns and communities are putting on rat poisoning campaigns this winter to protect feed and food. Powdered red squill is the poison used. It is effective and practically harmless to all other animals. The campaigns are inexpensive, as the cost is only about $25 to $35 per thousand population, or about 10 cents for each house treated. The cost for farms averages 50 cents.

Already several Alabama towns have conducted such campaigns with highly satisfactory results. A farmer can eradicate rats from his premises and effect a big saving. However, rats will come in from other farms and replace those that he destroys. Consequently it is better for the farmers of an entire community to eradicate at the same time.

As a guide to farmers in rat control work the U. S. Department of Agriculture has published a bulletin, available to those requesting it.

Oats For Feed Are Advised By Auburn

Every Alabama farmer who wishes to make a good crop of feed at a low cost and have it ready late in the spring can do so by planting oats immediately. Such is recommended by the county agents and also by the experiment station and the extension service of the Alabam Polytechnic Institute at Auburn.

Varieties recommended by the experiment station for spring planting are red rustproof, Fulghum, and Burt. Seeds should be planted at the rate of two bushels per acre, J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, said.

They should be fertilized with 100 to 200 pounds per acre of either nitrate of soda or nitrate of lime applied as a top dressing when the oats have started growing and the danger of severe freezing has passed.

Lowery pointed out that Alabama farmers have been producing only 40 per cent of the oats and corn needed in the state, and only about 30 per cent of the hay needed. Consequently there is need for a larger acreage of oats under normal conditions and especially under exceptional conditions such as at present when the feed shortage is greater than usual and the supply of money and credit for buying is very limited. Oats are an excellent feed for poultry and other animals as well as horses and mules.

This recommendation by the county agents, and from Auburn, is made despite the fact that oats planted in the fall on the experiment station at Auburn have yielded twice as much as oats planted in the spring.

OTIS L. DAVIS OF ATTALLA DIED FEBRUARY THE 10TH

The many friends of Otis Davis will be grieved to learn of his death which occurred on Tuesday morning February 10th, in Attalla. He became ill last June and every possible means was used to restore him to his health, but God in His wisdom knew best and called him away to rest beyond the sufferings and sorrows of this life. Chilton County's Educational System Ranks High In Alabama

GREAT IMPROVEMENT SHOWN IN SCHOOLS OF CHILTON COUNTY

County Ranks High In Quality of Teachers; Have Four Accredited High Schools; Enrollment of 6,177 With Splendid Equipment

The educational system of Chilton County has undergone many changes during recent years. Not many years ago it was almost an insult to any community to speak of consolidation to them, but at the present time the County Board is holding in check some efforts at consolidation because of a lack of adequate buildings. These buildings are being rapidly erected and equipped and no doubt the time is near when we will have very few, if any, one and two-teacher schools. A very strong demand is being made by the citizenship of the county for a consolidated school system because they have begun to realize its value.

One can realize the growth and interest of the training of children by a comparison of enrollment and attendance. In 1924-1925 we had enrolled in the white schools of the county 4,893 as against the enrollment of 1929-1930 of 6,177. There was an average daily attendance in 1929-30 of 4,13[illegible]. The present year shows evidence of going beyond any record previously established in the matter of enrollment and attendance.

In 1921 there was but one accreditted high school in the county. At the present we have four which are the County High School, located at Clanton, the Jemison High School, located at Jemison, Verbena High School, located at Verbena, and the Isabella High School, about seven miles east of Maplesville.

The Jemison High School and Isabella High School have vocational departments of the Smith-Hughes type. In these schools both vocational home economics and vocational agriculture are taught.

The County High School has more than doubled in enrollment for the past few years. This school is accredited in the Southern Association of High Schools.

The Verbena High School is housed in the most splendid building of the county. It is built of native gray stone quarried near Verbena.

In 1924-25 we had 66 schools in the county. At the present we have 59. Five schools have been consolidated within the past two years.

The county has the distinction of having one of the best County Training schools in the state with a principal rated as one of the best, and according to authorities who are acquainted with the County Training schools of the state, in all probability the best. This Training School is also a vocational school offering courses in both home economics and vocational agriculture.

A complete educational survey has been made of the county by experts in this field. This survey shows the location of all elementary, junior and senior high school children with recommendations as to the future building program and proper routing of trucks to the various consolidated schools.

The Chilton County Board of Education is composed of some of the best men in the county. They do not only have the interest of the schools at heart, but they are men of business ability. The Board is composed of the following men: Mr. C. C. Conway of Jemison is chairman of the Board. He is a business man who has succeeded in life for himself. He is a hardware dealer at Jemison. Mr. S. J. M. Webb is Vice Chairman of the Board. He is a farmer living in the Isabella community and we know that one could hardly live there without catching a progressive spirit. He is capable and interested in the welfare of the children of the county. Mr. J. N. Dennis is known to almost every citizen of the county. At one time he served the county as Tax Assessor. Since that time he has in one way or another been connected with the progressive element of the county and led in all of the progressive farm movements. He sells fertilizer to the farmers and gins their cotton. He is a large land owner. Mr. S. M. Yates is a farmer living at Cooper. No one who knows him would ever question his ability and interest in his work and the schools of the county. He is a man who has taken a leading part in his community life. Mr. W. I. Sanders is the youngest member of the Board having served only a few months but having had several years of experience as a trustee of his school and having already shown his interest in the children of the county as well as those of his own immediate community.

Mrs. Jewel Smith of Thorsby is Office Assistant having served in this capacity for the past few years. Miss Madge Scarborough of Blue Springs is Elementary Supervisor. Mrs. C. E. Stapp is Child Welfare Superintendent. No Superintendent can boast of a more efficient and loyal group of workers than the Superintendent of Chilton County. This corps of workers are deeply interested in giving to the county the best service possible, always showing a professional attitude in their work.

Miss Cora Belle Maddox is president of the County P.-T. A. She is vocational home economics teacher in the Isabella school. She is fortunate in that the president of the District P. T. A. is a resident of this county. The District president is Mrs. L. C. Warr who was formerly critic teacher in the State Teachers College at Troy.

The Chilton County Board of Education has the advantage of a number of other counties in their future program. The Board is practically out of debt. When this year has closed the Board wil owe about $4,000, but at the present they do not owe anything.

A study of the records of those who teach in the schools of the county show that the county ranks high in the quality of their teachers. Only three have had no professional training. It is hoped that next year all will have had such training. Ten have had less than one year of professional training and 51 have had one year of professional training; 34 have had two years of Normal school training, while 6 are college graduates; 7 of these teachers are teaching for the first year; 40 teachers attended summer school last summer.

The High School group of teachers include Junior and Senior high schools. Eleven of these are under-graduates, 16 are graduates of colleges, 11 are more than college graduates and 21 attended summer school last summer. Three hold Masters' degrees. One of these holds a Masters' degree from the University of Alabama, a second one from Peabody and a third one from Columbia University.

The County has in Mr. B. Lawrence, County Superintendent of Schools, a man thoroughly qualified for this office. Mr Lawrence has worked for the advancement of school work in Chilton County as few realize. Under his supervision the County School system has shown a steady improvement

J. A. Livingston, Publisher of The Russellville (Ark.) Courier-Democrat, says:

"All manner of business these days is conducted largely upon confidence. Confidence is the basis of credit, and few businesses are operated on a strictly cash basis both in the purchase and the sales ends. When confidence is shaken, credit tightens up, and business of all kinds and individuals in all walks suffer.

"No bank, perhaps, no matter if absolutely solvent by the strictest application of regulations and methods e[illegible] capital, would be able to pay off in a single day all its depositors. Banks could not make money if operated on a plan that would make this possible. It would require cash on hand equal to its total deposits at all times, and none of the deposits could be invested in bonds, stocks, real estate or other securities, but would have to be kept as a cash surplus. It could not make loans greater than its capital stock, no matter how gilt-edge the security, and its interest rates would of necessity be so high that none would borrow.

"The average well-managed, thoroughly sound and solvent bank is about like an individual with a steady, dependable income from wages or otherwise. Perhaps he owns his home, built in a building and loan association and on which only a few more payments are due, and an automobile or furniture or radio bought on the installment plan, on which he is meeting the payments regularly. He is absolutely solvent and under any ordinary circumstances would meet his every obligation. But suppose all his creditors should without warning suddenly demand immediate settlement in full. He could not meet the demand, of course, and would go 'broke.' No matter if his property and other assets were worth five thousand dollars and he owed less than five hundred, he could not settle because of the unexpected and unusual demand. And such a man would be in just the position of a bank that is called upon to withstand a 'run' by depositors.

"If you are a loyal citizen of the community and your money is in the bank, leave it there; if it is not, put it there. If you hoard it at home, you merely aggravate and help to bring about the very situation that has caused your fear."

Burning New Ground May Damage The Soil

Fire drives nitrogen out of the soil, says Colonel Page S. B[illegible], [illegible] Forester. This chemical element [illegible] that plant life can not possibly [illegible] without, and it happens to be the only one of the principal [illegible] required by plants that fire completely destroys. Most of the others are found in the ashes of the burned vegetable material, but the nitrogen leaves with the smoke.

Thousands of farmers will be preparing new ground for cultivation during February and March. Burning is a convenient way to get rid of down timber, stumps and woo debris. However, it is much better to pile this material compactly before burning than to set fire to the entire tract. In the former way most of the ground can be spared from the heat of the fire and the nitrogen will thus remain in the soil.

Naturally, fires used in clearing new ground should not be allowed to spread to other areas, especially the higher ground about the fields. Nitrogen and other elements of fertility do not remain entirely where they first become a part of the soil. The subsurface water drainage dissolves much of these materials and carries them to the lower ground where they add to the richness of the cultivated areas. If the uplands are burned off the lowlands lose a great deal of the fertility which they otherwise would acquire in this manner.

Farm Electric Service Having Major Effect On Agriculture Power Co. Engineers Say

Electricity Increasing Alabama Farm Income And More Than Paying Its Own Way, Agricultural Engineers Show In Survey

WITH ELECTRIC service from the rural power lines of Alabama Power Company immediately available to over 30,000 farms, or more than one-tenth of the farms in Alabama, the use of electricity on farms is now beginning to have a major effect upon Alabama agriculture, a recent survey of the Power Company's Rural Division reveals.

In Chilton County, the Company is operating 63 miles of rural lines serving 270 rural customers. Along the Montgomery Highway, the Company's lines extend from Clanton to Jemison, and from Clanton across the Autauga County line to Marbury. A line extends along the highway from Clanton to Maplesville, with a branch line to Isabella, and from Maplesville across the Dallas County line to Plantersville. In addition to these longer lines serving customers along the highways, there are several shorter ones extending from the towns of the county and from the Company's dams on the Coosa River.

Started in 1924 as an experiment in cooperation with the Alabama Experiment Station and Alabama Polytechnic Institute, the extension of electric service to rural communities has been continued as a part of Alabama Power Company's development program and is now one of its major activities.

GROWTH IS RAPID

The growth of rural electrification in Alabama has been little short of phenomenal, but its growth and present major effect upon agriculture in Alabama would not have been possible without the cooperation with the Power Company of farmers, agricultural workers and equipment dealers throughout the State.

On January 1st, 1924, the Power Company had in operation 14 rural lines serving 240 rural customers; and on January 1, 1931, the status of rural electric development was as follows:

	No. Lines	Miles of Lines	No. of Customers
Rural Lines in Operation Jan. 1, 1931	501	1,702	6,565
Rural Lines Auth. & Under Const. Jan. 1, 1931	6	21	71
Rural Lines Trans. To Urban Classification	50	213	3,353
Total	557	1,936	9,989

Rural customers have been added during the seven year period at the average rate of 1,427 per year, or 119 per month, and rural lines were built at the average rate of 276 miles per year, or 24 miles per month.

100,000 PEOPLE SERVED

In addition to the 9,900 rural and farm customers served from the 1,900 miles of electric lines built along highways and roads of the State, the Power Company is serving approximately 13,500 customers in 143 small towns of less than 1,000 population each. These towns are farming community centers, and the citizens are either farmers or supply merchants for the neighboring farms. Service to most of these towns has been provided in connection with the Company's rural electrification program, and are sources of power for future expansion of electric service to rural customers.

The Power Company is therefore serving approximately 23,000 customers from rural lines and in small towns, which means the convenience of electric service for approximately 100,000 people as a result of the rural electric development. In addition, the Company's transmission and distribution system is so developed that practically every farm is within reach of electric service from a physical standpoint of providing service from existing distribution lines.

KEROSENE LAMPS REPLACED

Prior to the extension of the Company's lines, these people were using kerosene lamps for lighting (except the few that had individual lighting plants), practically none of them had the convenience of running water in their homes, and only a few that purchased ice had any form of refrigeration to preserve the milk, butter, and other perishable products.

On January 1, 1931, 10,354 farms were served, each farm meter being designated by the Company as a customer. According to a survey made by the Company, there is an average of two tenants or share croppers per farm customer that are counted as separate farms by the Census Bureau. Many of the houses occupied by the tenants are being served through the farm meter and in practically every instance the barns used by the entire farm are lighted. On this basis electric service is available to about 30,000 farms in the territory served by the Company.

Of its 9,900 customers along highways, all of whom are using electric lights, about 1,000 are using electric ranges, 1,400 electric water pumps, 300 electric churns, and 200 electric washing machines.

BIG SAVINGS IN TIME

The 1,000 users are enabled to reduce the time required to do the cooking and care of the kitchen by about 250 hours per range, or a total reduction of about 250,000 hours of drudgery per year in the 1,000 rural homes.

Those using electricity to supply running water to the home automatically, are making the home much more comfortable, and eliminating about 45 minutes of work per day formerly required to draw a limited amount of water and carry it into the home for drinking, cooking and washing purposes. The 1,400 electric pumps result in a reduction of labor amounting to a total of about 382,000 hours per year.

The 300 electric churns result in a reduction of drudgery amounting to a total of about 54,000 hours per year, or an average of about 30 minutes per day.

The 200 washing machines eliminate about 10,000 hours of back-breaking work, or an average of one hour each per week.

WOMEN ARE BENEFITED

The elimination of washing lamp chimneys, filling lamps, and trimming wicks results in a reduction of labor in the homes of about 600,000 hours per year.

In addition to these applications of electricity that are saving the women in these homes approximately one and one-quarter million hours of drudgery per year, there are many other labor-saving appliances, as irons, fans, percolators, sewing machines, and others that are being used to increase the conveniences and comforts of the rural home.

Of these 9,900 customers, about 1,300 have radios, which add greatly to the pleasures of the family and serve a valuable purpose in bringing the farm people in close contact with the other industries of the country and world.

Approximately 1,000 of these rural customers are using automatic [illegible] add to the convenience of the home; result in better preserved food products for the family table; reduce the cost of living by making possible a greater consumption of home grown products, as milk, butter, fruits and vegetables; and in many instances increasing the farm income, by making more practical the preservation and sale of perishable products that ordinarily go to waste on the farm.

FARM PLACE TO LIVE

Electric service is thus bringing the comforts and conveniences of city life to the farm and making it the best place in the world to live. And even more significant, as a source of light, heat, and power, it is also being used on the farm and by the rural dweller in many different ways to increase the farm income by an amount more than sufficient to pay its own way.

In 64 of the 67 counties of the state, the Power Company is serving all different sized farms, from the rural home with a few chickens, a garden, and cow, to the larger plantation. Too, all the different types of farms are being served, including the general farm, the dairyman, poultry man, truck grower, nurseryman, etc. The experiences of the farmers of the state with the uses of electricity are that, regardless of the size or the type of the farm, electricity can and is being used in such ways that the farmer and his family are enjoying the comforts and conveniences, and are increasing the net income more than the cost of the service. In other words, electricity has demonstrated that it can more than "pay its own way" on the farm.

The dairy farm is in position to realize the greatest profit from the use of electric service, due to the fact that milking, washing the utensils, and cooling the milk are done twice each day throughout the year. Electricity is well adapted to these operations, in addition to lighting, pumping water, and grinding feed.

The poultry farm uses electricity for incubation, brooding, feed-grinding, pumping water, lights for increased production of eggs, and refrigeration. The truck farm is profitably using electric power for irrigation, electric heat for hotbeds, and electric lights for controlling insect damage.

CAN INCREASE NET INCOME

However, the majority of farms in Alabama are general farms producing cotton as the major money crop, with other products in varying quantities. In view of this fact, we are discussing primarily ways that general farms of the state are using electricity to increase their net incomes.

On the majority of the general farms there are some chickens, usually as many as 50 hens and often more. We have observed and farmers of the state are continuously experiencing that electric lights to lengthen the short days of winter very materially increase the production of eggs at the time that eggs are scarce and the price is highest. One of the meetings we are conducting was held at a poultry farm in Mobile County. At this farm there were two poultry houses of hens of the same age and breed, one was lighted and the other was not. The lights were turned on at the lighted house each morning for about two hours before daylight, and a grain ration was fed to the chickens. From the lighted house there was being obtained five dozen more eggs per day than from the unlighted house. The eggs were being sold at forty cents per dozen. The additional feed cost for the hens in the lighted house was about fifty cents per day and the electricity used amounted to about $1.45 per day, or $43.50 per month.

MORE LIGHT, MORE EGGS

Electric lights should not be expected to increase the egg production unless additional feed is provided and [illegible] lights should not be used on breeding flocks unl[illegible] a rest period.

Regardless of the number of chickens at the farm with 75 hens electric lights and additional feed du[illegible] electric lights can be [illegible] months from October until April will more than pay the average rural customers' annual electric bill.

A number of farm women being served by the Company have installed small electric brooders and buy about 100 chicks early in the year—usually in January or February—and get these chicks to the market as broilers or fryers at the most favorable prices.

Some farms are using refrigeration in marketing dressed chickens to the curb markets, thereby getting an increased price for the chickens.

On most farms there is, at least at some times of the year, a surplus of milk and butter, which goes to waste. A number of farm women with electric service are using household refrigerators for their own food products, and in addition are storing the surplus butter for the market. One pound of butter per day at thirty cents per pound amounts to $9.00 per month, or more than $100.00 per year; a sufficient amount to pay the average rural customer's bill for lighting, water pumping, and refrigeration, and leave about $35.00.

FRESH MEAT YEAR 'ROUND

Other farmers are using refrigerators at their farms for the storage of meats, for their own tables and for tenants on the farm, and in some instances for the market—thereby reducing the living costs and increasing the farm income.

It has been definitely learned that electric light hung over a pan of water and oil will catch the moth that produces the tomato fruit worm, which usually takes about 35% of the tomatoes produced. Some truck growers of the state are realizing great values from this application of electricity. And even if the farmer has only a row of tomatoes in his garden, he can use a light each night during the growing season and increase the value of his electric service without practically any increase in the cost of electricity.

We are attempting to call to the farmers' attention the simple and not expensive uses of electric service that other farmers of the state are using to enable them to enjoy the conveniences of electric lights and other household equipment, and at the same time make the electricity more than pay its own way.

USES ARE INCREASING

The increased uses of electricity are well illustrated in the fact that in 1924 the rural customers on the Company's system used an average of 383 kilowatt-hours per year and at the end of 1929 rural customers were using an average of 840 kilowatt-hours per year. This increase was obtained even with the addition of an average of 126 new customers per month. At the end of 1929 rural customers that had been using electricity five years or more were using electricity at the rate of 993 kilowatt-hours per year.

In addition to the uses of electricity by farm and residential customers on rural lines during the 1930 ginning season, there were 70 gins on the Company's rural lines operated with electric power. The operation of these gins, as well as grist mills, small ice plants and other rural community enterprises, were a great convenience to the people and a source of revenue to the communities.

As the Company's rural lines are expanded, the number of customers per mile of line is decreasing. However, [illegible] number of practical and satisfac- [illegible] 1, 1930 to a yearly consumption of 5,775 kilowatt-hours per mile.

RURAL MEETINGS HELD

In an effort to call to the people's attention some of the ways that farmers throughout Alabama are using electricity to make it pay its own way, the Company has conducted a series of meetings in rural communities throughout the State to which electric service has been extended. It has not been the purpose of these meetings to attempt to sell electrical equipment, but it is entirely an effort to assist the existing customers in obtaining increased value from their electric service.

Fifty-five of these meetings have been held in different communities, with a total attendance of about 6,100 people. The meetings have consisted of a brief discussion by employees of the Company as to how farmers of the State are profitably using electric service, followed by a three-reel moving picture that illustrates some of the uses of electricity on the farm.

CHILTON HEARS MESSAGE

Five of these meetings were held in Chilton County, at Jemison, Thorsby, Verbena, Isabella and Maplesville, with an attendance of about 660 people.

The Company employs Agricultural Engineers who have had experience at farming and training in agriculture followed by several years' experience and studies of the uses of electricity on the farms of Alabama. These men devote their entire efforts to assisting rural customers with their problems pertaining to the uses of electric service, and in assisting other farms in their effort to get electric service. Their services are available to farm users of electricity at all times, without any obligation of the farmers to the Company. All that is necessary to have one of these men come to your home and make a study of your problems, with reference to making electric service more valuable to you, is to advise the Company's office nearest to you.

Clanton Concern One Of The Best In Section Since Organization In 1923

Traveling step by step with Clanton and Chilton County's procession along a course that has led this city and county to their present high stage of business and industrial development, and still going hand in hand with Clanton and Chilton County, on the climb to a future of even greater renown and success is the Farmers' Hardware Co. of Clanton.

This concern is today one of the oldest and largest concerns of its kind in Clanton and carries a stock of goods which compares favorably with that of hardware stores in much larger cities. Not only does the store carry everything that could be desired and that is usually found in a hardware store, but it also carries a line of staple furniture, radios, rugs, floor coverings, building material, farm implements, plumbing and pipe fitting, fencing and electrical supplies.

The firm serves as local dealer for Majestic radios, Simmons beds and mattresses and springs, Washington stoves and ranges, and Winchester guns, ammunition and tools. Occupying a two-story building on the corner of 2nd Avenue and 7th Street, this firm has 8090 square feet of floor space, where the goods are displayed. The first floor is devoted to shelf hardware and supplies, while the second floor is used to display furniture. A warehouse 50 x 80 feet is maintained where farm implements, and other surplus stocks are carried.

In March, 1923, E. M. Jones, who is senior partner, J. R. Jones and Lester Jones, purchased the stock of Downs Hardware Co. E. M. Jones was born in Coosa County, Alabama, July 1, 1881. He was reared on the farm and received [illegible] education in the schools of that county. CLANTON'S VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPT.

FIRE FIGHTERS OF CLANTON HAD RATHER BATTLE FLAME THAN EAT

First Fire Fighting Force Organized In 1929 With M. F. Jones Chief; Thoroughly Equipped with Modern Machinery

On November 5th, 1929, the first fire department of Clanton was organized by the Mayor and Board of Aldermen. Macey F. Jones was chosen as Captain and the department contained the following members: Milton Smith, Earl Gore, Elwin (Doodle) Gore, Albert Davis, Ress Driver, Eddie Wyatt, Webb Parrish, W. H. L. Smith, Calvin Lenoir, Norman Roberts, Marcus Polk, Wagoner and Durwood Teel. The present members of the department consists of: Milton Smith, Earl Gore, Elwin (Doodle) Gore, Albert Davis, Ress Driver, Eddie Wyatt, Webb Parrish, Norman Roberts, Wagoner, Sleepy Miller, Hardy Jones, Arthur Broadhead, Geo. Johnson, Jack McMurray and Rufus Brown.

Along with the other progressive commissioners of the county, he has purchased modern road machinery, and has seen the road building industry in this county revolutionized. CLANTON BOASTS OF ONE OF MOST ACTIVE KIWANIS CLUBS IN STATE

Organization Shows Splendid Record Of Work And Accomplishments During Its Three Years Of Existence Here

"We Build," a slogan that is the background of Kiwanis Clubs over the entire world, stands out boldly with solid evidence as the slogan that is lived by the members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club.

The Kiwanis Club of Clanton was organized in January, 1928, with a membership of several of the prominent business and professional men of the town as charter members, who realized the need and value of such an organization for their growing little city.

Since its organization three years ago, the Clanton Kiwanis Club has studied the needs of the town and county, mapping out several worthwhile and commendable programs and objectives for each year. Each of the past three years has carried a record of merit of the work done by this fine organization of Clanton.

C. E. Stapp, who is County Agent of Chilton County, was elected as the president of the club at its birth, with Dr V. J. Gragg as vice-president and W. M. Wyatt secretary. These three outstanding men of Clanton served that first year and their untiring efforts toward building the organization, and at the same time carrying out a program of work that was beneficial to their community, bearing to its fullest extent the motto, "We Build." They had come most commendable cooperation from all their members in this work

At the election of officers for th second year of the club, C. E. Stapp succeeded himself as president, as did Dr. Gragg and W. M. Wyatt These men again left behind them another year of fruitful service.

Dr. Gragg became president of the Kiwanis Club at the third year, with J. Mell Martin as vice-president and Ernest A. Childs as Secretary. With these men at the head of the club, and the various committees in the club, another year of marked progress was left behind and larger preparations were made for the coming year.

January 1, 1931, found the Clanton Kiwanis Club one of the most active in the state. J. Mell Martin was elected as president, with W. M. Wyatt, vice-president and Billy Smith, Secretary.

Throughout the life of the Kiwanis Club of Clanton every objective outlined by the club was realized and their work has received recognition from outstanding sources over the state. One of the most commendable steps made by the club was the making of an opportunity for crippled children to receive free examinations from well known specialists on such work at no cost, and in many cases treatment was made and those treatments successful.

Much credit is due to Dr. Gragg, J Mell Martin, C. E. Stapp and W. M. Wyatt for the growth of the club. These men were backed by the business men of the town with the interest of their town and country at heart, and now while the club is at a height, the various committees are striving for bigger and better things at al times.

The club meets each Thursday at which time interesting and instructive programs are given.

At this time the Clanton Kiwanis Club boasts of twenty-three members, all active in their respective efforts toward making their club an outstanding service to its constituents at all times Those comprising the membership of this organization are:

Isabella Community One Of Most Progressive In County

Homes And Farms of Community Speak Well of Progressive Spirit of Citizens Composing The Community

The past few years have marked much improvement in Isabella community and those surrounding communities touched by the vocational influence.

Within the last four years six evening schools have been taught in four different communities by the agricultural teacher. Three have been taught by the home economics teacher. The agricultural subjects were soil biulding, poultry, dairying, pastures, cotton, corn, home beautification, etc. The home economics subjects were foods, clothing convenient and efficient homes, and child care. During these evening classes the people had some of the best informed men of the state to lecture to them and answer any question or problem they were having with their chickens, home beautification, etc.

You will find eleven newly painted homes within a mile radius of the school building. Many others have done some remodelling, inside improvement, and planted a lawn or put out shrubbery. Fifteen of these houses have electric lights. The lights aren't the only convenience and luxury you find. Radios, irons, stoves and churns. Three homes have running water.

Almost every home has a nice little orchard and it well pruned and cared for. The poultry is much increased and improved by culling.

Pure breeding, better housing, disinfecting, and balanced feding; better pastures for both cows and hogs have been made. Several head from some of the best Southern herds are in our community and every family is improving his own from these.

Every farmer uses good methods in the selection of his seed every year and sprays and poisons for the enemies. When the vocational department was established so many of the farmers had almbost abandoned the idea of growing cotton due to the wilt and boll weevil. Now many are making near a bale per acre. Of course, they use the Auburn method of fertilizing.

Six years ago there was one riding cultivator in the community. Now there are above fifty under the vocational supervision. There was also barely enough vocational boys to maintain the department and this year the enrollment is thirty-eight. These boys have planted shrubbery around the agricultural and main buildings, put a concrete floor in iron shop, painted wood shop, built a Farm Bureau store room.

Four exhibits have been put on at Selma, Birmingham and Montgomery. $400 have been obtained from them, which was used to improve the school.

Marked improvement is noted in all the school girls' clothes. The color selection and lines are more becoming. Also their mother's ideas have changed. The remodeling of furniture, painting, and papering of rooms, selection and hanging of pictures and drapery, show considerable attractiveness. More palatable and nutritious scvhool lunches are noticed.

The greatest fact we wish to boast of is that no one from our community is needing welfare aid.

Dentist Of Maplesville, Ala.

DR. HARVEY M. NIX

Dr. Harvey M. Nix, popular dentist of Maplesville, was born in Maplesville on September 21, 1887, and is the son of the late J. P. Nix.

Dr. Nix was reared on a farm and received his elementary education in the schools of the county. Upon his graduation from high school he was employed in the general mercantile business in Randolph, Alabama, where he remained for some time. He chose as his profession the practice of dentistry, realizing the importance of well kept teeth as a safe guard to health, and entered Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee to pursue this course. In 1909 he graduated from Vanderbilt and immediately began his practice in Maplesvile.

Dr. Nix is unquestionably one of the outstanding men of Maplesville and Chilton County. He is one of the most public spirited men of the county and is always ready to put forth every effort possible to promote the welfare of his town and county. He is a very active man in all the social, civic, religious and political activities of the county. His pleasing personality has made for him a host of friends the number of which can be numbered only by his acquaintances. His dental practice in Maplesville verifies the above statement, as he has built up a wonderful practice.

Dr. Nix is a Vice-President of the Bank of Maplesville, a member of the Alabama Dental Association, member of the Masonic Lodge, and of the Baptist church.

On July 6, 1911, Dr. Nix was united in marriage to Miss Mae Potts of Maplesville.

THE NATIONAL COMEDY

An interesting and almost comic situation in Congress is commented on by Wm. L. Daley, Washington representative of the National Editorial Association, in a recent news letter. It concerns control of the new Congress elected last Fall which seems within reach of either of the two parties that wants it.

Strangely enough, according to Mr. Daley, neither party appears to want control and its accompanying responsibilities. If the Republicans organize the new Senate and House, a coalition of Democrats and Insurgent Republicans can thwart their legislative plans, as has been demonstrated in certain recent instances. If the Democrats gain control, a Republican President could easily defeat any legislation not to his liking through the veto power.

So, whatever happens, it is very likely that the next Congress will be a rather futile body, incapable of any accomplishments upon which to appeal to the country in the elections of 1932. And neither party seems desirous of taking the responsibility of leadership when prospects of making political capital seem so remote.

Although the Republican radicals have made a lot of noise during the present session, they have not gotten very far with their socialistic program. In fact, it is quite evident that the country at large is getting out of patience with their visionary schemes and the obstructive tactics they have adopted in an effort to put them through.

Seldom, if ever, in the history of the country have national politics been in a more chaotic condition, and the leaders of the various groups are all at sea with respect to the outcome. Therefore, we may see unusual and even frantic efforts at buck-passing at Washington during the next few months. And buck-passing is an indoor sport at which politicians are past masters.

Their antics in this line between now and the next presidential election will assume the aspect of a national comedy.

CO. WELFARE UNIT GREAT COMMUNITY AID; GIVES NEEDED HELP

Mrs. C. E. Stapp Is Superintendent Of This Work; "Help Them Help Themselves" Is The Slogan Of This Department

WELFARE SUPT.

MRS. C. E. STAPP

Mrs. C. E. Stapp, Chilton County Child Welfare Superintendent, began child welfare work in Chilton County January 1st, 1929, and a year before this time served as school attendance officer for Chilton County. She is a graduate of Franklin Academy (High School) Columbus, Miss., graduate of Montevallo, 1919, and has later attended 12 weeks summer course at Montevallo and 12 weeks the University of Alabama. During the war she won a cross from the American Red Cross for her hours of work in teaching the making of surgical supplies and immediately after the war went into County Red Cross work in Lamar County, where she worked for a year or more. She taught school five years before coming to Chilton County.

Mrs. Stapp, before her marriage to Mr. C. E. Stapp on April 11, 1920, was Miss Lillie Seay, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. R. Seay, of Fernbank, Ala., Lamar County, she being the youngest of a family of eight children.

JUDGE SMOOT HAS SPLENDID PAST RECORD

Covers Circuit Composed Of The Counties of Chilton, Elmore, Autauga

It is indeed a pleasure for the News to devote a space to mention one of the most prominent men in law affairs in this section of the country, namely, Judge George F. Smoot, of Wetumpka, Ala., who is Judge of the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit which is composed of the counties of Chilton, Elmore and Autauga.

Judge Smoot was born in Wetumpka, April 28, 1884, the son of R. E. and Cora Smoot. He received his education in the Agricultural School at Wetumpka, and studied at the University of Alabama.

He practiced law in the Elmore county district beginning in 1910, until 1922 when he became a Circuit Judge, which honored place he now holds. Judge Smoot spends some time in Chilton County and his friends here are countless, the same term can also be applied wherever he is known. His fairness in dealing out justice stands out, and at the same time he upholds the laws of his country in a most honorable manner.

Judge Smoot is due a large amount of credit for his efforts in his early life to educate himself, and realize his ambitions which, judging from present positions and past positions held by him, were among the highest of ideals.

Mrs. Smoot is one of those charming ladies of Wetumpka and Elmore County, who make friends at every angle. Judge and Mrs. Smoot have been blessed with three children, and their family life is among the happiest.

One of the outstanding phases of work being done in Chilton County is the work of the County Child Welfare Board. Children of this county are today being given the best of opportunity through this social service work. In general the child of today and tomorrow is to have more opportunities than the child of yesterday, because individuals as progressive members of society, of the present, are working and planning to give all children, whether dependent, neglected, delinquent, normal or abnormal, the opportunities that will meet their needs. Welfare workers are striving to adjust needy children physically, mentally and socially. In so doing better citizens ar being developed for the county, stat and nation.

There is one outstanding day in th lives of many children in Alabama an many yet unborn. That was September 25, 1919, the day the State Legislature approved an act providing fo the establishment of a child welfare department for children under 16 year of age. It was established in order tha the State itself might more effectivel reach these children in need of car and protection. Alabama has accepte the doctrine of prevention, realizin that the seeds of adult illiteracy, poverty and crime are sown in childhood It is cheaper in dollars and cents and far cheaper in human misery and tear to save the child than to electrocut the man after a career of crime; to educate the child than to provide alm houses to care for the pauper; to cur a child's physical defects than to buil hospitals for the incurables. So whe parents have failed to perform the duty to their children and dropped ou or wilfully neglected and mistreate them the final responsibility of thes children rests with the State.

The first Child Welfare Board Chilton Co. was organized and the wor efficiently launched on January 1, 192 Mrs. C. E. Stapp was elected Superintendent of Child Welfare. The cou ty Child Welfare Board is composed Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds, ch'm B. Lawrence, Clanton; Earl Parrisl Treasurer, Clanton; C. C. Conwa Jemison; A. P. Vinson, Clanton; M C.N. Parnell, Maplesville; Mrs. Irby D Ramus, Verbena, and Miss Ruth Jon Clanton.

The aim, value and advantage of t work had to be put before the publ Children and parents had to be show the value and necessity of an educat and encouraged to back their schoo The purpose of the work had to be terpreted to the community, the nee and the unadjusted. Community spi in these matters had to be create This work grew to such an extent tha it was necessary to have an assista or connecting link between the Sup intendent and County Welfare Board and the schools. In each school co munity, of which there are 55 in Chilt County, there is what is known as a "Key Person," who acts as this c necting link.

In this Child Welfare work M Stapp, as Superintendent, serves un the Chilton Co. Child Welfare Board, the Chilton County Board of Edu tion and the Commissioners Court.

It is her duty to act as atten ance officer, to assist the teachers in enforcing the compulsory attendance law; to cooperate with the State Child Labor Inspector in the enforcement of all laws relating to the employment of children. She serves as County Probation officer when appointed by the Judge of Probate Court; to cooperate with the State Child Welfare department and all other agencies, public or private, having the care of or giving relief to children, and to make such vestigations of any child in the cou as the State Child Welfare Dep ment or County Child Welfare B may direct. Mrs. Stapp acts as pa officer under the direction of Sup tendents of State institutions for child paroled from such institution living in Chilton County. She k records of all cases handled and b ness transacted in such manner form as may be presented by the S Child Welfare Department.

The physicians of the county are lending every means possible to assist in every way possible, and are rendering medical service in many cases free of charge.

Through the work of Mrs. Stapp and the County Welfare Board many children have been made happy and many families have been made to realize t place in the community and to accept their responsibilities.

GIRL SCOUTS REAL BOOSTERS FOR CHILTON

Clanton Troop Organized In November, 1930, Sponsored By Kiwanis Club

The Clanton troop of Girl Scouts sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Clanton was organized last November with Miss Zora Guy as captain. This troop, known as Troop No. 1, has sixteen girls registered with National Headquarters as tenderfoot scouts and who are now preparing Second Class requirements. Other members of the troop are preparing the Tenderfoot test.

The following is the present membership:

Grace Plyler, Elizabeth Harris, Helen Roberts, Elizabeth Gragg, Mary Frances Rasberry, Mary Charles Cox, Nell Neighbors, Dixie Johnson, Mary Edith Jones, Mary Nell Jones, Mary Belle Bean, Margaret Jones, Pauline Plyler, Dollie Belle Harris, Hilda Hart, Helen Moore, Elizabeth McSwain, Lucille Scroggins, Frances Davis, Celia Gerald, Mary Courtney Jones, Kate Fallin, Alice Petty, Elizabeth Lawrence, Ruth Gowan, Eloise Rasberry, Evelyn Maddox, Thelma White, Elizabeth Williams, Louise Marcus, Viola Mae Carroll, Evelyn Poe and Peggy Page.

The above thirty-three girls are divided into three patrols as follows:

The Peewit Patrol with Nell Neighbors as leader and Frances Rasberry, assistant leader, has the following members: Mary Charles Cox, Frances Rasberry, Grace Plyler, Mary Edith Jones, Mary Courtney Jones, Alice Petty, Ruth Gowan, Elizabeth Williams, Evelyn Poe, Nell Neighbors and Peggy Page.

The Tiger Patrol with Pauline Plyler as leader and Elizabeth McSwain, assistant leader, has the following members: Elizabeth McSwain, Helen Moore, Hilda Hart, Elizabeth Lawrence, Celia Gerald, Dollie Belle Harris, Elizabeth Gragg, Evelyn Maddox, Louise Marcus and Elizabeth Harris.

The Pine Tree Patrol with Margaret Jones as leader and Dixie Johnson, assistant, has the following members: Dixie Johnson, Mary Nell Jones, Helen Roberts, Frances Davis, Lucille Scroggins, Kate Fallin, Mary Belle Bean, Eloise Rasberry, Thelma White and Viola Mae Carroll.

This group of girls in an effort to prove that they are Real Scouts, sold Christmas decorations last Christmas to raise money to give fruit to some of the needy families of Clanton. This was done in co-operation with the welfare department.

"Being a girl Scout is a wonderful opportunity for Clanton's girls," says Miss Guy. "Girl Scouts find fun in hiking into the woods. They become able to tell north from south by the moss on the trees, or east from west by the shadows. They learn to talk to sister scouts across a river by signaling. They learn to know the principal trees and birds and animals that they meet; and know which are poisonous weeds or reptiles; can find they way by the stars as did the Indians and pioneers before them."

The Scout "Good Turns" to someone each day make them many friends—for the way to have friends is first Be One. The motto is "Be Prepared," and girl Scouts think through in advance what they would do in case of fire or storm.

Girl Scouts always try to be useful citizens. They help their community through service. Clanto Girl Scouts will "serve" their community March 13th, when they will aid in keeping order at the County Field Day program.

War Veterans Urged To Act On Rights

Disabled World War veterans who have not been able to "follow continuously any substantial gainful occupation" since discharge, are facing a loss of a part of their insurance rights, American Legion officials warned recently.

Unless these veterans act to obtain their rights before July 3, monthly payments from their insurance will be lost to them, it was stated Thursday.

The last compensation law entitles veterans to additional compensation rights. All who find themselves incapacitated should become informed of their rights, the information stated.

Victim Of Negro Attacker Dies

John Clark, 28, of 312 Winona Avenue, Capitol Heights, Montgomery, died Thursday night at a local hospital of bullet wounds received Tuesday, February 17, when attacked by three negroes on a Louisville & Nashivlle freight train, two miles north of Letohatchie. He was shot three times in the chest and shoulder. Another bullet grazed the head.

Clark, a former fireman of Montgomery, left that city Tuesday night about seven o'clock with two boy friends, stating that they were going on a passenger train to Mobile to look for employment, but later Clark was attacked by three negroes on a freight train. He was first asked to throw up his hands, which he did and finding no money they demanded his overcoat, which he gave them. They walked back a few steps and juggled and then returned to him and demanded his shoes and socks. He hesitated to take them off telling them he had no money in them. They shot four times then threw him off the train. Clark was picked up later and carried to a Montgomery hospital, where his people were notified.

Shelby Weaver, another victim of the negroes, is reported improving at McKenzie, where he was carried after being shot, the same night Clark was mortally wounded. One of the negroes was shot by Police Chief Murphy, of Greenville, while trying to steal a truck in that city.

Clark was an ex-service man of the World War. He had lived in Montgomery for some time. Surviving are his widow, parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Clark of Mountain Creek; three brothers, Mason and Earnest Clark, of Montgomery, and Clyde Clark of Mt. Creek and one sister, Mrs. Flora Boone of Montgomery.

Funeral services were held at the home at ten o'clock Saturday morning in Montgomery. The body was carried to Liberty Church on the Birmingham highway for burial. The Leak Company was in charge.

SPECIAL EDITION OF THE NEWS

Quite a number of the people of Chilton County have not had the pleasure of reading a copy of the Chilton County News, so we are taking it upon ourselves to send a sample copy to every box holder in the county, both post office and rural routes and hope that those who do not take the News will read it and study it from every angle.

This special CHILTON COUNTY BOOSTER EDITION of the Chilton County News, was published at a great expense, and is one of the largest and most attractive editions ever published in the county, carrying the largest collection of photographs ever published in one single edition in the county.

Our aim and intention is to publish a clean, newsy weekly newspaper, and though now the News has a circulation far above the average, we still wish to increase our number of subscribers.

In this issue of the News will be found many articles of valuable information, along with numerous photographs, that will be looked back to within a few years with no small degree of delight, so we would suggest that you preserve this issue for future reference and to look back on for proof of progress as the years roll by. We were anxious to secure a photograph of every school and church in the county and as many individuals as possible, but circumstances prevented us getting many of them.

The merchants, business and professional men and the citizens in general have aided us in no small way in compiling and publishing of this BOOSTER EDITION. Some aided in a financial way, while others assisted by giving information and cooperation, and we wish to extend our sincerest thanks and appreciation for each favor shown our staff.

We can truthfully say that we have been more than pleased with the splendid response and cooperation in this undertaking to boost, build and advertise our county to the outside world, and we believe that this step will not be regretted in the least by those taking part in it.

Respectfully,

BILLY SMITH, Editor.

JEMISON F. F. A. HAS AN INTERESTING PROGRAM OF WORK

The Jemison Future Farmers have constructed two flue-heated hotbeds to be used to grow potato slips from Big Stem Jersey sweet potatoes. These beds are located on the laboratory area and may serve as a pattern for the farmers in this section and also will be used this season by the members and farmers. The Big Stem Jersey sweet potatoes will be shipped while green in carload lots to northern markets. This is a new enterprise for this section.

Another part of this year's program of work is to run a variety test on strawberries, using the new variety Blakemore in comparison with the Klondike being grown in this section. The U. S. Department of Agriculture in their rather recent circular No. 93 advises that the Blakemore should have a thorough test wherever the Klondike is grown. The laboratory area is being used for this test. The year's program also calls for the introduction of the Young variety of dewberry, recommended to us by the L & N Railroad Agricultural Agents, to replace the Lucretia variety now used in this section. A variety test is now being conducted in the laboratory area. One cultural test will be conducted by the Future Farmers. Strawberries will again be used comparing the hedge system with the matted row system.

The F. F. A. boys are continuing with their last years program: the beautification and sanitation of the school grounds. Last year the grounds were sodded and additional shrubs were planted. The F. F. A. members take pride in the fact that their school led the way for school ground beautification in Chilton County and appreciates the many compliments that the people over the county have given the school for its landscape work.

Jemison High School Shows Progressive Spirit Prevails

o-o-o-o

In 1922, the Board of Education and citizens of Jemison saw the need of a larger and better school building to accommodate the children in the northern section of Chilton County.

Five acres of ground were deeded to the State by Mr. N. Langston to locate the new building. The first unit of this building carried seven classrooms, an office, library, and an open corridor; the second unit was constructed in 1924 which added an auditorium and two basement rooms; the third unit was a vocational building with two large rooms and a shop; the fourth unit was a home economics department with three rooms and a science laboratory; lastly, the corridor was encolsed. The building is well planned and substantially constructed It was completed at a cost of approximately $38,000, and is a pride of the town and the county school officials The building is used to accommodate both elementary and high school pupils in the northern part of the county

Library

One of the marked advances in the Jemison High School within recent years has been in the facilties and management of the library. It meets the State's requirements in the way of reference books, current periodicals, unabridged dictionaries, books in the fields of social science, natural science, agriculture, home-making, health, recreation, manual arts, and vocational guidance.

The library books are classified and arranged according to the standard system known as the Dewey decimal classification. Shelf lists are made and a standard loan system, including the card record system, is in use.

By a plan of teacher-pupil cooperation the school offers an all-day library service. Under the direction and responsibility of a teacher plans are made by which either teachers or trained pupils are in charge throughout the day

Many Successful Alumni

In the office of the principal there are the names of more than seventy-five graduates who are today holding responsible positions, and are succeeding in the practice of their profession. The positions of these graduates vary greatly, including: farmers, nurses, teachers, aviators, preachers, and merchants.

The school is steadily growing and has developed into one of, if not, the largest school in the county. Seven years ago there were only three small buses bringing children to this school. Today, there are ten large ones. The school has an enrollment of 554 students. These students are under the guidance of fourteen well trained teachers.

The High School teachers are: J. A. Peterson, principal; J. P. Montgomery, vocational agriculture; Miss L. Newell, home economics; Mrs. Seymour Reynolds, Miss Bessie Jessie, Mr. Zane Turner; Mr. Vaughn, Miss Holliday, music teacher.

Grammar School Teachers: Mrs. Littlejohn, Miss McMae McNeill, Miss Jessie Mims, Miss Marjorie Murphy, Mrs. J. P. Montgomery, Miss Mary Clements.

The department of vocational agriculture was added to the curriculum of the Jemison High School in 1927. There is now an increase of thirty per cent in the enrollment of all-day students in vocational agriculture. Including this year's program there has been a total of nine evening schools taught to adult farmers. They consist of the following unit courses. five in crops and fertilizers, two in dairying, one on poultry, and one in horticulture. Two of these evening schools recently won jointly the state prize offered to farmers in organized instruction for the economical production of cotton.

Among the agricultural changes in this section during the past few years has been the planting of Austrian peas and vetch for green manure crops, the Auburn method of fertilizing cotton and corn, an increase in the planting of hay crops, the planting of pastures which brought a growth of the 5 cow dairy industry, the development of poultry flocks and the growth of orchard and truck crops

Jemison is located nearly half-way between Birmingham and Montgomery and with a paved highway the farmers here are taking advantage of their possibilities in truck farming. As a result of truck farming they were in better financial condition than most farmers elsewheer when this past autumn brought a drop in the price of cotton to ten cents. In addition to having enviable local markets, strawberries are shipped thru their local cooperative association in carloads into markets of the north.

This section is unusually fortunate in that its farms are generally tilled by white farmers who own and live on them. The main line of the L & N Railroad centers this county, making it possible to get a fast freight or express upon very short notice. All these factors are leading toward an increase in truck crops in this section. This season marks the introduction of the Young variety of dewberries into the county by farmers in the Jemison territory to be grown and gradually built to carload shipments. The Lucreta variety has already proven a local success here, but will not be continued until the Young is first worked with. The Jemison, Thorsby and Clanton strawberry associations are importing for the first time the Big Stem Jersey sweet potato. This potato will be shipped in carload lots.

With the "Live at Home Program" as a basis a surplus of it all to sell, by taking full advantage of its opportunities this section may now be facing a brighter day than it has ever known.

Ferrac Is Now On Sale Here For First Time

Natures Marvelous Prescription Unchanged By Man At Drug Stores

The development of Ferrac reads more like a story from Arabian Nights than a modern business achievement, fascinating in its full detail that cannot be given in its entirety here. It comes from a deposit near Greenville, Ala., that is unique. From this deposit kept securely locked by Mother Nature between the eternal hills for hundreds of thousands of years come the mineral contents of this remarkable compound. Among the constituents are two in combination that make a chemical marvel. The greatest laboratories with the brightest minds in chemistry cannot combine them, yet Mother Nature placed them in the Greenville deposit in perfect combination. Hundreds of people from the United States and Canada have visited Greenville to be treated by this remarkable product and have gone away as living advertisements of its efficacy. Requests for the product have come literally from prince and pauper, and it has been sold in practically every section of the United States and foreign countries through the sheer power of merit alone, and with the expenditure of practically no money for advertising or other promotion up to the present time. Modern business has learned nature's secret and has taken it from twenty feet beneath the surface of the earth and put it into a modern package to aid in its perfect functioning the most wonderful machine in the world, the human body.

Ferrac is a marvelous combination of a large number of mineral salts of which magnesium, calcium and the sulphates of iron are an important part. Without alcohol, opiates, roots, herbs, or drugs of any kind, as harmless as the driven snow, but seemingly with almost no limit to its powers, it is daily overcoming ailments that have completely baffled all man-made medicines and treatments tried. For constipation, stomach troubles, gastritis, kidney disorders, anemia, high blood pressure, gall bladder ailments, and kindred troubles, no matter how complicated or of how long standing, count no case hopeless until you have first tried nature's own prescription to which man has added nothing and taken nothing from.

Ferrac is on sale at All Drug Store, or if your druggist cannot supply you from the Greenville Products Co., Greenville, Ala., upon receipt of price, $1.00 per bottle.—Adv.

METHODIST PASTOR

DR. D. W. HASKEW

Dr. D. W. Haskew, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Clanton. He was appointed to the Clanton charge at the last conference held at Mobile and immediately entered into his work here. In the few months that Dr. Haskew has been pastor of this church he has won the hearts, not only of the members of his congregation, but of the citizenship at large. The outlook at present is favorable to a most successful year. Dr. Haskew was born and reared in Clark County, near Grove Hill, Alabama. His early life was spent on the farm, where he received his early training, primary and high school education. Completing his preliminary school work he entered college at Southern University, Greensboro, Ala. where he received his college training. Dr. Haskew felt a conscious impression in early life that he was called to be a minister of the Gospel. During this transition from childhood to manhood there was never a time when he did not feel that this was to be his life's work. He therefore at 16 years of age, made application for license to preach in the Methodist church. From that time until today he has never wavered in his desire or determination to give God and humanity the best service he could render in helping to build up the church and God's Kingdom. After having finished his college course from the Bob Jones College, Panama, Fla., he was admitted on trial into the Alabama Conference at the age of 23 and immediately began his work at Freeport, Fla. Without any intermission, Dr. Haskew has served his church, filling many of the important charges in the Alabama Conference. He is now serving on several very important committees, which suggests and directs the endeavors of the work of the conference. In June, 1930, Dr. Haskew received the degree, D. D.

Dr. Haskew is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Haskew of Whatley, Ala. Mr. Haskew was a large landholder and progressive planter. However, be it said that the chief objective of his life was not the accumulation of property or worldly goods, but the desire of both mother and father was to give their children the best, both in environment and education. There are nine children who have reason to be proud of the achievements of their father and mother.

In 1903 Dr. Haskew married Miss Leila Gavin of Ponce de Leon, Fla. Dr. and Mrs. Haskew have one son, Lawrence D., who is now principal of the Greensboro High School. Lawrence D. graduated from Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., as one of the youngest students to graduate from that institution, finishing at the age of 18.

A marriage of interest to friends in Thorsby and Collins Chapel was that of Miss Pauline Beane and Mr. Elbert Hall, both of Collins Chapel. It was quietly solemnized at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. C. A. Meade of Wisconsin Avenue, Saturday evening at 7 o'clock. Rev. Zac Appleton, pastor of Collins Chapel Church, officiated and only the immediate families and a few friends were present.

In the decoration of the living room a color not of pink and white prevailed. At one end, an altar was improvised of roses, sweet peas and ferns and silver candelabras held white tapers that gave the only light for the ceremony. Two tall baskets filled with roses were stationed at each side of the altar. Little Helen Louise Meade and Dorothy Howard stood just in front of these with a huge heart tied around them with an arrow through it. The following words were written across them, "I am your Valentine."

Preceding the ceremony Mr. C. A. Meade played "Neapolitan Nights," as a Saxaphone solo accomponied by Mrs. Carl Chambers at the piano. Following this Mr. Carl Chambers rendered "I Love You Truly" as a vocal solo accompanied by Mrs. Carl Chambers, who later played the wedding march.

Little Marion Howard, dressed in pink acted as flower girl. The bride's only attendant was her friend, Miss Jessie Dorminey, of Jacksonville. She wore an evening gown of alice blue flat crepe and her flowers were carnations.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. C. A. Meade. Mr. Dock Chandler of Jemison served as best man.

The bride made a quaint and charming picture in her wedding dress of skipper blue crepe fashioned on princess lines with long flowing skirt. A contrasting note was the wide bertha of ecru lace. Her bouquet was snapdragons.

An informal reception followed the wedding service. A three-tier wedding cake centered a lace covered table decorated with pink roses and sweet peas. Misses Dessie Robinson and Edna Childress attended the serving table.

During the reception the bride and groom, accompanied by the bride's sister, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Meade, slipped away for a short wedding trip.

My Best Girl

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter-carrier, her mother a lazy woman who has "seen better days," and her sister a bootlegger's sweetheart, who works in a beauty parlor, is stock girl in the "Mack" stores, the Five-and-Ten of San Francisco. A boy whom she knows only as "Joe Grant," but who is really Joseph Grant MacKenzie Merrill, son of the owner of the "Mack" is learning the business by starting at the bottom. He doesn't like the job until he meets Maggie. And neither of them realizes that they are falling in love with each other, at first. Joe is impressed, however, by Maggie's intelligence and goodheartedness, and gives her advice on the subject nearest her heart, how to live the ideal life. She makes a suggestion for a better way of selling certain lines. He tells his father, as if it were his own idea, greatly pleasing the old man. He finds that the girls he used to know don't interest him as much as Maggie does, and when Maggie discloses her love in a burst of jealousy, he realizes that he loves her, too.

Joe is afraid that if Maggie finds out who he really is she will not have anything more to do with him. So he pretends that is its some other fellow's car when he takes her home in his big yellow roadster. And on the way they talk, at last, about marriage.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"And there's a budget for two people begins on eight hundred a year! Joe, I'm going to work it all out. We're going to put money in the bank from the very first minute. The man who has an income of one thousand and saves ten dollars is ten dollars richer than the man on an income of twenty thousand who saves nothing a year."

"Where'd you get that?"

"That was on a card in the window of the bank next door to the Mack. I see a lot of those things," added Maggie dreamily. "But I never really thought about them until I met you. You see, my mother and Liz aren't much on ide-als, and my father—I guess," she added delicately, with some hesitation, "is sorter influenced by Ma. But you—you seemed to be mine, Joe, from the start!"

Her pride, her joy as she said it, brought tears to his eyes. He did not speak.

For the moment he was Joe Grant, he had never been anything else; Joe Merrill, with his car and his income and his magnificent home, was the dream. This was the reality.

He interrupted her, kissing her gravely And then, without speaking himself, although Maggie continued to chatter joyously, he drove her home.

Joe went to his own home, and dressed for dinner like a man in a dream.

A week ago, or yesterday, he might have gotten out.

But now it was different. He had kissed her, had his arms about her, spoken of her as his wife.

Maggie. Maggie Johnson. Living in that wreck of a cottage on Goat Hill, pacifying and caring for that appalling mother, that commonplace, selfish sister, and that poor little worm of a letter-carrying father.

"My God! What have I done?" said Joe Grant, half aloud.

"What thinking of, Son?" his father asked, looking up.

They were in the library, he and his father alone together. And to his father's surprised question, Joe could only make the son's usual answer.

"Nothing."

Then there was another short silence.

"Nothing doing to-night, Dad?"

"I may go over to Maxwell's later—they're sitting in a little game," his father answered, with an awkward little effort to appear interested and cordial that touched Joe. "Brewer, one of our buyers, was to go to Japan for us on the Allegria next Saturday," he explained. "And now I understand that the wife's father has died and left them a pot of money—something like that—and they're going to New York," he said.

"Losing him, huh?"

"I guess so. They come and go, of course."

"Well, with three hundred and forty employees, that's natural enough, Joe drawled.

"Well, the six stores—and the administration office—what have you got down there? Seventeen or eighteen clerks?"

"You wouldn't ever be interested in coming down to one of the Stores with me, Joe," his father began. "It might interest you very much."

"No, thanks," Joe said lightly. "I couldn't start in the Stores—now."

His father nodded. The sudden interest and hope that had lighted his face faded. He instantly resumed his usual inscrutable, remote expression again.

Joe laughed gruffly, cleared his throat.

"That's where I am, Dad," he ex-

"The Mack?"

"That's what they all call the Stores."

"You told them who you were?"

"No, sir. I called myself Joe Grant."

"And nobody recognized you?"

"There was no reason why anybody should. I took care that I shouldn't look much different from the rest."

"You're sure they don't place you, Joe?"

"Place me My God, you ought to hear what they call me and what they tell me."

"You've gotten the goods on me, eh?"

"You stand pretty high with them, Dad. That stock-buying idea has made a hit all down the line."

"You in the Stores. You in the Stores," he murmured.

"Pretty hard work, isn't it?"

"Not so hard."

"And the sort of men—the girls there—aren't they a rather—plain—crowd?"

"They're all right."

"This," George Merrill suddenly exclaimed, "accounts for the automat idea, of course! I wondered—and Flint wondered how you happened to be taking such an interest in the Stores."

"As a matter of fact, it wasn't my

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

If you had been standing by the roadside looking on when Joseph's men stopped the sons of Jacob and started an investigation, and had heard them saying, "Some of you fellows have stolen the Governor's golden cup," and then you had seen the men pull that cup out of Benjamin's sack, you would have said, "That is the guilty party." It looked bad for Benjamin. The evidence was against him. While the evidence was damaging, yet Benjamin was not guilty and he had nothing to do with the cup being in his sack. It was a trap set for him. He was an innocent party and yet he seemed guilty. Not all the things in this world are as they seem to be. I sometimes think that we are too quick to make up our minds, too quick to point the finger of condemnation. Better wait and know the truth before we make our charges.

In Barbour County, Alabama, there were two men in a certain community who were enemies. One day a stranger was riding through that community, and on coming to the top of a hill, he looked down into the valley before him and saw a man bending over another man. He rode up to him and found the man with a long knife in his hand, standing by the one who was his enemy and that man was cold in death. This man told the stranger that he was passing that way and found the man dead by the roadside, with the knife in his heart and that he had done nothing but pull the knife out, and was trying to revive the man. That was his testimony on the stand, but the evidence seemed to say that he had killed the man. The court ordered him hung. Many years after the law had broken his neck, down in South Florida, a man was dying. Ht caled for a minister, and confessed to him that he had killed the man himself, and that the man whose neck was broken had told the truth. He had nothing to do with the killing. We should be careful in reaching a conclusion when we have nothing but circumstantial evidence. Be sure you are right and then proceed.

I heard a fisherman talking the other day about catching three and four fish on one line and all at the same time. He tied his hooks about ten inches apart on the line, and baited each hook. He threw the line into the water and when he felt a tugging at his line, he drew it up, and there were his supply of fish. A fish on each hook that was baited. That sounded very much like some of the fishing that I see the devil doing in Chilton County. He ties a half dozen hooks on his line and then throws it down into our midst. No sooner than his hooks are seen near us, there is a mad rush for the bait. One hook is baited with money, one is baited with pleasure, one is baited with sensuality, each hook has a separate kind of bait, but each hook is crowded with "Suckers" who want to swallow his hook. His Satanic Majesty pulls in his line and he has a number of fish at one time. This seems a mighty good time for the devil's fishing business.

In our courts a man was charged as being guilty of a certain offense and he proceeded to prove an alibi, by showing that he was at another place engaged in another violation of the law. Then the court just lifted it anchor and drifted down to his confessed crime and tried him there. Be sure your sins will find you out. I have known many a man to try and justify himself of one thing and at the same time condemn himself of another. A man tells his patsor, "The reason I was not at church on Sunday was because I had to go to my office." At the judgment God will just let go the charge of non-church attendance, and try him on his self-confesed sin of breaking the Sabbath. It is God who says, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

The weatherman gave us two days recently that should impress us with the different extremes of life. Sunday last was one of those days that filled our hearts with joy, and during its passing we felt good. The sunshine gladdened our hearts. On Monday it was cold and cloudy. The rain fell and all day we were in a gloom. No one seemed to be alive. If you are subject to the sunshine and rejoice when the world is full of glow, why not go out every day with sunshine in your sul. If you hate cold and gloomy days, why go out with a grouch with you. Leave the shadows behind and walk out in God's world with a smiling face and a happy heart.

The best lettuce seed is that grown the season previous to planting. Strictly fresh seed—that is, seed planted the same season it is grown—may germinate poorly, and lettuce plants grown from seed more than 2 years old may lack vigor.

Last Sunday was our regular preaching day and singing afternoon. We had a large crowd out. Rev. Lowery preached us a good sermon, and we also had a good singing. We had some visitors with us, and we ask them to come back and be with us again, and bring someone with them. We had a large crowd out Sunday night and we had a real good program. The B. Y. P. Clanton Methodist Church

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

We are looking forward to next Sunday as a great day in church life. Last Sunday was a special smile from God, and how we did enjoy it. Our church was beautiful with flowers, and everybody seemed filled with a desire to worship.

The music was unusually good. The young people were at their best on Sunday night. The sermon preached at the night hour by Dr. Preston from Texas, was one of the best ever heard in this section. He spoke on "Life."

Next Sunday we want you in Sunday school at 9:45 A. M. Hear the patsor at 11 A. M. as he gives to you the "Significance of the Wounds of Jesus."

The night service next Sunday will be at 7:30 o'clock. Note the change in the hour. Our church auditorium is one of the most beautiful and one of the largest in this section of the state. Help us to fill it.

WHEN FOOD SOURS

ABOUT two hours after eating, many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless dose in water. It is pleasant, efficient and harmless.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians prescribe to correct excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

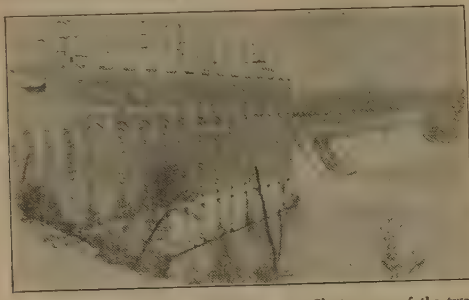
LAY DAM IS ONE OF BEAUTY SPOTS IN CHILTON COUNTY

Formerly Called Lock 12 And Named Later In Honor Of Capt. W. P. Lay

S. R. POWERS
Superintendent of Lay Dam

On December 4, 1906, Captain William Patrick Lay, the organizer and first president of the Alabama Power Company, obtained a grant from Congress, which was approved by the President March 4, 1907, authorizing the construction by the Alabama Power Company of a dam and power plant on the Coosa River at the place selected by the government engineers for Lock Number 12.

Actual construction began in 1910, but not until 1912 did the vision of Captain Lay converge into its final tangible success. The project was completed in the ensuing two years and has a present capacity of 110,000 horsepower and has since rendered a continuous service to the public, supplying a part of the ever-increasing demand for electric energy for the remarkable growth of the State during the past fifteen years.



View of hydro-electric plant, Lay Dam, near Clanton, one of the two large power plants in Chilton County.

At a meeting or Board of Directors of the Alabama Power Company held on October 29, 1929, a resolution was adopted to name Lock Number 12 Lay Dam in recognition of William Patrick Lay's Service to this company, to the electric industry, and to the State of Alabama. Saturday morning, November 23, 1929, over 2500 Alabamians and a score of the electric industry's most prominent leaders braved the cold of the bleak November day to join in the formal dedication of the Lock 12 developed as "Lay Dam."

Lay Dam is located on the Coosa River 12 miles northeast of Clanton. It is 1,543 feet in length and 104 feet in height. The power house is 324 feet long, 106 feet high and 74 feet in breadth. The generating equipment consists of four, 17,500 and two 19,500 horsepower turbines, generating 6,013,500 kilowatt-amperes. It creates a navigable slack water pool 24 miles in length with a flooded area of 6,000 acres and a drainage area of 9,087 square miles. Lay Dam is in charge of S. R. Powers, Superintendent.

Chilton Is Among Foremost Agricultural Counties Of State

County Is Situated Near State's Largest Markets; With Fine Roads Leading In Every Direction In The State

We think that Chilton is one of the best agricultural counties in the State. Practically everybody in the county is either directly or indirectly interested in farming.

The soil of Chilton County is largely of the Ruston fine sandy loam type. It responds well to fertilizer, making it profitable here to grow most any kind of general farm and truck crops. Many people who are familiar with the state, say, "That Chilton County is probably the best terraced county in the State." We understand that our former County Agent, Mr. Conway, of Jemison, Ala. is possibly largely responsible for the widespread interest in terracing in this county. Of course there are a large number of good farmers throughout the county who helped create interest in preventing soil erosion.

Much interest is being shown by farmers of the county in not only preventing soil erosion, but in increasing the fertility of the soil, through the use of soilbuilding crops, such as vetch and Austrian winter peas. Each of the past two years, more than a carload of vetch and Austrian peas have been planted for soil building purposes.

Chilton County is located in the center of Alabama, about half way between Birmingham and Montgomery, two of the main markets of the tsate. The paved road connecting Montgomery and Birmingham traverses the center of the county from south end to the north end. The county is a network of good lateral roads from every section of the county leading into the paved highway, making it easy for farmers from every section of the county to get their produce to one of two good markets within two hours time.

The main money crops of Chilton County are cotton, strawberries and watermelons. The annual cotton crop is approximately 19,000 bales. Around 125 cars of strawberries are being shipped from the county annually with more new acreage being set to berries each year.

It is estimated that between$125,000 and $150,000 worth of water melons are trucked and shipped from the county annually. A goodly number of farmers are paying their entire operating expenses from sales of berries, melons and truck crops and having their cotton crop as surplus.

There are six good small banks in the county. The large number of farmer customers and splendid condition of these banks is a good index to the general splendid condition of this county as compared to many other sections.

The farmers of the county have their own organizations through which they buy their materials, such as seed, spray material, fertilizer and necessary feed ingredients, etc., and through which they sell their commodities.

All of the strawberries are sold thru farmer-owned and farmer-operated associations.. The Thorsby Fruit Growers Association is the oldest of these associations. The other two associations through which berries are sold are the Clanton Berry Growers Association and Jemison Berry Growers Association. The associations are very cooperative, and there is a possibility that in the near future all of the berries from the county will be marketed through one sales agency made up of a committee from each of these shipping associations and shipping points.

Prior to 1927, this county was without a county agent for several years. In 1927 a group of influential citizens of the county who realized the value of a county Agricultural Agent as a connecting link between the Experiment Station and the citizenship of an agricultural county came together and asked that the people of the county be allowed to vote for or against the Board of Commissioners employing an Agricultural Agent. Their request was granted and we are advised that the vote was about three to one in favor of the commissioners employing an agent. Following this expression on the part of the people, in August of 1927, Mr. Cohen E. Stapp was employed as agent. Mr. Stapp has made a host of friends throughout the county and has proven to be of much value in the county. In September of last year the Commissioners Court called a county-wide meeting to determine how the people of the county felt about County Agency work after having had Mr. Stapp with us for three years. The notice asked that especially any who had criticisms against Mr. Stapp's work to be present and let the court hear them.

Mr. Stapp was asked to be present and make a report of his activities since coming to the county as Agent. Mr. L. N. Duncan, Director of Extension work in Alabama, and Mr. E. Sizemore, District Agent for Central and Southeast Alabama, were invited. Approximately 500 farmers and other business and professional men met and listened with interest to Mr. Stapp's report. The meeting was one of the biggest demonstrations for the continuance of the Agricultural Extension work in the county, the writer has even seen. The meeting lasted about two hours and not one dissenting vote or word was raised against Mr. Stapp or his work, but everything done and said was in highest praise of Mr. Stapp and his work.

Mr. Sizemore in his talk told the group assembled that Mr. Stapp was rated one of the five best agents in the State.

In addition to the splendid work of Mr. Stapp, the county is fortunate in having two of the best vocational agricultural teachers in the state, in the persons of Mr. Earle Thomas of Isabella High School, and Mr. J. P. Montgomery of Jemison High School. Mr. Stapp and the vocational teachers count upon each other and are very cooperative.

The following is a brief summary of Mr. Stapp's work in the county the past three years:

Upon assuming his duties in the county, Mr. Stapp made a survey of the county to try to determine the program of work he should attempt to lead.

One of the first needs Mr. Stapp saw was some organization through which Agricultural Extension work could be made most effective and worthwhile. Mr. Stapp having been engaged in Agricultural Extension work for seven years prior to coming to Chilton, was familiar with the American and Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, its objectives and ideals. He called in a group of leading farmers from over the county and recommended that they set up a county unit to be known as the Chilton County Farm Bureau. The group sanctioned Mr. Stapp's suggestion and went to work to perfect the organization. The first President was Mr. J. N. Dennis, one of the most influential and highly respected farmers and citizens of the county. Mr. Dennis was succeeded by Mr. W. L. Popwell, another outstanding man of the county. The organization has grown each year, until it now has a membership of 528 of the best farmers in the county, and leads all other county farm bureaus in Mr. Sizemore's district composed of 16 counties in Central and in Southeast Alabama, in membership and activities.

The present officials of the Chilton County Farm Bureau are: Miss Zora Guy is assistant secretary and in charge of the office. Mr. Stapp County Agent, Mr. Earle Thomas, vocational teacher at Isabella, and Mr. J. P. Montgomery, vocational teacher at Jemison, act in an advisory capacity to the Farm Bureau officials.

Mr. Stapp has promoted cooperative selling of poultry which was started on the west side of the county by vocational teacher Earle Thomas. Since Christmas Mr. Stapp has aided in the cooperative shipment of more than 52,000 pounds of poultry. Two cars stopped at Verbena, Clanton and Jemison last week, loaded 27,142 pounds of poultry. More than five hundred farmers were issued checks for poultry loaded on these two cars.

In an effort to help provide a market for surplus butterfat, where farmers didn't get enough to justify them to ship to a creamery, Mr. Stapp made arrangements with the Farm Bureau and Swift & Company, to install a cream station at the Farm Bureau office. The station opened up with less than one dozen patrons. Now more than sixty farmers are bringing their cream to the station where it is weighed, tested and paid for while they wait.

Mr. Stapp's report further reveals that since coming heer and up to November of last year, when he made his last annual report to Washington that: He has held 1335 field method demonstrations on such subjects as culling, housing and feeding poultry and other clasess of livestock, terracing, care of home orchard, seed selection, soil building crops, marketing, etc. His records show that more than 22,500 farmers attended these demonstrations. He has made 1956 farm visits. He has written 535 news articles; five thousand and seventy individual letters; 105 circular letters, of which more than two hundred and seventy-two thousand copies were sent.

More than 16,580 farmers have called at Mr. Stapp's office for various kinds of information. He has distributed more than ten thousand government bulletins treating on various subjects of interest to the farmers of the county. Mr. Stapp has a very complete display of the newest, practical bulletins covering more than 300 subjects of vital interest to farmers and farm women of Chilton County. Mr. Stapp has attended and spoken at about 160 meetings other than ones included in above report. There has been a total attendance at these meetings of more than 13,000 people.

Mr. Stapp's work with the 4-H Club boys has been very outstanding. He has held annual Club Rallies with average attendance of more than 300 boys. He held three days camps with the boys in 1928-29 and -30 with an average attendance of about 130 4-H boys. This year Mr. Stapp is organizing the boys into local clubs. He is having the boys to elect officers and a local adult leader. The boys will hold regular community club meetings this year and discuss timely subjects assigned by Mr. Stapp.

With the splendid soil, roads, markets and cooperative spirit in Chilton County considered, we think Chilton affords a splendid opportunity for the energetic, cooperative spirited farmer.

CLANTON CITY SCHOOLS ARE MODERN AND WELL EQUIPPED

Two Splendid Buildings With Corps Of Efficient Teachers Make System Among Best In The State

Clantons remarkable strides forward in a material way have been equalled, if not surpassed, by the remarkable advances made in the educational system of the city in the last few years. The schools of the city are two in number, modern and well equipped in every respect. The enrollment in the schools is about 580, and a corps of 19 teachers is maintained.

It was during the year 1914 that the citizens of Clanton and the whole of Chilton County began to agitate the question of establishing a high school for the county to be located at Clanton. Consequently, twenty acres of land was donated to the State of Alabama for such purpose by Dr. Earl Gowan, one of the town's most public-spirited and progressive citizens, and by January, 1915, the present beautiful building had ben oompleted and the institution opened its doors to the public.

Mr. C. C. Slayton was the first principal, and the faculty composed of the following: H. L. Foshee, Miss Corita Wilson, Miss Mary A. Brown, Miss Dora Haynes, Miss Emma Mathews, and Miss Evelyn Waller. The student-body numbered sixty, and the first graduating class according to information secured from the Cantrolla (High School Annual) consisted of the following young women and men: William Edgar Teel, Annie Laurie Gragg, Omar Louis Reynolds, Ara Eustace Mullins, Thomas Eugene Wyatt, Mae Beverly Hester, Oscar William Jones, Bessie Elizabeth Davis, James Arfeltz Mullins.

The school progressed rapidly, and today the faculty numbers ten with a student-body of two hundred and thirty-eight and a graduating class of thirty-five.

L. C. Warr, the preesnt principal, who came to the school in the fall of 1928, is a graduate of the State Teachers Colege at Troy, Alabama, holds a B. S. degree, George Peabody College, Nashville, Tennessee, and an A. M. degree from Columbia University, New York City. He is assisted by the followinfg capable young men and women: T. H. Walker, A. Prominent Clanton Citizen

J. R. HARDY

Mr. J. R. Hardy, citizen of Clanton and Chilton County, formerly of Coosa County, who makes his home in Clanton is one of our esteemed citizens. Mr. Hardy's business interests brought him to Clanton and Chilton County for eight years before removing his family to Clanton. He was formerly Sheriff of Coosa County for four years, having been elected by a good majority. Beginning his term of office in 1915 and serving his four years and retiring in 1919.

Mr. Hardy was reared on the farm and received his education in the schools of Coosa and attended the 4th District Agricultural School in Sylacauga, Alabama. He entered upon his career in the business world as a farmer and speculator in live stock, the latter bringing him into contact with all the people of his county. His fair dealing and honesty and friendly disposition made everyone his friend, with whom he dealt or was associated with in business.

It was largely through this endeavor that he gained the confidence of his people who recognized his ability as not only a good business man, but an upright Christian gentleman that created a demand for his making the race for Sheriff of his county. During his term of office the people who elected him were not disappointed in his administration. He was fearless in dealing with the lawless element and at the same time was most considerate and kind in his dealings with them. He never at any time when dealing with the lawless made a personal matter of any mistreatment that he might have received at their hands. It was thoroughly demonstrated that he felt that he was a servant of the people and represented the law and not himself.

Mr. Hardy has moved through the course of his life in a quiet and unassuming manner, never putting himself forward, yet when necessary he has met every demand when duty has called. Mr. Hardy, while he has not made a great deal of money because money has not been his chief end in life, yet he is comfortably fixed along this line and owning considerable property which classes him as a man of affairs in his community.

We would speak of Mr. Hardy's home life. It has been the pleasant privilege of the writer to be entertained in his home. Therefore, gaining an insight to the real worth of Mr. Hardy, his wife and children. We can say that it has given us an inspiration to be the recipient of this hospitality and to observe the quiet even way in which their home is conducted.

In 1900 Mr. Hardy was married to Miss Maggie Harris of Tallapoosa County, Ala. Mr. and Mrs. Hardy have five children, the older, Mrs. Robbie Davis, educated in Howard College, Birmingham, and the U. of A.; Marshall, who graduated from Auburn, and is now a valued employee of the First National Bank of Birmingham; Harris, now attending school in Gadsden; Johnnie, Jr., is employed in the drug business in Montevallo, Ala.; Maralyn, the youngest, is now attending high school in Clanton.

We are proud to claim these good people as citizens of our town and wish them many more years of peace and happiness.

Rambling Thoughts Of A Reader

The address delivered by Dr. D. W. Haskew at the Kiwanis Club and published in the paper was read with much interest and his thoughts were heartily sancitioned.

The growth and improvement of Clanton can be seen in many ways. It is a community we have grown to love for many reasons. The people who live in a place certainly make the place ideal or otherwise. Have you ever read the poem, "It Isn't Your Town, It's You."? This applying to fault-finding or progressiveness as the case may be. There are many people here from whom radiates a hearty welcome to newcomers and a friendly fellowship to those with whom they come in contact.

If we would find peace and happiness we must give to the world a little more than we expect to receive from it. "As we measure our neighbor, he will measure back to us." Are we keeping up our measures? How fine it would be for us all to adopt the Scout motto and "Do a good turn daily."

May we all pledge allegiance to Dr. Haskew's "Radiance Party." May we heartily endorse all the planks in the platform.

May we remove the "slouchy garment that is resting on our beautiful little city. We become accustomed to the unsightly places, and seem to forget the piles of rubbish, mud, slush, and weeds—the swamps, the dumping places that border on public roads, the vacant lots, and last but not least, the City of our Dead.

Why should a city of lovely homes, prosperous business houses, fine chuches, schools, and public buildings to be proud of, neglect its cemetery so? It is true theer are some beauty spots there that show loving care. Let us grow flowers instead of weeds—let us "clothe this spot with a garment that shines."

Let us strive to be leaders in the ranks of progress. Let us each be a "Goodwill Community Asset" in any way we can, even though it be small.

"This book is most interesting to me, because I'm one of the 200,000 producers of cream, poultry and eggs who sell to Swift & Company. It is just as interesting to everyone who has something to sell to Swift & Company, as well as the housewife who buys food for her family.

"This book showed me the source of Swift & Company's profits, which come, mainly, from savings in expenses, and not at the expense of the producer or the consumer. What impressed me was that Swift earns its dividend from an average profit from all sources of only a small fraction of a cent a pound.

"The chapter on Swift & Company's produce plants on page 35 held my attention, for here is shown how the company creates a direct road to remote markets for the producers' products. And you may learn how Swift's marvelous distributing plan serves producer, small retailer and consumer in every corner of the country.

Bone meal, poultry manure, cottonseed meal, and sewage sludge are very good commercial fertilizers for the lawn. They are safe to apply and give fairly quick results. Apply from 10 to 15 pounds to 1,000 square feet in late winter or early spring.

More liberal use of seed potatoes would increase the average production per acre, the U. S. Department of Agriculture believes. From 15 to 18 or more bushels of seed potatoes should be planted to the acre, instead of 9 to 11, as is the usual practice in some sections.

Planting wheat 65 to 75 yards from any wheat straw or stubble of the previous season will control the destructive wheat strawworm, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This pest, which often destroys whole fields of spring wheat, attacks wheat only, and the first generation, or spring form, is wingless and unable to travel long distances.

CHIEF DEPUTY

JAMES B. GILLESPIE

Contributing a great deal to the efficiency of the Sheriff's office is the Chief Deputy, James B. Gillespie, who was born in Coosa County in 1897. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gillespie. He attended the public schools of the county and became interested in farming at an early age. When he was only 20 years of age he was an independent and successful farmer. Mr. Gillespie proved that he was a progressive farmer by the fact that he was a strong believer in diversification.

One of his hobbies was the raising of registered stock. He was associated in this work for a time with Mr. J. D. Collins, a former Sheriff of the county.

Chilton County is indeed fortunate in securing the services of a young man of such ability.

Mr. Gillespie married Miss Linnie Collins of Chilton County and is the father of five fine children, three boys and two girls, and is a member of the Baptist church.

DIST. ATTORNEY

HENRY GRADY REYNOLDS

Henry Grady Reynolds, United States District Attorney for the Alabama Middle District, with offices in the Federal Building at Montgomery, has practiced law at Clanton, Chilton County, being a member of the law firm Reynolds & Reynolds, of which his brother is junior partner.

Mr. Reynolds was born January 11, 1889, and is the son of Judge L. H. and Dora C. Reynolds of Clanton. He acquired his primary education in the schools at Clanton, attended the Marion Military Institute in 1906-07, and was a student in the University of Alabama from 1907 to 1912. He took his law degree at the University in 1912 and in the same year engaged in private practice at Clanton, where he achieved the substantial success that brought him broader recognition and attention. On July 24, 1924, he was given a temporary appointment as United States District Attorney for the Middle District of Alabama, and on January 13, 1925, was appointed for a full term of four year. He was re-appointed in 1929.

Mr. Reynolds is a Knights Templar Mason and Shriner, member of Knights Pythias, Woodmen of the World and the Presbyterian Church. On September 10, 1914, he married Miss Estelle Morgan. They have two fine boys, Henry Grady Jr., and Morgan.

Scalded poultry deteriorates more quickly than dry-picked poultry and should be handled more carefully and quickly when marketed. Frozen poultry may be thawed in running water in from 8 to 12 hours, but this method tends to injure keeping quality and flavor. A better way to thaw poultry—both dry picked and scalded—is to hang the birds by the legs in the cooler over night.

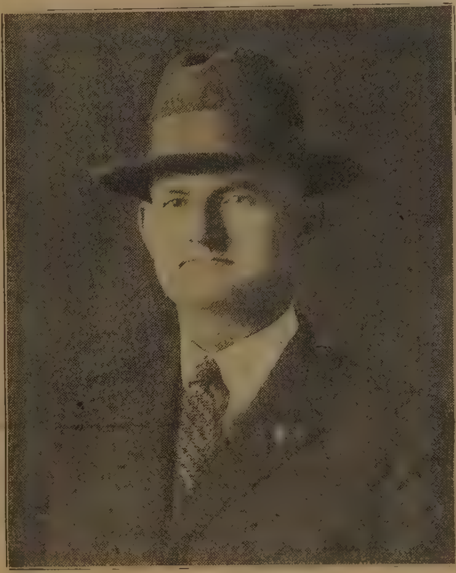
Judge Of Probate



JUDGE L. H. REYNOLDS

Judge L. H. Reynolds, Probate Judge of Chilton County, was born in Macon County, Alabama, in 1864, the son of Wm. Joe and Susan M. Reynolds, pioneer settlers of Macon County. His grandfathers, Colonel William Reynolds and William Jordan, were among the first settlers of Tuskegee, Alabama.

His family moved in 1870 to Dry Valley in Chilton County, Alabama, where he spent his boyhood and was educated. His early life was spent on the farm, remaining there until 26 years of age, leaving the farm to enter the mercantile business at Jemison. This firm was known as The Farmers' Alliance and operated under this name for five years, Judge Reynolds buying out other interests and continued the business for ten years under the name of Reynolds Bros.

In 1890 Judge Reynolds was nominated for State Senator, but withdrew because of his age. In 1896 he was elected a member of the Legislature, which position he held for two terms. He was elected as delegate to the Constitutional Convention in 1898, and in turn was elected to the Legislature to put the New Constitution into effect.

Judge Reynolds was elected Judge of Probate in Chilton County in August, 1904, which office he held until 1910. He was defeated for re-election in 1910, suffering the only defeat in his career. After leaving the office of Probate Judge in 1910, he entered the mercantile business in Clanton, which he conducted for six years.

In 1916 Judge Reynolds was again elected Judge of Probate of Chilton County, and was re-elected in 1922, and again in 1928. He is now serving his county in his twenty-first year as Probate Judge of Chilton County.

One of the first movements of Judge Reynolds was in 1905, which was his first year as Probate Judge was to clear the county of debt and place it on a cash basis. His experience in the mercantile business had taught him that the county could operate cheaper and better on a cash basis. During his first term the county was freed of all indebtedness and had $10,000.00 in the treasury. When re-elected in 1916 he found the county in debt to the extent of $238,000.00. In 1918 the county Court House burned with only $12,000 insurance. Due to State laws it was impossible to borrow funds to build a new Court House as the county was bonded at that time to the limit the law provided for. Judge Reynolds was advised by the Circuit Judge and County Examiner that it would be impossible to build a Court House. Again he called upon his old policy of paying cash and not only rebuilt a magnificent Court House, but at a minimum cost. This building was cleared of all indebtedness in 1921.

During Judge Reynolds' term as Probate Judge the county's debt has been reduced to a minimum and has sufficient cash on hand to take care of all outstanding bonds. Several thousands of dollars have recently been loaned to banks of the county to be reloaned to the farmers, thereby enabling them to produce another crop.

During the recent depression and unemployment period the county had hundreds of people in need. The county road machinery was discontinued and men placed on the county roads in their place. Many men in the county who were unemployed were given a job and on December 23, 1930, which was the first month under this policy, $11,000.00 was paid to the unemployed, this money going to 1100 people, according to information. The roads and highways of the county are being put in excellent shape under this policy and at a small cost to the county. Too, all road tax was discontinued for the year. This move has caused others in different sections to start a similar move for the unemployed. Judge Reynolds has been complimented for inaugurating this policy.

The County roads are in excellent condition, having over 1700 miles of well kept roads. There is not a place in the county a school bus or rural mail carrier can not go in comfort.

In his private life Judge Reynolds is a man active in all the civic, social and religious activities of his town and county. He is a member of the First Methodist church of Clanton, member of the Masonic Lodge and a Shriner.

Judge Reynolds was married to Miss Dora Marshall of Athens, Ga., in 1888. Judge and Mrs. Reynolds have five children of whom they are justly proud: Grady, U. S. District Attorney, Claude, connected with Adams Grader Co.; Omar, prominent lawyer of Clanton; Mrs. Winnie Bridges, of Bessemer, Ala.; and Mrs. Willie Newell, of Birmingham, Ala.

Judge Reynolds has never used tobacco in any form, and he has always been a strong prohibitionist, all his life. He is proud of his three sons, not only for the success they have attained in the business world, but also for the fact that like their father, they have never used tobacco or alcohol in any form.

FRUIT GROWERS ASS'N. MANAGER

J. M. SMITH
OF THORSBY, ALA.

It gives the News great pleasure to give a sketch of the life and activities of Mr. J. M. Smith. Mr. Smith is a most unsung man who is modest in his expressions about himself. We therefore feel that it is due him and his community to say something about the value of his services to his county.

He was born and reared on a farm four miles south of Thorsby, on Oct. 16, 1876. He received his education in the common schools of that day. The school system of 1880 was not adequate to take care of the education of the children of the county. Mr. Smith therefore, did not have much opportunity to get the educational training due him and other children. He did much of his studying at night by a pine knot light. It is a far cry from the schools of that day to this. Think of it. The fine schools on every hill, fine equipment and the finest teachers. Still many fail to take advantage of the opportunities they have.

Mr. Smith, since early manhood, has always spent his time in helping to promote the interest of his county and community. At 25 years of age he was elected as a trustee of the Littlejohn school and has been continuously, for 20 years. Soon after this he was employed by the Chilton County Farmers Union and served in that capacity for 10 years. During that period he became acquainted with every farmer of the county and was so well informed in agriculture, truck and fruit growing that he was chosen to an important post with the Thorsby Fruit and Truck Growers Association. He is today an outstanding leader in this great work of helping the farmers and fruit growers to success in productivity and marketing their products. Mr. Smith has been a member of this organization for 20 years and has filled every office except president. He is manager and Treasurer of this organization and has been for 10 years. He has seen the organization grow from a small number to the present membership of 250.

Mr. Tiffin was born in Franklin County, Alabama, December 24, 1882. He has been in the furniture business since he was 21 years of age. He was in business in Red Bay, Alabama, from 1906 to 1919, and in Birmingham from 1919 to 1929. Sheriff Of Chilton County

W. H. GILLESPIE

Chilton County boasts of one of the strongest county law enforcement departments in the state. Headed by a very able Sheriff, Walter H. Gillespie, the citizens of the county feel that they have a splendid protection.

Mr. Gillespie was born at Rockford in Coosa County in 1879. He is the son of David and Emily Gillespie. When Mr. Gillespie was only 14 years of age his father died and he was left with the responsibility of the family, a mother, five sisters, and 4 brothers. He took his father's place on the farm and followed that vocation for a number of years.

In 1896 Mr. Gillespie married Miss Roxie Kelly from Rockford. He continued to farm until 1915 at which time he was appointed chief deputy to Sheriff Harris, and he served Chilton County in that capacity during the 4 years of his term. In 1919 he became a member of the law enforcement department of the State of Alabama and from 1920 to 1921 he was deputy for Eureka Coal Company at Helena. Mr. Gillespie has a very fine record as Federal Prohibition Agent for 8 years during which time he proved to be both fearless and courageous in the discharge of his duty.

He is highly esteemed by the people of Alabama as well as by the people of Chilton County, as was proven by the recent county election in which he was elected Sheriff of Chilton County.

Outstanding Baseball Player

JACK HAYES

MEMBER WASHINGTON AMERICAN LEAGUE BASEBALL TEAM

Minter Carney (Jack) Hayes, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Hayes of Clanton, was born July 19, 1906. He attended the schools of Clanton, graduating from the Chilton County High School in 1915. He entered the University of Alabama in 1916, graduating from that institution, and while there became one of the greatest baseball players to ever grace the diamond at the Capstone.

Mr. Hayes baseball career began in high school where he was quite a star. In the summer of 1924 he played semi-pro baseball at Roanoke, Ala., 1925 at Clanton and 1926 at Aliceville, Ala. Before finishing high school Jack received an offer for the Chattanooga Club of the Southern League. While a sophomore at the University of Alabama he received an offer from Chicago White Sox of the American League.

In the spring of 1927 Mr. Hayes signed with the Birmingham Barons of the Southern League and two months later was bought by Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators of the American League. He remained with the Washington Club until August, 1928, when he was farmed to Minneapolis of American Association. He played second base for the "Millers" during the months of August and September of that year. His playing was sensational, and he was recalled by the Washington Club, remaining with them since.

Jack has been used as a utility infielder most of the time by Washington, but his playing has convinced the Washington officials that he is one of the most valuable players in the big league. The leading sport writers thruout the country praise him as being a brilliant and reliable fielder, knowing what its all about, with a strong and accurate throwing arm and a very dependable man at the plate. Frank H. Young, sports writer for the Washington Post, has this to say: "In practically every line of business there are men with just as much ability as some of the administrators, holding lower positions simply because opportunity did not knock at their door. This also applies to baseball, the history of the National game being full of cases where lowly understudies, once given a chance, have suddenly blossomed out as stars and better than the men whose places they have taken. If the recent showing of Minter C. (Jack) Hayes may be taken as a criterion, Washington has a young shortstop whose light would have remained hidden under a bushel' but for the injuries to Manager Harris and Infielder Bob Reeves. The beauty of Hayes' form is that it is natural, the youngster taking to baseball like a duck to water. He appears to have the knack in fielding which makes difficult stops look easy, the reason being that he gauges the ball properly from the time it leaves the bat. He stands still at the proper time, goes back at the proper time and comes in at the proper time, the result being that he generally gets the ball on good hops."

The work of Jack Hayes attracted the attention of Scout Joe Engle while Hayes was still with "Bama" but before the Nationals had time to make him an offer Johnny Dobbs, Birmingham manager, stepped in and signed him to a contract. The Baron roster was full at the time and, being that Jack was just a rookie collegiate, he was not used. The Nationals, strictly on his performance with Alabama, then bought Hayes from the Barons before he ever had the opportunity of seeing his name in a Southern Association box score.

Jack is proud of the fact that he hails from Clanton and is a real Booster for his home town and community. Clanton is in turn proud of Jack and his achievements in the baseball world.

Church of Christ Had Beginning In Redman Hall In Clanton In 1922

Clanton Church Was Organized Nine Years Ago; Has a Very Active Membership Today

The history of the Church of Christ at Clanton dates back to November 12, 1922, when it began worshiping in the Redman Hall in Clanton. For several years a small congregation had been worshipping at Mineral Springs about ten miles north of Clanton, but a movement was started to consolidate the membership of all the members living in reach of Clanton at this place, and the worship was begun here on the above mentioned date. The church continued worshiping in the Redman Hall for about one year when it moved into its new building located on the corner of 6th Street and 4th Avenue, North.

The house of worship now used is not the equal of some of the other church buildings in the town, but there are but very few better church buildings in Chilton County. The auditorium has a seating capacity of about 400, and theer are four class rooms. The church owns one fourth of an entire city block.

The church has been unfortunate in losing a great number of its membership by people moving away from the town, but the present membership numbers about forty members the most of whom attend services regularly. The church has never failed a single Lord's Day to have its regular services since its beginning, and every Sunday school class is taught by a college trained teacher except one, this one being taught by a literary teacher of wide experience.

Some of the ministers who have preached for the congregation are the following: Price Billingsley, of McMinville, Tenn.; S. H. Profit, Chattanooga, Tenn.; D. E. Mason, Ft. Deposit, Ala.; L. S. Ellis, Birmingham, Ala.; A. C. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala.; O. C. Dobbs, Fayette, Ala.; G. H. O'Neal, Morrison, Tenn.; W. C. Graves, Birmingham, Ala.; Fred M. Little, Montgomery, Ala.; J. F. Pendergrass, Birmingham, Ala.; Reese Rodgers, of Clanton, Ala; R. H. Boles, Highland Home, Ala.; J. T. Daniel, Clanton, Ala.; Murphy Bratton, Jemison, Ala.; and G. A. Dunn, Dallas, Texas; and J. S. Moares, Wetumpka, Ala.

The officers of the church now are J. E. Pate, J. P. Bean, W. M. Bean, elders, and A. Wade and W. T. Bean, deacons.

REPORT ON REDS

Some rather surprising information is contained in the report of the House committee created to investigate the activities and propaganda of Communists in the United States, of which committee Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York was chairman.

The report shows that while the actual number of Communists in this country is relatively small, perhaps not more than 500,000, they are very active in their attacks upon American institutions and our system of government. It is also stated that these Communists "are apparently proud of taking their orders from Moscow and giving allegiance to the Red Flag of the Soviet Union of Russia."

Briefly, the Communist program is to abolish all so-called capitalistic government and bring the whole world under the domination of Russia; to confiscate and take over all property by the state; to establish race equality, social and otherwise; to abolish all forms of religion.

There are no less than 11 daily and 18 weekly Communist newspapers in the United States, nearly all printed in foreign languages, which vigorously advocate this program, besides 12 Communists publications not entered as second class mail matter. In addition, tons of pamphlets and other Communist literature are circulated each year.

Two organizations for propaganda work among school children are maintained, called the Young Communist League and the Young Pioneers of America. A total of more than 60 Communist organizations operating in the United States are listed by the Fish committee.

One significant statement by the committee, which really sums up the case, is as follows: "In reality, Communism is a mortal enemy within our country, aiming to destroy our republican form of government, guaranteed by the Constitution, to cause civil war and bring about revolution in the United States."

The efforts of the American Federation of Labor in its fight against Communism are highly praised by the committee. The Federation's strong stand has kept the Reds from making much headway among native-born American workers.

Beautiful Floral Gardens

HOWARD BROTHERS FLORISTS

One of the outstanding businesses of Chilton County is the Howard Brothers Floral Gardens at Thorsby. The four large hot houses contain 10,000 carnation plants and the unusually large blossoms in full bloom make an exquisite picture. Howard Bros. have a wholesale and retail business, and these handsome flowers are shipped over a large portion of the South. So expert are the Messrs. Howard in the handling of these flowers that even when being sent to distant states they arrive at their destination in splendid condition. They also specialize in fine gladiola and dahlia bulbs, pot plants and bedding plants. One of the most interesting features of their work is the handsome funeral designs made by Howard Bros. In their business they supply a long felt need in their community, as well as in the entire county and state.

The owners and operators of the business are brothers, Fred Howard and C. S. Howard. They were born and reared in Monitowoc, Mich., a beautiful city on Lake Michigan. They came south in 1900, and settled in Thorsby. They were the pioneer strawberry growers and shippers of this section and through their efforts the growth of strawberries has become a thriving business over a large portion of the county.

In 1906 Messrs. Howard engaged in the field culture of carnations and in 1908 they built the first hot house and have since added three other hot houses

Chilton County is indebted to them not only through their leadership in the agriculture of this section, but also because they represent two of the finest citizens in the county

People from many sections visit Howard Brothers Floral Gardens and pronounce them a thing of beauty and interest.

BOY SCOUTS TAUGHT HOW TO BECOME MEN OF CHARACTER

Duty To God, Help Other People, Keep Physically Strong, Are Cardinal Principles Taught

Along with the wonderful progress in Clanton and Chilton County for the past few years, in farming, dairying, and other industries, is the progress in the development of its youth in character and citizenship. It was through the realization that the future of any community depends upon the training of the boys of today who are the men of tomorrow, that the Clanton and Lay Dam Councils, Boy Scouts of America, was organized.

Character development is the real objective of the Boy Scout movement. Every step in the Scout program is but a means to that end. The various tests and the variety and interests of the many activities are intended to hold the interest of the boy who becomes a Scout and to educate him in the manly art of the craft. This character manifests development itself in health, efficiency, loyalty, patriotism and good citizenship.

Scout Oath

Every Scout takes an oath to follow three cardinal rules, as follows

To do my duty to God and country and to obey the Scout Law.

To help other people at all times.

To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight

In addition to these the Scout law code embraces the following: trustworthiness, loyalty, helpfulness, friendliness, thrift, bravery, cleanliness, and reverence. These ideals are drilled into the boys during the years when his mind is open and impressionable, imbuing in him the traits of character that make him a good citizen.

Last year the Kiwanis Club of Clanton adopted as one of its projects the sponsoring of a Boy Scout organization in the Clanton district. A special committee composed of members of the Kiwanis Club set to work on Boy Scout organization and a Troop was organized. On September 1st last year 22 members were registered. The first 22 members registered were as follows: U. L. Baker, Hal D. Broadhead, Quinton A. Boockholdt, Norman E Childs, Edward Childs, Wesley Danforth, John S. Ezell, Joe Hall Johnson, Carl Jones, Lawrence F. Gerald, Jr., Joe W. Moore, John Thomas Marler, Phillip Nelson, Arnold Poe, Donald Poe, Grady Reynolds, Jr., Morgan Reynolds, Ted Reynolds, Sidney Reynolds, Dan C. Smith and Herbert Neighbors.

The Clanton Troop received its Charter in October. Since then the following boys have been added to the Troop: L. D. Easterling, Wilson Maddox, Curtis Wyatt, John McNair, James C. Connell, Owtn Deal, Irby Wood, Eugene Wilkerson, Thomas Marcus, Hays Marcus, Julius Martin, Horace Vincent, Searcy Martin, and Bobby Powers.

The Scout Troop Committee is composed of C. E. Stapp, Chairman, S. J Ezell, Mack Wyatt, John Page, Sam Powers and L. C. Warr. John Hollis is responsible for the supervision of camping.

Since receiving Charter in the Clanton Club, a troop has been organized at Lay Dam with Sam Powers, Scoutmaster, director in charge. In addition to these two troops there is a troop of Cub Scouts, that is, boys under 12 years of age, at Mitchell Dam. The leader for the boys at Mitchell Dam is Mr Doyle McRae

The boys are very much interested in Scout work in the district and it is hoped that several new troops will be be organized. The Boy Scouts are planning on taking over the City of Clanton for a day during the summer. This movement inaugurated by this organization several years ago, has become quite popular throughout the United States and is in keeping with the wonderful work of the organization. The Boy Scouts are always interested in the welfare of their town and community. When called upon they are ready to do their good deed daily." They may be found assisting in all social, civic, and religious movements. In making Clanton and Chilton County the place it should be no better movement could be fostered than that of the Boy Scouts. Let's get behind these boys, help them and Boost them, because they surely help and Boost Clanton and Chilton County. The Scouts are under the supervision of John Mullins, Scoutmaster

Rather Unusual

Miss Florence Kelly of Chicago presented in court a written list of 32 epithets which Mrs. R. A. Voorhies had applied to her in a quarrel.

Just as he was landing his thirteenth fish, Armand Leveille, of Metheum, Mass., was arrested by a game warden.

Theodore G. Sherwood of Los Angeles was given a room without bath in jail after making the following remak: "I'll be hornswaggled if anyone can make me buy a license to take a bath in my own home."

Frank Bowers and Theodore Palmquist of Ashland, Wis., told a postal inspector they had burned $21,000 in currency from a mail pouch because the sight of so much money "gave us a scare."

When asked if he were a descendent of Ponce de Leon, R[illegible] Leon of Le Panto, Ark., replied: "The difference between us is: Ponce de Leon was in search of the 'Fountain of Youth' while I'm looking for the staff of life."

J. MELL MARTIN PROVIDES COMPLETE MORTUARY FACILITIES

Two Large Henney Combination Cars Are Used By Firm—Day And Night Service Given

One of the largest, most modern and completely equipped Mortuary establishments in this section is that of J. Mell Martin, funeral director of Clanton. This business is housed in a large brick building on 7th Street, fitted up especially for the firm with the finest of fixtures, and equipment. Service in time of sorrow or misfortune is weighed in finer scales than ordinary relations which exist in the affairs of people. At such times, promptness, courtesy and sympathy weigh more heavily than they do under normal conditions. Clanton and Chilton County people, therefore, are especially fortunate in having a concern like Martin's with its first class equipment, trained personnel and its additional facilities for prompt, comfortable ambulance service to sick and wounded.

Two big Henney Combination cars are used by the firm, and day and night service is given. Mr. Martin is an experienced funeral director, and the equipment in this respect is unsurpassed. A large and complete stock of metal and wood caskets, in all sizes and grades, including the (Clark) Steel Vaults, is carried at all times, as well as a complete line of suits and dresses, also casket hardware.

J. Mell Martin, owner of this firm and known and valued as one of the progressive citizens and representative business men of Clanton, was born in Coosa County, Alabama, January 24, 1884, and is a son of Rev. Darius S. and Aurabell (Nolen) Martin.

Mr. Martin attended the schools of his native county until he had attained to the age of twenty years, and in the meanwhile he was employed as a mercantile clerk during the summer vacation periods. After leaving school he was employed as clerk in a general store in Coosa County eight years, and he then engaged in the grocery and funeral business in an independent way at Equality, Coosa County. In 1921 he sold the grocery department of his business and removed his funeral parlor to Clanton, where he has since conducted a representative business in this line and where he has gained an inviolable place in the confidence and esteem of the community. Through his years of faithful, sympathetic service to the people of this section, Mr. Martin has made thousands of friends throughout this part of the state, and is one of Chilton County's most unusually beloved citizens. He is a Knight Templar and Shriner Mason, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Woodmen of the World. He is an active member of the Baptist church of Clanton, and is President of the Kiwanis Club.

In September, 1905, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Martin and Miss Mary Wilbanks, daughter of Geo. T. and Nettie (Bailey) Wilbanks. Mr. and Mrs. Martin have four children, Mrs. Latham Ellis of Birmingham, Samuel, Leroy and James Carl. Samuel is at present attending the Cincinnati College of Embalming, Cincinnati, Ohio.

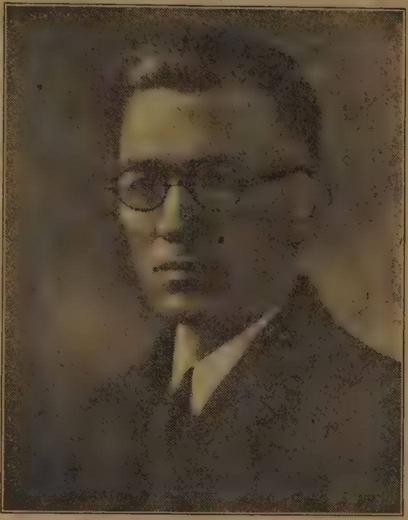
Supt. Of Mitchell Dam



J. L. HOLLIS

The growth and progress of Clanton and Chilton County has been rapid principally because of the interest shown by its citizens. One of the outstanding citizens of the county and one whose progressiveness is revealed after a short acquaintance is J. L. Hollis, Superintendent of the Hydro Electric plant of the Alabama Power Company at Mitchell Dam.

Mr. Hollis was born and reared at Lincoln, Talladega County, Alabama. He received his education in the elementary schools of Talladega County, and higher education in the schools of this State. In 1911, Mr. Hollis entered the service of the United States Government in the Engineering department and remained there until 1915. The following year found him with the Gulf States Steel Company and after three years with this organization, he became a member of the Golden Foundry and Machine Company. In 1921 Mr. Hollis joined the forces of the Dixie Construction Company at Mitchell Dam.

Mr. Hollis was engaged in the construction of Mitchell Dam and this gigantic structure stands as one of the most outstanding achievements of engineering in the country. In 1923 he entered the employ of the Alabama Power Company and upon completion of Mitchell Dam he entered the Service of the Production Department then as a mechanic. His work was such that promotion came rapidly, finally reaching the post of Assistant Superintendent, and finally Superintendent.

The high esteem in which Mr. Hollis is held by his company is well exemplified by a clipping from "Powergrams," Alabama Power Company's own newspaper, "John L. Hollis, Superintendent at Mitchell Dam, has been placed in full charge of the Mitchell Hydro-Electric plant since J. U. Benziger, Superintendent of the Coosa River Plants, has resigned to take up work with Georgia Power Company.

"Mr. Hollis has moved steadily in the organization since he began work with the Dixie Construction Company on Mitchell Dam on Nov. 14, 1921. John Hollis' record with the company is a tribute to his "sticktoitness." He is a man of great mechanical skill and in handling successfully the man problems incident to his various positions, he has demonstrated dependability under all conditions. Excellent service while on loan to affiliated company is also to his credit. While he is a man of few words, he has a very warm nature, which is so well exemplified in his family life."

Mr. Hollis is a member of the Kiwanis Club and First Baptist church of Clanton. He takes an active part in all activities of Clanton and Mitchell Dam. He is vitally interested in the Boy and Girl Scouts of Mitchell Dam.

ALABAMA POWER CO. FURNISHES POWER FOR FARMERS OF STATE

Survey Of Power Company Rural Division Reveals Use Of Electric Power On Farms Shows Steady Increase

With over 22,000 farms, or nearly one-tenth of the farms in Alabama now being served from the rural power lines of Alabama Power Company, the use of electricity on farms is now beginning to have a major effect upon Alabama agriculture, a recent survey of the Power Company's Rural Division reveals.

Started in 1924 as an experiment in cooperation with the Alabama Experiment Station and Alabama Polytechnic Institute, the extension of electric service to rural communities has been continued as a part of Alabama Power Company's development program and is now one of its major activities.

The growth of rural electrification in Alabama has been little short of phenomenal, but its growth and present major effect upon agriculture in Alabama would not have been possible without the cooperation with the Power Company of farmers, agricultural workers and equipment dealers thruout the state.

On January 1st, 1924, the Power Company had in operation 14 rural lines serving 240 rural customers; and on January 1, 1931, the status of rural electric development was as follows: rural lines in operation 336, with a mileage of lines of 1,282, serving 5,256 customers; rural lines authorized and under construction, 34, totaling 180 miles, and 530 customers; rural lines that were transferred to urban classification, 50, covering 213 miles, and serving 3,353 customers; making a total of 450 lines covering 1,675 miles, and serving 9,140 customers.

Rural customers have been added during the six-year period at the average rate of 1,378 per year, or 115 per month, and rural lines were built at the average rate of 254 miles per year, or 21 miles per month.

In addition to the customers served from its rural lines, the Power Company is serving approximately 13,120 customers in 143 small towns of less than 1,000 population each. These small towns are farming community centers, and the citizens are either farmers or supply merchants for the neighboring farms. Service to most of these towns has been provided in connection with the Company's rural electrification program, and are sources of power for future expansion of electric service to rural customers.

The Power Company is therefore, serving approximately 21,730 customers from rural lines and in small towns, which means the convenience of electric service for approximately 106,000 people as a result of the rural electric development. In addition, the Company's transmission and distribution system is so developed that practically every farm is within reach of electric service from a physical standpoint of providing service from existing distribution lines.

Of the rural customers served on January 1, 1930, 7,410 were farms, each farm meter being designated by the Company as a customer. According to a survey made by the Company, there is an average of two tenants or share croppers per farm customer that are counted as separate farms by the farm meter and in practically every instance the barns used by the entire farm are lighted. On this basis electric service is being provided to about 22,000 farms in the company's territory.

A survey of 3,031 typical rural power customers indicates that in addition to lights, electricity is serving many purposes. On the basis of this survey, 700 rural customers are using electric ranges, 3,800 are using irons, 950 are using water pumps, 600 are using electric refrigerators in their homes, 575 are using radios, with smaller appliances, such as toasters, percolators, sewing machines, churns, fans, etc., in about the same proportion.

By taking into consideration that an average of 253 hours less labor per year is required to cook on an electric range than on a wood stove; that an automatic water supply system in the home saves an average of 305 hours of labor per year in addition to supplying water in abundant quantities and under pressure; that an electric churn saves 20 minutes of labor per day, or about 120 hours per year; and the many other equally effective labor saving uses of electricity, we realize the value of electricity in not only making the rural home more attractive and convenient, but also as a great factor in reducing the labor and drudgery in farm home making, which is one of the most vital and important farm problems.

The uses of electricity for performing farm operations is continually increasing and many farmers are using electricity to reduce their operating cost and increase their net incomes.

A number of truck growers have for several years used electric lights to trap the moth that produces the tomato fruit worm. In one year the use of these lights by one faremr resulted in a saving of about $1,200 of tomatoes. This customer also uses an electric motor to pump water for irrigating his truck patch—thereby making it practical to use heavy applications of fertilizer and also eliminating the risk of crop failure due to lack of rain.

About 100 dairymen served by the Power Company have installed electrically operated refrigerating equipment. Its use is resulting in an average saving of about $400 per year per dairy or a total saving of about $40,000 per year to the 100 dairymen, comparing the cost of electricity, plus interest and depreciation on the equipment, with the former cost of ice.

Poultrymen are using electric lights to increase winter egg production; and electric brooders, incubators and feed grinders satisfactorily to reduce their operating costs.

Many farmers are using electric refrigerators to store milk, butter, fruits and vegetables which have been going to waste on the farm.

The increased uses of electricity are well illustrated in the fact that in 1924 the rural customers on the Company's system used an average of 383 kilowatt-hours per year and at the end of 1929 rural customers were using an average of 840 kilowatt-hours per year. This increase was obtained even with the addition of an average of 126 new customers per month. At the end of 1929 rural customers that had been using electricity five years or more were using electricity at the rate of 993 kilowatt-hours per year.

In addition to the uses of electricity by farm and residential customers on rural lines during the 1929 ginning season, there were 56 gins on the Company's rural lines operated with electric power. The operation of these gins, as well as grist mills, small ice plants and other rural community enterprises, were a great convenience to the people and a source of revenue to the communities.

As the Company's rural lines are expanded, the number of customers per mile line is decreasing. However, there are a sufficient number of practical and satisfactory uses of electricity on the farm and in the farm home to make it possible for electric service to be generally available to the farmer of this state. This is borne out by the fact that on January 1, 1925, the Company's rural lines had an average annual consumption of 5,345 kilowatt-hours per mile of line. This had increased by January 1, 1931, to a yearly consumption of 5,775 kilowatt-hours per mile.

A staff of six agricultural engineers of the Power Company devote their entire efforts to assisting farm customers with their problems pertaining to the use of electricity and in assisting other farmers in their efforts to get electric service. With the continued cooperation of the farmers, agricultural workers and equipment dealers of Alabama, the Power Company feels confident that the development will continue to expand more rapidly each year of this activity's existence.

An old rule followed by many beekeepers who winter their bees in cellars is to take them out when the soft maples are in bloom. This is a good rule in localities where these trees grow, say apiculturists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Watch the weather reports closely and choose a time when a "high-pressure" area is just passing and a "low-pressure" area is approaching. At such a time the weather will be cool so the bees will not fly, and with a "low-pressure" area approaching it will soon be warmer so the bees can make a flight. Bees in good condition rarely fly unless the outside temperature is as high as 60 degrees. F.

POSTAL RECEIPTS REFLECT STEADY GROWTH OF CITY

Clanton Post Office Serves About 8,500 Regular Patrons, Has Seven Heavily Patronized Rural Delivery Routes And One Free Delivery Route To Business And Residential Section of City

Postoffices, being common to every town and village in our country, makes it rather hard to say anything about a postoffice that would be really interesting to the reading public. Many things we enjoy are so common to us that we in reality never attach to them any importance, but if left without them, we should suffer much inconvenience. Among these are the postoffices and the services they render to the general public. Postoffices are institutions for serving the public, and are owned and operated by the United States Government, and are operated at a loss by the Government for its citizens. It is one of the few institutions which the citizens get more out of than they put into it

Information gathered from fairly reliable sources reveal the information that for the past three quarters of a century the postal service at Clanton, Ala. has had smooth sailing. It is meant by this that there have been no upheavels or disturbances. Of this the patronage of the office can and does speak with much pride

During the period above mentioned it is reviewed that Clanton has been favored with the following named citizens, in order, as postmasters and acting postmasters: As postmasters, J. B Downs, Felix O. Dudley, Barney Roberts, J. E. Robinson, and as acting postmasters, G. F. Harris, G. C. Harris N. A. Kicker, J. M. Parrish, and J. J. Pickens. These gentlemen without exception, reflected great credit on the service while engaged therein

The rural service from Clanton office is unexcelled by any rural service anywhere. Rural delivery service now covers the area of a circle with a radius of 30 miles, and it is believed that this area is covered as nearly perfectly as any country from an office anywhere. Hundreds of patrons who ten years ago were quite a long distance from a rural free delivery route now have door service. This is due to general improvements and especially in the roads of the country, making it possible to have rural service extended to reach many, many more than could be reached before. It is not meant that the service is complete; it is hoped that every patron claiming Clanton as his postoffice can some day be so served by the service from this office that he can enjoy a delivery of mail at his door every working day of the year.

Clanton office has extending therefrom, seven heavily patronized rural delivery routes; one carrier serves the village, making two deliveries each day in the business section of the town, and one delivery each day in the residential section. Each rural route serves an average of more than 900 patrons. And besides, one carrier serves a patronage of fifty families at Lay Dam, one of the larger hydro electric plants in the South.

The entire number of people receiving mail through Clanton office numbers approximately 8,500. The population, as revealed by the last census, of Clanton and the surrounding territory steadily increase. This, it is thought, is due to the favorable situation of the town, its good farming land, and the recent interest in and success made with truck farming and particularly, berry growing.

Clanton postoffice was advanced to 2nd class in the summer of 1923. Up until that time the office was taken care of by the postmaster and one helper. After the office was advanced, one substitute clerk additional was given, and the person serving as helper at the time the office was advanced was made a classified employee. This employee remains in the service at this time. Since the office was made 2nd class, there have been few changes in the personnel of the force at said office. One person resigned as village letter carrier, one substitute clerk resigned, and one carrier's death mark the only changes since the office has been in the 2nd class.

The amount of mail handled at the office has steadily increased for the past several years. One carrier now takes from the office for one delivery as much mail as was taken out by half a dozen carriers 8 or 10 years ago. Uncle Sam now carries by mail almost any article of merchandise, and if articles passing through the mails are properly packed, wrapped and addressed, very few are ever lost.

The receipts of the office 10 years ago were less than 50 per cent of the receipts of the office at this time, and receipts continue to grow.

Besides handling mail for 8,500 patrons there are other aspects of the service carried on which those who have not had occasion to learn may not know is done. Among these we mention money order business, registry business and Postal Savings. Each of these requiring the utmost care and attention daily to see that records pertaining to each are properly kept. These with other duties of the office at Clanton which are handled by the postmaster, one regular clerk, and one substitute clerk, reveal the information that the force inside the office, as well as those serving as carriers, must give diligence to see that his part of the service is done. This means work. It is not meant or intimated by this that anyone in the work here is complaining. This is said only complimentary of the patronage being so good and co-operating so well with the working force of the office to make it possible for this to be done

Clanton postoffice is now situated in as good quarters as any office of its size in Central Alabama; the employees of the office will do anything in keeping with the law to assist any patron of the office. Realizing at all times that to serve the public is their duty, the employees at the post office solicit the help and suggestion of all concerned

"Let's all work together for all the good we can, to all we can, in all the ways we can, just as long as we can," is the slogan of the entire force at the Clanton postoffice

W. M. Bean is postmaster, having served two terms: L. P. Bean is regular Clerk, R. R. Sutley is Sub Clerk, Claude M. Baker is village carrier. The rural delivery department is in charge of G. F. Harris, Route 1; J. D. Armstrong, Route 2; G. C. Harris, Route 3; E. W. Miller, Route 4; J. J. Mims, Route 5; D. D. Easterling, Route 6; and B. J. Sessions, Route 7

Choosing a name for the baby has been the subject of spirited controversy in many otherwise well regulated families, but seldom has there been keener competition over naming a thoroughfare than exists with respect to a new avenue to be opened in Washington, D. C.

Several states are claimants for the honor, among them Louisiana, whose viewpoint is ably set forth by Mrs. James J. McLoughlin in the Washington Post who contends for recognition of the vast territory known as the Louisiana purchase and the intrepid French explorers and administrators who paved the way for its development—La Salle, Marquette, Biènville, Iberville and others, including Louis XIV, "the grand monarch," for whom the territory was named.

She also feels that it would be a deserved tribute to Lafayatte, Rochambeau, L'Enfant and their French compatriots of Revolutionary fame. It was Major L'Enfant who, at the request of Washington, surveyed and laid out our capital city, which resembles his native Paris in outline.

In view of all this, Mrs. McLoughlin pertinently asks: "What could be more feasible than that Washington should have a fine boulevard representative of what France has done for our land?" And who can say that her contention is not well founded?

Thompson, owner, in 1926, has expanded enormously and succeeded in serving the needs of a progressive city and county, in a progressive manner.

In five years the laundry has increased its volume of business seven-fold, which is indicative of Clanton's and Chilton County's substantial growth since the plant first opened its doors to the community, and the efficient service the laundry has rendered.

While a large volume of laundrying of all kinds has been handled during the five years Mr. Thompson has started operations, marked increases have been noted in the dry cleaning branch of the business. Only experts are employed in handling this important part of the industry, under the supervision of Mr. Thompson, who has devoted his entire life to the laundry and dry cleaning business.

The Clanton Laundry and Cleaning Company handles their work in a modern building 40 feet wide and 90 feet long. The plant is sanitary in every respect and in keeping with the appearance of the business. Each employee wears a freshly laundered uniform of blue and white. The laundry offers a variety of services, family wash family finish, rough dry, flat work and damp wash.

The books of the Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Company reveal hundreds of customers in all parts of this section who patronize it for dry cleaning of their garments and who obtain laundry service there.

The company personnel comprises 12 employees. Two auto trucks are employed and the company serves its customers within a radius of 35 miles from Clanton. Miss Lillian Thompson, sister of Mr. Thompson, is in charge of the office. L. E. Gentry and Minzer Yawn are in charge of operating the trucks.

"We Serve to Serve Again" is the slogan of this rapidly growing industry.

The dry cleaning department specializes in all types of silks, wools, furs, felt hats, draperies, etc. There are over 400 articles in the home that can and should be dry cleaned. This is the only dry cleaning plant between Birmingham and Montgomery.

Woco-Pep Company Serves Scores of Gasoline Dealers In Section

Handles More Than 600,000 Gallons A Year And Operates A Fleet Of Gasoline Trucks

Supplying upward of 50 dealers in Clanton and adjoining territory with more than 600,00 gallons of gasoline and oils a year, the Woco-Pep Company of Clanton, wholesalers, has risen to the upper rung of the industrial ladder in Central Alabama since it officially opened its plant here for business in January, 1926.

The company's products, Woco-Pep gasoline, Tiolene and Nulube motor oils, are conveyed from the big plant by means of 2 huge automobile trucks especially designed for transporting fuel. In addition to the many dealers who buy from the Woco-Pep Company, numerous farmers in this state are yearly swelling the volume of business.

A supply of 100,000 gallons of gasoline is stored in huge tanks in a separate plant, and the company maintains its private siding on the tracks of the L & N Railroad line to expedite shipment. The company has created a large market in Central Alabama for its Tiolene and Nulube motor oils, said to be among the highest grade motor oils produced in the United States.

The plant of the Woco-Pep Company is located on 2 acres of land, which affords ample facilities for the storing of oils and gasoline. The gasoline and oils are sold and delivered to the dealers' door, thus obviating unnecessary delays that are often incurred in railroad transportation. This is another step forward in the service the company is constantly rendering its many customers over a radius of more than 35 miles from Clanton.

The office of the Woco-Pep Company is located in the Woco-Pep Service Station at the corner of 6th St. and 2nd Ave. Mr. R. J. Sumner is manager and under his supervision the company has shown a steady increase each year.

MUSIC STUDY CLUB OF CLANTON IS WIDE AWAKE ORGANIZATION

One of the outstanding land marks of Clanton is "The Study Club," composed of some of Clanton's most genial, active and wide-awake women, whose loyalty of membership can not be too highly commended.

Mrs. Harvey Chandler, of beloved memory, and Mrs. Earl Gowan, were the moving factors in the organization of the club, which held its initial meeting at the home of Mrs. Barney Roberts in February, 1918, with the following charter members: Mesdames A. H. Bowen, F. B. Collier, H. F. Chandler, L. J. Duncan, J. F. Goble, L. F. Gerald, Earl Gowan, J. P. Hayes, Arthur Johnson, Hugh Jones, M. F. Jones, N. S. Johnson, S. E. Johnson, E. C. Maze, T. C. McSwain, H. C. McDonald, J. O. Middleton, J. J. Pickens, T. H. Neighbors, L. C. Reynolds, H. G. Reynolds, B. M. Roberts, B. G. Smith, W. P. Splawn, E. E. Stewart, A. C. Wade, P. D. Wilson, J. M. VanDerveer, Mrs. J. P. VanDerveer, Jr., and Miss Luline Harper. The officers as elected were Mrs. Earl Gowan, President; Mrs. W. P. Splawn, vice president, Mrs. B. M. Roberts, secretary; Mrs. A. C. Wade, field secretary; Mrs. T. C. McSwain, treasurer.

The purpose of the club is signified in its name, and in thise lines on the fly leaf of its first year book:

"A meeting ground for those of purpose great and broad and strong,
Whose aim is in the stars; who ever long
To make the patient listening world respond
With sweeter music, freer tones,
A place where kindly lifting words are said,
And kindlier deeds are done, where hearts are fed.
Whose wealth of brain for poverty atones;
Where hand grasps hand, and soul finds touch with soul."

This bespeaks for the life of the organization, and is the underlying charm in furthering its progress.

Activities of the club have been confined to no one channel, though broader culture, through study has always been the prime importance of the club's existence, yet its life has been filled with social, educational, benevolent, and memorial projects, through all of which has prevailed a spirit of cooperation which has made it all a real pleasure.

A happy coincidence is that at the present writing Mrs. Earl Gowan is again ably serving the club as President, and under the capable leadership of this charming woman, who has meant so much to the club's splendid functioning, we hope to become an indispensable asset in the calendar of "Women's Clubs."

Pleasant Places

When he was hardly more than a boy my friend Jim Derieux, one of the editors of the American Magazine, was secretary to the governor of South Carolina.

There was a brilliant young chap in the state administration who at the age of twenty-six held the office of assistant comptroller He had not intended to run for the comptrollership, but a political faction organized to head him off. This made him mad, and so he did run and was elected.

After holding office for only six months he asked for an interview with the governor.

"What's on your mind?" asked Jim.

"I am going to resign."

"Why?"

"I'll tell you presently"

They went in to the governor's private room, and the young official tendered his resignation. The governor was amazed.

What's the matter?" he exclaimed. "I thought you were sitting pretty."

"I am," said the young man. "That's just the trouble."

"But I don't understand."

"Well, Governor, you know this office that I hold is a mighty pleasant place. I am twenty-seven years old, and it's a very pleasant place indeed. I am afraid of it."

He was afraid he would settle down and become too contented. Afraid that, without hard problems to tackle and stern duties to conquer, he would get flabby and soft. Afraid that at forty he would wake up to find himself a lazy office holder with no ambition and no hope.

Nobody under fifty should be in too pleasant a place.

Robert Updegraff, the writer of business articles, uttered a profound business truth when he counseled: "Never complain about your troubles. They are responsible for the greater part of your income."

Almost anyone can hold a job which presents no difficulties; hence such jobs pay small salaries. Men at the top are paid for their willingness to accept responsibility; for the problems that they tackle and the difficulties they lick.

King David wrote: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside still waters."

But when David wrote that he was a fugitve from Saul. He was fighting through the wilderness, pursued by enemies and wild beasts. The green pastures and still waters were all in his mind.

He never did reach an entirely pleasant place. Even when he became king his life was full of problems, disappointments and hard work. But his soul gave birth to songs that are among the finest of all the ages.

Supt. Of Power Plant

SAMUEL ROBERT POWERS

A man who has been a real factor in the progress and growth of Chilton County is Samuel Robert Powers who is superintendent of the Hydro Electric Plant at Lay Dam

Mr. Powers was born in Little Rock, Arkansas, August 8, 1889, and moved at an early age to Nashville, Tenn., where he attended the city schools. At the age of 15 he graduated from high school in Nashville and began serving his apprenticeship with the N. C. & St. Louis Railroad in that city. He remained in this work for eight years and in 1911 accepted a position with the Tennessee Central Railroad. The following year he became associated with the L. & N. Railroad in Birmingham. Finally it seemed that fate placed him in a position which was to lead ultimately to his life work. In the year of 1912 he became identified with the Alabama Power Company and he spent several interesting months in Gadsden where he was in charge of the steam pipe works for the Gadsden steam plant. Still deeply interested in his work with the Alabama Power Company another phase of the work seemed to beckon to him and he came to Lock 12 the latter part of 1912 in time to help in the construction of a gigantic project which when completed, he was later to become superintendent. The construction of Lock 12 required hundreds of workmen and two years of hard work to complete what is today Lay Dam, which because of its beauty and splendid engineering, attracts people from all over the world. It has even been viisted by a Japanese engineer sent over by the Japanese Government. It was on this job that Mr. Powers did some of his most constructive work as the head of all pipe work and assisting in the installation of the machinery of the, then Lock 12.

During his superintendency he has had the pleasure of putting on one of the greatest celebrations ever witnessed in the state when the dam was dedicated and named for Capt. William Patrick Lay.

Mr. Powers takes great interest in the affairs of Clanton as well as of Chilton County. He has been a member of the Kiwanis Club of Clanton since it was first organized. He is a Shriner and a member of the Alcazar Temple.

He married the lovely Miss Pearl McWherta of Martin, Tenn. Mr. and Mrs. Powers have two attractive children, Bobby, 11 years old, and Suan, 10 months of age.

When the plant was completed in 1915 Mr. Powers was made master mechanic of operations and after he had served in that capacity for five years he was made assistant superintendent under Mr. J. U Benziger.

In 1925 Mr. Powers was made superintendent.

J. W. E. GULLEDGE

Popular Confederate Veteran Tells Most Interesting Story Of War Days

By R. C. "Bob" Gore

One of the outstanding figures among the many distinguished soldiers who fought for the cause of the South in the War Between the States is Gen. J. W. E. Gulledge of Clanton, Ala., formerly commanding general, Fourth Brigade of the Alabama Division of the United Confederate Veterans.

It was the writer's privilege to attend the Confederate Reunion in Little Rock, Arkansas, which was also attended by Gen. Gulledge, in 1928, and many interesting reminescences of that gala occasion were brought back in our interview.

Gen. Gulledge is a typical representative of those grand old heroes who made the gamest and most wonderful fight for principles 'way back in the sixties that the world has ever witnessed. Although the years have rolled by and time has whitened his locks with the snows of many winters it has not lessened the luster of his fearless eyes nor banished the vim and pep that made him a volunteer soldier in that war that is famous in history, valor and chivalry.

It has been our pleasure to meet the distinguished Confederate soldier and hear him relate some of the thrilling incidents of the War Between the States, in which he took part and the patriotism, the sentiment and loyalty of this brave man who now looks back over 85 years of fruitful life with a keen sense of humor and a true and unprejudiced sense of values is nothing short of delightful.

Tells Interesting Story

"Tell us something about your life and career," we begged as the stalwart soldier of other days, keenly alive to our interest, divulged many interesting things.

"I am an Alabamian, born and bred," Gen. Gulledge began by saying, "and my birthplace was in Coosa County, the date being Sept. 18, 1846, and the place just 24 miles north of Wetumpka.

"I was reared on a farm in that county and obtained a common school education. At the age of 17 years I volunteered for the Army of the Confederacy and became a member of the Second Battalion of Hilliard's Legion, in the Tennessee Army, then located at Missionary Ridge. Later the legion was reorganized and became the Fifty-Ninth and Sixtieth Alabama Regiments of volunteers, the Fifty-Ninth being commanded by Col. Bolling Hall, of Montgomery. In this organization I was a member of Company K, of which company my brother, Capt. R. H. Gulledge, who died a few years since, was captain.

"In the early part of November, 1863, Gen. Longstreet was ordered to meet Gen. Burnside and his Yankee cohorts at Knoxville, Tenn. On Nov. 29, 1863, a rush by rail from Missionary Ridge to Knoxville. Gracie's Brigade, to which his company was attached, made an attack on Fort Lowden, and that was where I had my first experience of real war. From then on my experiences came thick and fast. Gen. Bragg's line have given way, Gen. Longstreet and his army were ordered on a long move, passing en route across East Tennessee by way of Rogersville, Morristown, Dandridge, at which place they met the Yankees again, but brushed them out of their way.

"Again at Bean Station the enemy appeared and a lively battle developed, but the 'Bluecoats' finally got enough and retired. They then continued their way, with nothing more serious than empty stomachs and sore feet, by Bristol, Tenn., to Lynchburg, Va., and on to Richmond, where they rested a few days. Orders carried them next to Drury's Bluff, and on March 12, 1864, they made an assault on an enemy fort four miles below the bluff, but were repulsed. On May 8, 1864, they joined battle with Gen. Sheridan in front of Richmond and defeated him."

On May 16, 1864, in an assault on the fortification of the enemy and when within 75 feet of their breastworks, Gen. Gulledge's leg was shot to pieces and he fell and for two hours or more he lay there in the mud, and finally, just before the "litter boys" came for him, another bullet shattered his arm. It required about four months for him to get on foot again, but don't forget that he is "right theer with the goods" now and just as ready as he was in the sixties to fight for his principles.

Gen. Gulledge came of fighting stock, his father having been an Englishman, and they are all fighters, and his mother, the daughter of Jacob Mitchell, a Scotch-Irish veteran, who carried his gun under George Washington for five continuous years in the Revolutionary War.

Sad And Harrowing Stories

Gen. Gulledge has many sad and harrowing memories of those dark days of the War Between the States to tell, and also many amusing incidents that serve to brighten the story. In those days an army had to move on foot; they had few railroads and no motor cars, trucks and busses. What rations and ammunition they used had to be hauled by wagons and roads were few and mud plentiful. A field battery then was composed of six cannons, smooth bore, and drawn by horses. Siege guns were heavier and were mounted on the breastworks. The soldiers were armed with muzzle loading cap and ball rifles and muskets—one shot and load. Most of these guns had crude bayonets that could be attached when in close quarters.

"As for rations," said Gen. Gulledge, "the men had to carry them in haversacks and eat when they could. Tents were few and far between, and cold or hot, rain or shine, the ground was often their bed and the skies or clouds their covering. There was no one to pass hot coffee and lunches around on the battle line. No cozy ambulances to hurry the wounded to a snug field hospital equipped with everything required for good service and handled by a corps of the best physicians and surgeons that money could hire. Nothing like that. In those days it was war with all of its horrors and only a loving line now and then from home to cheer one. War was not an up-to-date science then, but a knock-down-and drag-out, fist and skull fight with all the frills left off."

Draws Comparisons On War

Gen. Gulledge in talking of the late war makes many striking comparisons between the methods of war now and then. He says that in the days when he was in war science had not devised so many ways to kill, nor such high class and classic modes of destruction.

"In those days the boys went to the front by long, tedious and tiresome tramps, now they load up in fine motor driven vehicles, go on a joy ride and land on the firing line, with a line of motor driven kitchens bringing up the rear with plenty of hot coffee and eats," said the general.

"In our war you had to shoot 'em or stick 'em to kill 'em. Now you bomb 'em from above and below, gas 'em and so on. They used to shoot them by hand, now they shoot them by machinery or blight them electrically. We had cannons that would throw a solid shot or shell maybe two miles. Now they have guns that throw their shells 75 miles. As two is to 75, so is the war game then and now."

Believes In Reunions

As general commander of the Fourth Brigade of the Alabama division of tht United Confederate Veterans, Gen. Gulledge devoted the best that was in him to bring peace and happiness to all of his aged comrades who are still on this side of the "Great Divide." In his work he has found that the women are doing more today for the old veterans than all other influences combined, and his heart overflows with gratitude to them, every one for their wonderful cooperation.

"I am opposed to any plan that can be devised to abolish the reunions. They furnish the one bright spot that each old veteran can look forward to from year to year. It is to us what Christmas is to a child," said the white-haired veteran.

After completing his education, Gen. Gulledge began teaching school and taught for 30 years, with great satisfaction to himself and patrons, having taught more than 2,000 children, young men and girls.

He has an enviable official record, having served as chief deputy sheriff in Coosa County for four years; also as chief deputy for Chilton County for three years, as committing magistrate of Chilton County for four terms with but few reversals, and as chairman of the county board of registrars of Chilton County for two terms.

The new location, corner Main and Seventh Streets, was selected and has been known as UPCHURCH DRUG COMPANY till this day.

It is essentially and primarily a drug store and is known from the Florida line to Tennessee along the main highway as "A City Drug Store in the Country." Travelers come to the store to see about it. HOW TO FIGHT THE FLU

Plain common sense is the main ingredient of advice offered by Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming of the U. S. Health Service for the treatment and prevention of influenza, which has assumed the proportions of a mild epidemic in many parts of the country.

He recommends plenty of sleep and rest; simple diet, with large amounts of water, fruit juices, milk and hot soups; warm clothing; avoidance of contact with others who have colds; keeping in the open air as much as possible, and avoiding the use of alcohol and stimulants of all sorts.

Most of the surgeon general's recommendations are merely sound rules of health which might well be observed at any time, particularly in winter. He also advises against the use of any so-called preventives, such as sera, vaccines and other advertised nostrums, which seem to have no value and may be harmful in this disease. A doctor's care and common sense health rules are the only proper treatment.

Avoidance of alcohol and stimulants of all kinds should include elimination of the most common of all, tea and coffee. This advice is consistent with the rest of the national health officer's suggestions for building up the vital reserve power of the individual.

Public health services perform one of their most valuable functions by pointing out to the public that there is no royal road to health, only the road we build by schooling ourselves to follow the laws of nature, which are available to all of us.

International Sunday School Lesson
JESUS, FRIEND OF SINNERS
Luke 7:36-50
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Again the entire chapter should be read. Remember that we are studying the entire life of Christ on earth and not just a few incidents thereform. More miracles are performed. The faith of the Centurion was commended when that man besought Jesus to heal His servant from the distance by merely giving the word. Raising a dead body is no greater problem than any other kind of healing, as is evidenced when the widow of Nain receives her son again. Then note the incident when John the Baptist sends messengers from his prison and Jesus calling attention to the works and preaching which are common report.

The Pharisee who invited Jesus to his home evidently did it that he might observe this Nazarene more closely. He did not say "Come" for Jesus' sake. There may have been food enough but the common courtesy of washing s from the feet was ommitted, thou that was the work of a slave or lowly servant. A woman who had made her living as a common prostitute rejoices at the opportunity of expressing her joy in the salvation which had come to her when the Pharisee-host condemns her soul, through His teachings. Both Jesus and the woman a deep lesson is given by a parable story about two debtors. The forgiven sinner was therein exalted above the rude Pharisee The woman was encouraged to make a new start in life, no matter what her forgiven past had been. The Golden Text explains the meaning of it all: "Faithful is the saying, and worthy of all acceptation that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." Timothy 1:15.

Our Dreams About To Be Realized

The South has always been a land of promise. But to-day it is a land of activities and development. It has lacked only the Magic touch of genius to bring its possibilities into the fullness of realization.

Alabama, in the heart of the South, with its unlimited resources, has made greater advancement within the past few years, in our opinion, than any other State in the Union.

It has seen the dawn of a New Day. It stands upon the threshold of one of the greatest developments and consequently the greatest prosperity that any section has ever known.

Its soil is the most responsive in the world. It is now producing 5 bales of cotton where one was formerly grown. It has increased in the production of other commodities more than three hundred percent. It is producing billions of dollars in steel, coal, lumber and many other products, yet its vast resources have scarcely been disturbed.

Chilton County, Alabama, of which Clanton is the Capitol, is one of the Most Progressive Counties in the State of Alabama. It has 33,000 thrifty and progressive people who are taking advantage of every opportunity afforded for advancement and development.

Its Agriculture is imbued with New Life. Diversification is beginning to bear fruit. It has been preached and urged for years without even a conception of its possibilities. Those who urged it little dreamed of the extent of its possibilities.

This territory is destined to be one of the Chief Sources of dairy supplies for the Nation. Already it has added thousands to bank accounts, and is rapidly placing on a Cash basis the farmer who until a few years ago was dependent entirely on credits.

The farm house is taking on a New atmosphere. Drudgery is becoming a thing of the past. The charm of farm life is about to be restored to its former prestige.

There is no Cloud to cast a shadow over the County to-day. Opportunity beckons on every hand. The County is on the verge of a great economic awakening. Dreams are about to be realized. Hopes of half a century are coming to pass.

Our people are a hardy race. They come of pioneer stock. They have been strong in prosperity. They will not weaken in days of adversity.

They will use wisely the blessings that come to them from the hands of a generous Providence. They know the source of the gifts that have been laid at their doors.

With the instruments at their command they will help fashion a Country that will make mankind their debtors.

Yours for Service and Prosperity,
BILLY SMITH, Editor.

One Of Clanton's Prominent Families

The above photograph is that of J. P. Lawrence, manager of the Standard Oil Co., of Clanton, and family. Mr. Lawrence was born in Henry County, Georgia. His family moved to Perry County, Alabama, when Mr. Lawrence was only one year of age. One year later his family moved to Bibb County, Alabama, where he was reared and received his education.

After leaving school in early life he entered upon his business career at the age of sixteen. His advancement in business life has been steady from his earliest young manhood. He has had the confidence and esteem of all those with whom he has been associated in business life. Mr. Lawrence was very successful in his private business endeavors in Clanton. He was in the mercantile business for quite a number of years. Upon coming to Clanton 14 years ago he entered the auto business, which he conducted for eight years. He is now one of the valued employees of the Standard Oil Company, with his office in the Mullins Building. Since his residence in the city of Clanton he has taken a leading part in all the social, religious, civic and business activities, which has characterized him as a man whom any community would be proud to have in their midst. Mr. Lawrence has taken a great interest particularly in the growth, advancement and prosperity of the City of Clanton. He was for a number of years a member of the City Council and while serving in this capacity, in cooperation with the other members of the board, was responsible for many improvements in the town. One of the outstanding accomplishments was the paving of the city streets and laying of sidewalks.

Mr. Lawrence was married to Miss Carrie Goodyer in August, 1910, of Riderville, Alabama. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence are blessed with eight children. Their home life is beautiful and happy. We are certainly glad, and take pride in mentioning these facts, because it is from homes of this character that our future men and women are to come to rule the destiny of our nation. We are proud of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence.

Merchant

M. LANDE

Mr. M. Lande is one of Clanton's leading merchants. He owns and operates The Leader, one of Clanton's leading department stores, carrying a complete stock of dry goods, notions, shoes and ready-to-wear.

Mr. Lande was born in Perrin, Illinois and moved to Nashville, Tenn., in his early boyhood. He was reared in Nashville and educated in the schools of that city. He was engaged in the wholesale dry goods business in Nashville for several years, leaving this business to enter the Service during the World War. After his discharge from the U. S. Army Mr. Lande moved to Clanton and opened The Leader.

Mr. Lande is one of Clanton's progressive citizens and is an ardent booster for Clanton and Chilton County.

In 1921 Mr. Lande married Miss Sadie Margolis of Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. Lande is connected with The Leader and is one of Clanton's most popular and efficient business women.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

A. G. (Pat) Mayse, publisher of the Paris (Texas, Morning News, says:

That although it is often said in such a manner as to imply originality, there is perhaps no town in which some one has not said, "What this town needs is a few first class funerals." I have never and do not now agree with the expression. The foundation of the civilization we now enjoy and the progress our cities and towns have made have been brought about through sacrificial contributions of time and money of our pioneers. We applaud a man while he is in active civic service but it is strange to observe how quickly we forget men who have worked in the past.

The present generation gives no credit to the men who cleared the timber, beat out the paths, built the fences, cultivated the soil and erected our first schools and churches. Those men recognized the responsibility of citizenship and met their duties in a noble way.

I heard it said not long since of an elderly man that he was "an old tightwad who never did anything for the town." Yet I happen to know that no single citizen of that particular town has contributed as much in money and in time as that good man has given. It is true that with the passing of the years some men can not keep time with the rapid step of progress, yet their hearts are right and most of them, even now, are doing more than they get credit for.

No, most of our towns do not need a "few first class funerals." Rather they need a re-birth of the hardihood, loyalty, courage, foresight and stability of men who have gone on before. We need fewer men, yet comparatively young to stop saying that they have "served their time" and who are always willing to "let George do it." The next time you hear somebody say, "What this town needs is a few first class funerals," call their hand and check up the records.

A LEADING BANKER

FRANK J. CALLEN

Mr. Callen, who is president of The Peoples Savings Bank, one of the oldest institutions of Chilton County, located in Clanton, is also one of those listed among the prominent and outstanding citizens of the county. He is the son of the late William T. Callen, former president of The Peoples Savings Bank, and has spent practically his entire life in studying banking, having been reared in a family well known in bank circles over the state.

Mr. Callen has figured largely in movements that tend to bring his town and county to the front, and is an active member of the Clanton Kiwanis Club.

Franklin Garage, Thorsby

Owned By One of Thorsby's Leading Young Business Men

The Franklin Garage of Thorsby is owned by Mr. R. R. Franklin. Mr. Franklin is one of the wide awake, progressive business men of Thorsby and Chilton County. He operates an up-to-date garage and repair business, which is located on the Dixie Bee Line Highway. His business is housed in a beautiful brick structure, which would be a credit to most any business of the same character in a larger city. His garage is equipped to render service for any kind of automobile repairs. Mr. Franklin was born and reared in Chilton County where he obtained his education. He was reared on a farm and learned early the necessity of work and industry and thrift. Mr. Franklin is 29 years old and has been in business for himself in Thorsby for seven years. He is greatly interested in the growth and prosperity of his community and takes an active interest in all civic activities. He is a member of the Baptist church and Woodmen of the World. You will always find a cordial welcome at his place and satisfactory service is his watchword. Strangers and tourists passing down the Dixie Bee Line Highway will find him on the job and ready to serve them night and day.

APPEAL TO CURIOSITY

How people will respond to something which appeals to their curiosity is illustrated in a story from Budapest, where a bookseller circulated an advertisement, translated as follows:

"What must a young girl know before marriage? From the book which I supply to order, the young girl will learn, not what every young girl is told before marriage, but what the young girl of today will find it indispensable to know if she is to prove herself really modern. For reasons easily to be understood, it is not advisable to sell such a book over the counter but on receipt of the price, four pengoe, it will be sent, discreetly packed, to any address."

The price quoted is about the equivalent of one dollar, so orders poured in by the thousands. Not only young girls but persons of both sexes and ages, bought eagerly in the expectation of thrills.

The books were delivered as promised, but were found disappointing. Some customers prosecuted the bookseller for fraud, but he was acquitted. It was held by the court that the books sold through the advertisement really contained information which "a young girl should have before marriage. They were cook books.

REPORT ON PROHIBITION

One of the most contradictory reports ever made by a responsible body was that of the Wickersham Commission on prohibition submitted a few days ago. So far from agreement were the members of the commisison that separate individual reports were made by several of them in addition to the ambiguous document presented by the commission as a whole.

Briefly summarizing the individual opinions expressed by the eleven members, it may be said that none give permanent approval to the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Law. Five members advocate giving the present law a further trial, four members favor immediate revision, and two members favor repeal.

All in all the various views expressed would seem to muddle the situation, rather than clarify it. There is little indication that they will have much effect upon public opinion one way or another. The main report is rather "dry" in its conclusions, while the individual reports are preponderantly "wet."

That enforcement has been far from satisfactory is admitted by all the members, while six of the eleven seem to feel that adequate enforcement of the present law is impossible

Senator Borah aptly described the reactions of wets and drys by saying that the commission's general conclusions were very satisfactory to the drys, while the conclusions of individual members were very satisfactory to the wets.

BEGIN CHARITY AT HOME

In spite of the present unfavorable economic situation, there is still heard in some quarters continued agitation for the cancellation of war debts owed to the United States by foreign countries. There is no justification for such cancellation at this time, when our own people are laboring under heavy taxation and other burdens that can not be escaped

Compromises with the nations which owe this country have reduced the principal of these debts to less than one-half of their original amount, and to that extent these obligations have been cancelled already. In making these compromises Uncle Sam has been most generous, both in determining the sums to be paid and in permitting payments to be made over a long period—62 years.

The money which these debts represent was borrowed by the United States government from its own people and loaned to the allies. It must be repaid from the federal treasury, whether foreign nations pay or not. This means that any further cancellation of war debts will increase the burden of domestic taxpayers accordingly.

Economy in government administration is just now the outstanding need. Congress and other legislative bodies are giving away a lot of money as it is, but when it goes to aid our own people it is not entirely unjustified. Under present conditions, especially, charity should begin at home, and it would be well to draw a line there and let the foreign debts ride awhile.

Today's Good Telephone Service Must Be Better Tomorrow

Not long ago very few long distance calls were handled while the calling subscriber remained at the telephone. Today more than 70 per cent are handled that way.

Today the average time required to complete a long distance call is only 2.4 minutes as compared with 7.5 minutes five years ago.

Similar improvements have been made in your local service and errors now average less than two in every 100 local calls.

These achievements are the result of new inventions, improved operating methods, new equipment, combined with the skill and interest of experienced operators, linemen and engineers cooperating with an army of loyal workers, many of whom are technical experts.

Proud as they are of these accomplishments, the telephone organization is not satisfied. There is no standing still in the Bell System and every day organized effort is directed toward making your service even better tomorrow.

Farmers Pay Billion Dollar Tax Bill

"Recent studies reveal that the tax burden of American farmers now amounts to more than one billion dollars annually," says the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, which believes the present property tax system is out of date and causes all types of property owners, including farmers, to pay for more than their relative share of the cost of government.

"The burden is especially heavy on the farmer because he is an important owner of real-estate," said President Edward A. O'Neal, Farm Bureau President. "The farmer pays 30 per cent of his net income in taxes while industry and commerce pay only about 10 per cent.

"Farmers now pay in taxes more than four times as much as they spend for seed, two and one-half times the cost of all farm improvement, and substantially more than their total expenditures for machinery and tools.

"The general property tax supplies 75 per cent of the total state and local tax collection in the United States," he added. "This means that real-estate is contributing between 55 and 60 per cent of such collections. Much of the intangible property escapes direct taxation. There is need for revision, in order that taxes may be levied upon the basis of ability to pay."

When Arthur Turner, a negro of Newburgh, N. Y., was caught in a chicken coop, he explained that he had been fleeing from two other negroes and had hid there.

Winter Drought Threatens Timber

The owners of timber and cut over lands are facing critical conditions on account of the current winter drought, according to Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. All timber growth starts with seedlings, and the latter can easily be wiped out by the woods fires that occur so frequently during the winter and spring.

By keeping a close watch over the woodlands, especially on dry windy days, and by taking prompt action to extinguish fires shortly after they start many thousands of dollars of damage can be avoided. Over the greater part of the woodland sections of the state, local forestry agents employed jointly by the Federal Government and the State of Alabama have developed good systems of cooperation among the landowners in forest fire protection and other branches of forestry. However, the prevailing business depression has reduced the income of the forestry department so that a great many of these agents have necessarily been placed on furlough. This materially increases the responsibility of the landowner himself in his timber growing project.

Forest fires in Alabama are comparatively easy to extinguish, providing action is taken before they become very large. Light surface fires can be whipped out with a fire swatter or even with a pine top. It the burning extends down into the forest floor, a hoe is necessary to dig down to the mineral soil to stop the spread of the fire. A rake is very handy in scratching a clean line in front of the fire, across which it will have difficulty in burning. If there is heavy wind it often is necessary to back-fire from some clear strip such as a path or road. The two most common errors in fire fighting are failure to start the back-firing sufficiently far in advance of the main fire, and thinking the fire is out when it is not.

Alabama Is A Three Billion Dollar State

Alabama is a three billion dollar state producing about $560,000,000 worth of new wealth each year, says the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries.

The Bureau of Census estimated value of all tangible property at $2,015,430,000 in 1912 and $3,002,043,000 in 1922. "Since 1922 the declining price level has tended to decrease this amount, but the accumulation of new property has probably more than offset that tendency," the agricultural department said.

The actual production of wealth in Alabama is confined to agriculture, mining and manufacturing. In 1927, the latest figures available, the production of wealth in agriculture was $252,000,000; in mining $79,000,000 and in manufacturing $233,000,000, making a total that year of $564,000,000 of new wealth added to the State.

Rather Unusual

The Burlington railroad is getting tired of having motorists knocking its trains around. So, when Floyd Hauck of Broken Bow, Neb., charged his automobile into a freight train, knocking three box cars into the ditch, the railroad sued him for $239.

Bishop Manning doesn't approve of Judge Lindsey's ultra-modern ideas about marriage, yet the Bishop is not strictly a fundamentalist, for he recently said: "I accent the theory of evolution, and I also believe in revelation given to us in the Bible."

A gift to charity under unusual circumstances is reported from Anderson, Ind., where James Pattie is serving a life sentence for murder. Having earned $30 at the rate of a few cents a day by extra labor in the penitentiary, Pattie gave it all for the relief of the unemployed in Anderson.

Without government relief, John Guest, lifelong farmer near Gadsden, Ala., accumulated an estate worth $100,000, much of it in cash, it was disclosed when he died recently at the age of 81. His will gave each of nine children $3,500 in cash and the rest of the estate to his widow. It is safe to say he did not confine his farm operations to raising cotton.

When a shoplifter of Cincinnati told the judge that he had stolen a pair of shoes for his mother-in-law, the judge replied, "Greater love hath no man. You may go."

Judge Hurley of Chicago is not especially sympathetic, but he stopped the tears of a young woman whose breach of promise suit was being tried before him by saying: "You are crying your way to a verdict, but I'll set it aside if you get it." The plaintiff's emotion promptly subsided.

A versatile painter is John Kane of Pittsburgh. He first painted houses, now paints box cars as a regular job and landscapes on the side. Recently he sold one of his landscapes to Mrs. John D. The Egyptian government has made definite decision to dispose of the 00,000 kantars (about 300,000,000 ounds) of cotton which that country w holds. The plan is to sell half a million kantars annually in small quantities. How to dispose of this surplus has been a difficult problem for the gyptian government to solve.

A group of German agricultural cientists and economists who visited the United States to study American griculture report that the American farm worker produces 4 to 5 times as much as the German farm worker, and receives 2 to 4 times the wages. The difference is due largely to more extensive use of machinery by American farmers.

During 1930 smokers of the world increased their consumption of American tobacco while international usage of practically every other product of this country's industry and agriculture diminished. The U. S. Department of Commerce reported that leaf tobacco exports for 1930 amounted to 579,704,000 pounds against 565,901,000 pounds in 1921. Due to this decline the value of the 1930 exports was slightly below that of 1929.

SALE OF BIBLES INCREASED IN 1930 OVER 1929 SALES

Following the recent statement by commercial publishers of Bibles that the sale of Scriptures throughout the United States was smaller in 1930 than in previous years, the American Bible Society has just announced that the total of 5,565,779 copies of Scripture issued during 1930 from the Society's headquarters at Bible House, Astor Place, New York City, is an increase of more than a million and a half over the figures for 1929. With the exception of 1927 this total of volumes issued exceeds that of any year in the Society's history.

There are still thousands of homes and many thousands of people in the United States who have never owned or even seen a Bible according to statements sent the American Bible Society by its agencies which distribute from Philadelphia, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, San Francisco, New York City and other large centers throughout the United States.

Statistics are not yet available from the Society's twelve foreign agencies responsible for distribution in territory outside of the United States but from reports already received the indications are that the foreign distribution during 1930 exceeded that of any earlier year

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

SEASONABLE HINTS

The crisp, invigorating days of autumn somehow inspires one with renewed courage and faith in the things about us. The appetite becomes keener, the breathing deeper; the morning walk in the open drives away the fatigue of midsummer. The machinery of digestion takes on a new hum; in short, we "feel better all over."

The rural housewife finds much for her capable hands to do. Think of the canning of pears, the preserving of late plums, the pickling, canning, catsuping of the luscious fall tomato! Such substantials for the winter-day dining table! How we anticipate, as we carry out autumn details!

I am in direct touch with the National Canners Association of America, and with great benefit to myself as an advisor to the public in the interests of more and better health. I find the great canning industry striving, with every improved facility known, to give our people the best in sealed provisions, employing the most skilled scientists in laboratory tests, in order to provide nutriment of unparalelled flavor and purity for our people. The winter fruit-can holds the juices, vitamines, proteins, so acceptable to right living. Our canned products reach outward to the four corners of the earth.

In time, the housewife will escape the exacting duties of canning fruits; they can be put up fresh by the great and expert technicians, cheaper, more convenient to handle, and can be obtained ready to use with little outlay, compared with the drudgery of home canning.

We are well past the age when copper was used to color the glass jar of commercial pickles. Poisons are no longer used as bleaches or preservatives. The tin can is used where such employment is scientifically appropriate. I hear of little or no illness caused by the impure canning of fruits and vegetables. The summer, with its host of invaders of the partially-eaten canned food is gone. The "culture season" is over. But I am horribly afraid of the partly-used, hot-weather can of pigs' knuckles and other potted meats!

Circuit Clerk Of County

J. Z. MIMS, CIRCUIT CLERK OF CHILTON COUNTY

Born in Clanton November 22, 1886, Mr. J. Z. Mims has lived in Chilton County all of his life, with the exception of the time spent in Livingston where he did special work at the Livingston Normal School. Reared on a farm near Clanton, Mr. Mims has been closely associated with farm life and has been an important factor in the agricultural development of Chilton County. He spent 14 busy years as a teacher in this county, having taught from 1906 to 1920.

Mr. Mims is now serving his second term as Clerk of the Circuit Court and upon having been reelected for a second term he received the greatest number of electorial votes ever cast in the county for a county office. He is deacon of the Samaria Baptist church where he also takes a very active part in Sunday School work being superintendent of a very progressive Sunday School. Mr. Mims is a member of the Masonic Order in which he holds the office of Junior Deacon.

Quite in keeping with his interest in the growth of his county, Mr. Mims now lives in one of the prettiest and most modern farms in the state which is situated just south of Clanton on the Montgomery-Birmingham highway.

After seven years of living in a section of his home apart from his wife, Chester A. Jones of Beacon, N. Y., is seeking an annulment in court.

A letter which was addressed in shorthand and mailed at the post office in Worcester, Mass., was delivered, as the assistant postamster was a stenographer.

COLLINS CHAPEL HIGH SCHOOL

The Collins Chapel Junior High School is in one of the most outstanding communities of Chilton County. Those citizens who make up this community show a most progressive spirit in farm life. Z. Y. Appleton is principal of this school, and not only does he put forth his best efforts in the interest of the school, but is always striving to make his community more outstanding.

FEW STRIKES IN 1930

Although periods of hard times are usually marked by serious industrial conflicts, the year 1930 showed fewer strikes than any year since authoritative records have been kept, averaging only 47 a month.

Contrasted with 82 strikes a month, in 1929, 108 a month in 1925, and 302 a month in 1919, the record for last year is extremely gratifying. In the number of men involved the record is even more impressive, less than one-twentieth as many having been on strike in 1930 as there were in 1919.

All this is evidence of the better understanding between employers and employees that has been brought about in reecnt years. As a recent survey points out:

"Absence of industrial dispute has undoubtedly strengthened our industrial and social structure and should be an important factor in increasing the possibility of a more rapid economic recovery."

DEADLY WOOD ALCOHOL

The public's lack of information concerning the difference between denatured alcohol and methanol wood alcohol was directly responsible for 148 deaths in various parts of the country during recent weeks, according to a compilation from press reports. After one methanol drinking party at Pittsfild, Mass., eight persons died and another went blind.

To forestall the repetition of such a disaster, Dr. George H. Bigelow, state health commissioner of Massachusetts, called upon health enforcement agencies to strictly regulate the sale and distribution of methanol wood alcohol, and urged those communities lacking proper legal regulations to provide them. He also asked individual motorists to exercise extreme care in the purchase of anti-freeze mixtures.

Methanol, Dr. Bigelow explained, is poisonous whether imbibed or inhaled as a vapor, and will also produce toxic conditions if absorbed through the skin. He summarized the situation in this statement:

"We can see no advantage in methanol as an anti-freeze. Of the products generally available on the market it would seem that the most dangerous is methanol, while denatured alcohol is least poisonous."

Some persons will take any chance to get an intoxicating drink. The only way to keep them from poisoning themselves, it seems is to rigidly restrict the sale of methanol wood alcohol, at the same time using every means to educate the public regarding its deadly effects.

FRIENDSHIP CHESTS

One of the finest projects to engage the activities of American school children is that of sending "friendship health chests" to the less favored school children of Mexico. So far, this activity has been confined principally to California children, who have already sent 150 chests, but it is to be extended to other states.

The plan which has been followed is for each American school taking part to build and equip one chest for presentation to a Mexican school. The chests are made by the manual training departments in accordance with uniform specifications; home economics departments add six infants' layettes, and the chest contains a medical kit, a volley ball and net, baseballs, one American and one Mexican flag, children's books in Spanish, pictures for the school room and a 3-pound box of candy. Enclosed is also a letter of friendship from the school making the gift.

These chests have been received with the greatest appreciation and enthusiasm by the Mexican children and many touching letters have been sent by them expressing their gratitude. The director of federal education in Mexico through whom the gifts are distributed, has warmly commended the movement, as have President Ortiz and other high officials.

At a national educational conference held in Milwaukee in December, plans were discussed for extending the friendship health chest project to other states as a means of promoting good will between the United States and Mexico an objective worthy of the fullest measure of support.

PORTER M. PLIER

Porter M. Plier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Plier, of Clanton, was the first man from Chilton County, Alabama, to be killed in the recent World War. It was on June 18th, 1918, his 21st birthday, while out with an advance scouting party, in company with Emmett Singleton and others, that Porter met his death, when struck by a piece of shrapnel.

When the old Fourth Alabama Regiment (National Guard) was being recruited for service on the Mexican Border, Porter volunteered and saw service on the border for several months and when this Regiment was inducted into the United States service and became the famous 167th Infantry of the 42nd (Rainbow) Division, he was a member and among the first to sail and see service in France.

The record that Porter M. Plier made as a young man and soldier, was the very best and entitled him to first place in the memory of the people of this county. He gave his all that we who survive might enjoy the freedom and liberty which our forefathers, through sacrifices and even death, established for this nation.

Plan the Bridge Supper With an Eye to the Men

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

A WISE hostess plans a substantial menu for her bridge party when men are to be present, for she knows that most men do not like the "salad and sandwich" type of meal so popular with women.

Food does not need to be overly elaborate to please the men, but it must be well prepared and served. The next time you have an evening bridge party where men are to be present, try serving some simple hot dish, with rolls and relishes, and plenty of coffee. And then, of course, you must plan a dessert—because men are just as enthusiastic about sweets as women are, whether they admit it or not.

These three menus for late evening suppers are unusually good, and they have been planned especially to please the men guests:

Creamed Chicken and Ham with Olives on Buttered Toast
Hot Rolls Fresh Cucumber Pickles
Ice Box Apple Butter Pudding
Coffee

Chow Mein with Boiled Rice
Hot Cloverleaf Rolls
Preserved Sweet Gherkins
Divinity Fudge
Coffee

Individual Cold Platters
Prepared Mustard Chili Sauce
Hot Rolls
English Tarts Coffee

Creamed Chicken and Ham with Olives on Buttered Toast: 4 tablespoons butter; 4 tablespoons flour; 2 cups rich milk; 2 hard cooked egg yolks; Dash of pepper and paprika; Few drops Worcestershire Sauce; 1 cup cold cooked ham, diced; 1 cup cold cooked chicken; ½ cup Stuffed Spanish Olives, sliced.

Melt butter in a saucepan, add flour and stir until well blended. Add milk and egg yolks which have been forced through a sieve. Cook until thick, stirring constantly. Season with pepper, paprika, and Worcestershire Sauce. Add ham and chicken, then sliced Olives. Heat thoroughly, and serve on slices of buttered toast.

Chow Mein with Boiled Rice: 1 lb. fresh pork, chicken, veal, lobster, or crab meat; 4 tablespoons fat; ½ cup water; 1 teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; boiled rice; ½ cup Tomato Ketchup; 1 teaspoon corn starch; 1 onion; ¼ lb. dried mushrooms or ½ lb. fresh mushrooms soaked for 2 hours in cold water, drained, and cut in thin slices.

Cut pork in 1 inch strips and fry 5 minutes in 2 tablespoons fat. Add water, Ketchup, and cornstarch. Simmer 3 minutes, or until meat is tender. In another frying pan put 2 tablespoons fat, onion cut in very fine strips 2 inches long, and mushrooms. Cook 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Combine mixtures, add salt and pepper, and serve on a platter surrounded with boiled rice.

Divinity Fudge: 2 cups granulated sugar; ½ cup corn syrup; ⅝ cup cold water; 1 teaspoon Pure Vinegar; 2 egg whites; 1 cup nut meats; vanilla.

Mix together sugar, corn syrup, water, and Vinegar. Cook slowly, without stirring, until the mixture forms a very firm, almost brittle ball in cold water. Pour gradually over stiffly beaten egg whites, and beat until creamy. Add nut meats and vanilla. Pour into a buttered pan, and mark in squares.

Individual Cold Platters: Sprigs of parsley or watercress; Meat loaf, ham, roast beef, bologna, or other meats; Sweet Mayonnaise Salad Dressing; Midget Gherkins; Lettuce; Tomato; Celery; Nuts; Bread and butter sandwiches.

Using parsley or watercress, divide a small dinner or salad plate into four sections. In one section place a slice of cold meat; in the second a salad on a lettuce leaf (tomato stuffed with celery, nuts and Mayonnaise, or tomato stuffed with cole slaw); in the third section a mound of pickles; and in the fourth small bread-and-butter sandwiches.

A RECORD HARD TO BEAT

The formation of a new French cabinet a few days ago again calls to mind the exceptional record held by M. Aristide Briand, who for the 16th time becomes minister of foreign affairs, and for the 25th time a cabinet member.

Since March 14, 1906, the date of M. Briand's debut in ministerial affairs, his time in the government service totals 15 years and four months, of which five years were in the position of president of the council, certainly a record hard to beat.

For several years he has made notable efforts in behalf of world peace, and it was his suggestion that inspired the Kellow-Briand peace pact, whereby 62 nations formally renounced war as an instrument of national policy. Recently M. Briand has put forward a plan for forming a United States of Europe as a further means for promoting peaceful international relations. He was awarded the Nobel peace prize in 1926.

Admirers throughout the world will wish for this distinguished statesman many more years of useful service such as he has rendered so effectively in the past.

AREAS LISTED FOR CROP PRODUCTION LOANS

Dr. C. W. Warburton, Secretary of the National Drought Relief Committee today announced the States and counties which will be served by the Farmers' Seed Loan Offices at Memphis, Tenn., and at Grand Forks, N. Dak. These offices wil lamke loans to farmers who suffered serious crop losses from drought last year. The loans will be made from the $45,000,000 fund appropriated by Congress for the purpose and will be for the "purchase of seed, fertilizer, feed for work stock, and for fuel and oil for tractors used in crop production."

From the Memphis office loans will be available for all counties in Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, and Tennessee, where drought damage was done in 1930. In Louisiana the loans will be confined to approximately the northern two-thirds of the State, drought damage being slight in southern counties. In Tennessee several counties in the east central and eastern portions were not seriously affected by drought and it is not expected that loans will be necessary there, Doctor Warburton said. Drought damage was severe in some portions of Alabama and there were isolated localities in many other counties that suffered crop losses.

Alabama Livestock Consumption Larger

During 1930 livestock consumption in Alabama increased over 1929, says F. W. Gist, State and Federal statistician of the Department of Agriculture who reported the total value for 1930 was $78,173,000 compared with $74,572,000 in 1929. "The greater number of animals sold and slaughtered resulted in some reduction of the number on farms Jan. 1, 1931, as compared with the number on farms at the same date in 1930." he said.

The number of cattle sold and slaughtered by farmers in Alabama in 1930 was 341,000 compared to 288,000 in 1929. The value of these was $8,695,000 in 1930 and $4,673,000 in 1929.

There were 1,101,000 hogs sold and slaughtered by farmers of the State in 1930 compared with 968,000 in 1929 and the values for the two years were $16,119,000 and $15,166,000 respectively.

In 1930 theer were 37,000 sheep sold and slaughtered compared with 30,000 in 1929 and the value for 1930 was $155,000 and for 1929 $90,000.

There were sold and eaten by Alabama farmers 9,632,000 chickens in 1930 compared with 8,524,000 in 1929. The value of these were $5,490,000 in 1930 and $5,477,000 in 1929.

There were produced on Alabama farms 114,245,000 gallons of milk in 1930 compared with 110,136,00 gallons in 1929. The value of these quantities were $34,273,000 in 1930 and $33,040,000 in 1929.

Eggs produced in 1930 in the State amounted to 53,765,000 dozens compared to 52,020,000 in 1929 and the values were $13,441,000 in 1930 and $16,126,000 in 1929.

The greater number of animals sold and slaughtered during 1930 resulted in some reduction of the number on farms of January 1, 1931, as compared with the number on farms at the same date in 1930.

Justice Of Peace

T. W. BRYAN

The above photograph is that of T. W. Bryan, Justice of the Peace of Precinct 4, Chilton County. Mr. Bryan is one of the most conscientious and progressive officers in Chilton County. He enforces the law without fear or favor. his decisions are fair and in cases, where the necessity arises, he may be accused of one serious fault. In dealing out justice it is tempered with mercy.

Mr. Bryan was born and reared in Dodge County, Georgia, and received his education in the schools of that county. He has been a resident of Chilton County for the past six years. During this time Mr. Bryan has made many friends, the number of which is limited only by his acquaintances.

When Mr. Bryan left his former residence in Dodge County, Georgia, to make his home in Chilton County, Alabama, he was presented with a paper signed by business, professional, church men and other men of all walks of life attesting to his character and reliability. The following is a quotation from this paper, "We have been knowing Mr. T. W. Bryan for a number of years and we find him to be honest, reliable and trustworthy, and deem him one of the best citizens of Dodge County. Mr. Bryan has r[illegible]led in Dodge County all his life and has been very active in everything that he could possibly be towards the betterment of his community, the uplift of humanity, and t[illegible] progressiveness of his c[illegible] and his fellowman."

Mr. Bryan is a member of the Fi Methodist Church of Clanton. Bryan may be found in his office [illegible] the Wilson Building.

Fruit and Truck Growers Assn. Vital Factor In Section's Growth

Thorsby Fruit and Truck Growers Association was organized in 1903, by a group of men seeing the importance of working together for the purpose of improving the fruit and truck industry and perfecting a marketing system. From the day this organization was perfected it has been active in the interest of the community along the above lines

The section surrounding Thorsby is peculiarly adapted to fruit and vegetables of all kinds. The organization has grown in membership from twenty five in 1903 to more than 250 today. In the first years of this organization the sale of fruit and vegetables amounted to about $10,000.00, but within the last three years the sale of products has exceeded $100,000.000 a year. While the main objective has been the promoting of truck farming, this organization has worked for the interest of farming extensively.

All fruit and truck of this section is sold through this organization. Each year buyers from different markets are on the ground, who pay cash for commodities raised here. In 1929 more than one hundred cars of strawberries were shipped. This organization can be complimented for its business management. It has never lost a dollar for its growers in its history.

The Association was incorporated November 25, 1925, and therefore is a substantial organization in the business world. The present officers of this organization are; President, Carl C. Petersen; Vice President, T. J. Martin; Secretary, E. R. Piper: Manager and Treasurer, J. M. Smith; Directors: Carl C. Peterson, T. J. Martin, W. A. Hayes, M. J. Soberg and John Childress.

The Thorsby Fruit and Truck Growers association is the oldest organization of its kind in the State and possibly the oldest in the United States. The organization has been active continuously with educational work, which awakened the farmers to a realiz that there is more money to be r in fruits and vegetables than raising cotton.

It has taught the people of this munity the value of cooperation team work. The best thinking men leaders of this organization have ma it their business to see that politic not enter into this organization.

Many Other Outstanding Industries See Unprecedented Future For Chilton County As Place Of Wonderful Opportunities

Alabama's growth and development is a marvel of progress and advancement. Our state today is the center around which other states revolve in relation to its vast wealth consisting of hundreds of natural resources, all kinds of farming and fruit growing and its unprecedented advancement along all lines of endeavor.

Development officials everywhere are greatly interested in Alabama's progress. Realizing the great opportunities we have to offer, men of industry are seeking a place within her bounds. Our own people have been awakened to our vast resources and opportunities and are beginning to make an inventory of our raw materials, and industrial and agricultural assets.

We believe that we can safely say that Alabama offers today a greater opportunity for industrial and agricultural investment that any other state in the Union. Many hundreds of charters for new lines of business have been taken out in the past few years and are now operating.

"Back to the Farm," is the slogan that is appealing to our college men and they are turning their attention to agriculture, because agriculture has become a scientific business. Farming under the old system was drudgery, but today under the magic touch, applied by science, fruits, vegetables, grains, and grasses are producing tenfold more than under the old system.

Through the influence of the departments of agriculture both state and national, our state with its experiment stations, with its county agents, demonstration agents and information that goes to the farmer has helped him to make life on the farm a pleasure indeed. We have broken away from the one-crop system and are turning to the unlimited opportunities of fruit growing, nut raising, truck farming and dairying. Marketing systems have been inaugurated in every county and in Chilton County, the home of the Chilton County News, hundreds of cars of berries, fruits, vegetables, poultry, cotton and livestock are shipped annually.

We have learned the wisdom of intensive cultivation, and draining with an intelligent application of commercial fertilizer. By this system our lands are being made to produce 5 times as much as was produced a few years ago.

Through the influence and work of County Agents the farms are raising more and better feed crops, better pastures and grazing lands for both winter and summer. Our people are growing the things needed and living at home. Our farmers have learned that they can live like kings by taking advantage of their own opportunities. Our long months of sunshine, our mild climate, our plentiful supply of water for low cost of upkeep of cattle, make dairying and stock raising a very profitable business.

The cattle tick has been exterminated and there is no longer danger of disease from this source. Capital and industry are watching closely the development of Alabama and are moving steadily into the state.

Consulting engineers, the American Mining Congress, have surveyed Alabama minerals and discovered a wealth of raw material other than those that are being mined, that can supply raw material for many different manufactured articles. There are clays, bauxite, baukite, and many other specimens of minerals that are not yet developed, which can be found in abundance.

Constructive legislation is making capital more favorable to the call of Alabama. Millions of dollars of foreign capital are being invested in the state each year and this is but a small amount of what is anticipated within the next four or five years. Other things making Alabama and especially Chilton County most attractive to the investor and home seeker, is health conditions. Most every county in the state maintains a full time health unit. Vaccines are furnished by the state and many contagious diseases have been reduced to a minimum. Malaria has almost been driven out, public, state and government officers are on the job twenty-four hours a day, fighting the deadly mosquito. Chilton County, the home of the Chilton County News, is one of the most healthful counties in the South and our local physicians are due much credit for the progressive movements along this line.

Alabama still has a plentiful supply of timber. Where much of our timbered lands have been cut over young trees are growing and will soon be ready to be manufactured. We have much virgin timber still standing and the citizenship of Alabama is imbued with the spirit of conservation.

No state in the union has made more progress in road building than has Alabama. Every child in the county can reach a school over improved roads. Running through the State are many concrete highways, the Dixie Bee Line Highway, which may be seen outlined on the front sheet of this edition, extends from Chicago to Miami, Florida, running through the heart of the State and which passes directly thru the City of Clanton in Chilton County, Alabama. This highway is 1635 miles in length and is solid concrete with the exception of about sixty-five miles.

We believe that Chilton County, Alabama takes the lead. not only in health conditions, climate, but adaptability of soils to fruits, vegetables and berries. Chilton County, Alabama needs many kinds of manufacturing industries to take care of our products, both natural and agricultural and can be kept busy the year round.

In Chilton County there is great opportunity for small industries. There are several major activities that can be included. We believe that the shipping of raw materials to other localities for conversion into finished products of all degrees is economically unsound. There

Indeed, Scouting is a 'learning by doing' method of teaching Scouts the two-fold program of Character Developing and Citizenship Training.

All boys 12 years of age and over are invited to come to a meeting of the troop at their next session, Friday.

Clanton Became Town In 1872—Site Owned By Thomas Williams

City Now Has Over 2500 Population Having Grown Rapidly In Past Ten Years; Is Center of Hydro-Electric Power and Rich Agricultural Section and Still Rapidly Growing

The history of the City of Clanton is one that should incite the admiration and interest of every citizen in the community as well as outsiders

Located in the heart of Alabama and in one of the richest agricultural sections of the State, as well as being the center of Hydro Electric Power for the State, Clanton has grown from a mere hamlet to a thriving city of over 2,500 during the past fifty years. It is located on many highways, the Dixie Bee Line Highway, all paved from Chicago to Miami, Florida; is only fifty-seven miles from Birmingham, Alabama's largest city, and forty miles from Montgomery, the Capital of Alabama; the city being connected to both of these places by concrete roads. Excellent transportation is offered, also, the city is located on the main line of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, from New Orleans to Cincinnati

The ground upon which Clanton is situated was first owned by Thomas Williams, who acquired the land by grant from the government. This land was sold to Alf Baker, who conceived the idea of developing a city thereon. Mr. Baker employed engineers who surveyed the site, which is now Clanton. Streets and sidewalks were laid out in regulation order in 1872. The Louisville and Nashville railroad was laid through Clanton two years before. Mr. Baker deeded to the city the site for the depot. The town was named Clanton. The streets were named in numerals, and yet bear their original names. Clanton's first residents were Alf Baker and Joe Foshee, both of families: Sam Adams, Thornton, Hannon, Aldridge, Jim Dudley, Sharpe, Lewis Boyd, Wells, Chestnut, Sartor, Dr. John Robinson, Evans, Randolph, and Warner. Alf Baker owned and operated the first hotel of Clanton. The building was a two story frame structure and stood on the corner now occupied by the Upchurch Drug Co. Clanton's first physicians were Drs. John R. Robinson, I. D. Lanier and Sam Johnson. Clanton's first lawyers were Jesse R. Jones, William A. Collier and Col. Williamson.

Clanton's first City Election was held in 1887. The following is taken from the files of the 1886-1887 State Legislature.

AN ACT

To authorize the Probate Judge of Chilton County to order an election for the purpose of electing officers for the Town of Clanton in said county. Section. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Alabama. That the Probate Judge of Chilton County, is hereby authorized and empowered to order the Sheriff of Chilton County to give notice of and to hold an election in the Town of Clanton in said County, for the purpose of electing one Intendent and five Counsellors for the said Town of Clanton, according to the provisions of Chapter 1, title XIV, Part 1 of the Code of 1876; provided that the officers elected under the act shall not be authorized to levy and collect a per capita tax for the purpose of opening or repairing streets or to enact any ordinance requiring personal service for the same. Approved February 24, 1887.

Clanton is today a thriving city of approximately 2,500 population, paved streets, beautiful churches, modern and up-to-date schools, sewerage, well equipped fire and police departments and is one of the most progressive cities in Alabama.

The religious institutions in the city are Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Christian and Seventh Day Adventists.

Education has always been stressed The fire department consists of several capable volunteer firemen under the leadership of Loren Smith.

The police department is composed of two efficient men, John A. Boockholdt and C. A. "Red" Sherrod. Mr. Boockholdt is day policeman while Mr. Sherrod serves as a protection for the city at night

Water is supplied for Clanton from a deep well. The equipment used by the city water works is modern in every respect. The city has recently installed a modern filtering plant. Electric lights and power are furnished by the Alabama Power Co., and the available supply is sufficient to handle a city of hundreds of thousands of people

There are two excellent sound banks in this city. Several lumber concerns modern laundry, cotton mill, ice factory, and many other [illegible] industries, besides a number of splendid wholesale and retail stores.

J B Atkinson

One of the most outstanding men in Clanton, Chilton County and the State of Alabama is J. B. Atkinson, prominent lawyer of Clanton.

Mr. Atkinson was born in Rockford, Coosa County, Alabama, August 10, 1890, and is a son of Joseph C. and Frances B. (Carden) Atkinson, natives respectively of Georgia and Alabama. After preliminary study in the office of a prominent attorney of Coosa County, he completed in 1912, the Junior Law Course in the University of Alabama. In 1913 he successfully passed the examination that gained admission to the bar of his native state and after six months of professional work at Sylacauga, he was engaged in practice two years in the City of Birmingham. He then, in 1915, established his residence in Clanton, where he has built up a substantial and representative general law practice.

Mr Atkinson made an excellent record during his six years of service as a member of the Alabama National Guard. Within the war period he served for a time as Chief Clerk of the exemption Board for Chilton County, and he was then transferred to service at the State Headquarters at Montgomery, where his work was in the government department that had supervision of looking after delinquents and deserters. In this work he served under General Crowder, from whom he received a personal letter of high commendation for his efficient service.

The Interests Of Chilton County

As Seen By An Editor

NOTE: At the request of the News, Mr. Wyatt, Editor of The Union-Banner, of Clanton, kindly consented to write this very interesting article, for this special edition. Mr. Wyatt is a native of this county and has studied its needs at all times.

By W. M. Wyatt

When requested by the Chilton County News to write an article on "The Interests of Chilton County from the Viewpoint of an Editor," I was assured that I had all the lattitude one might desire in discussing my subject I quite agree that it is a subject that affords a great deal of elbow room, so to speak. For truly, the interests of Chilton County are so great and so many; and just as truly the viewpoints of an editor so varied, and his experiences so numerous therefore, putting the two together and attempting to make a concise and somewhat brief story out of it all requires that one be a magician, as well as a writer. Fearing that I am not very accomplished at either art, I feel that I have perhaps been chosen for a task that is too big for me.

I do not know that I could choose any particular viewpoint, as an editor, from which one might see the interests of his community with any different perspective than that which would be the conception of any other well-meaning citizen from the same place. But we are not all editors. Therefore, it is entirely possible, I think, that one who has been an editor, living and working in this county for the past eighteen years, might claim some viewpoints which have not been attained by others.

Quite surely, in a period of eighteen years as a country editor, one may lay claim to numerous experiences all his own. I have seen times when I wished I might share my predicament with others. But none were at hand to take a part of the "glory." Many times, too, I have been consoled by the companionship of loyal sacrificing friends, who were with me for better or for worse, for weal or woe.

I have voluntarily restricted my subject for this article. I have shorn it of many of the vestments which might properly be included in a discussion of the interests of Chilton County. Out of all the things which might be properly included, I have selected three subjects which I shall attempt to impress upon those who read this: Education, Health, Religion.

The education of our youth is among the first interests of our county. It is one that offers to our citizenship a ringing challenge. It is one of the biggest questions in front of us. Chilton County's schools have made much progress in recent years. But we must make more progress yet. We are far from the place where we may rest on our oars and take it easy concerning our schools.

We have not provided the support which we might have done, and in my opinion, ought to do, for our schools. We should go the limit in providing educational advantages for the youth of our county. We should hold back nothing that we can reasonably give.

Chilton County, in point of wealth, is able to place her schools right close to the top of the list of Alabama counties. From where I stand, I say without hesitation, that I can very plainly see that the people of Chilton County must move out to a bigger and broader consideration of the interests of our future men and women through providing every possible dollar of support for our public schools.

Dollars are not all that is required to make the best schools, either. We must put our hearts into the work, we must use our heads and our hands in building the spiritual and physical structures that are required to guide our youth into a glorious manhood and womanhood. We who would vision the future of our boys and girls should first vision for ourselves the kind of a heritage we would leave to them. "Where there is no vision, my people perish."

Close to the educational interests of our county is the important subject of public health. I am very sorry that the majority of the people of Chitlon County have not become aroused and awakened to the vast importance of this question.

The State of Alabama has a public health system that is recognized among the best in the whole world. Chilton County is able to have the best county health system in Alabama. Our people need it as much as they need any public measure that can be mentioned. We should brush the scales from our eyes and step forward to our opportunity in providing the benefits of public health supervision for our County.

This special edition of the Chilton County News will go far from our own borders carrying the message of Chilton County to the outside world. Somebody who reads it will want to know about the health program of a county that is so progressive and so full of opportunities. What will they think when they scan these pages and find that we are not able to say a word about public health supervision, more than that we hope to have it some day?

A better county, through providing better schools, better educational advantages, better health conditions, are interests which we can not compromise. Reason and sound judgment must some day leaven the whole.

My honest conviction is that the interests of our county are bound up in the subject of religion more than many of us seem to realize. Jesus told his people to seek first the kingdom of heaven, and all the other things would be added. Most of us go at it right backwards. We seek all the other things first. Then if we have any time left we sit down in peaceful repose and tell the Lord if he wants to do anything for us, we will not object. When we serve God and keep his commandments we render the best service possible for all the interests of our community, our fellowman, and ourselves.

This reminds me of something I heard over the radio the other night. Two humorists were cracking smart things at each other. One said he knew he had found the laziest man in the world. Then he related how a certain man had gotten a friend to write out for him a fine bed-time prayer. When he started to bed each night, he placed his prayer on the dresser and said: "There it is, Lord. Just go ahead and read it. I have got to get some sleep."

In conclusion, I will assure everybody everywhere that her in Chilton County we have the best place in the world to live and to work and to play. We have lots of very desirable, and attractive situations and conditions. We have very few bad environments. We want a better County, and we shall have it if determination and everlasting persistence for better things can be depended upon to win.

MERCHANT OF CLANTON

W. H. SARTOR

W. H. Sartor is one of Clanton's oldest and most substantial merchants. He was born near Autaugaville, Ala., in 1868. He received his education in the schools of Clanton.

Entering the business world when but a young man, Mr. Sartor was engaged as Superintendent of Ehrman Saw Mill. While engaged in this business he was associated with N. A. Kicker, who at that time was manager of the commissary for this lumber firm. Mr. Sartor and Mr. Kicker formed a partnership and entered the mercantile business in Clanton under the name of Sartor and Kicker. This business continued under this name for four years, Mr. Sartor buying out the interests of Mr. Kicker. The firm name was changed to W. H. Sartor and Sons, operating under this name for several years.

In 1918, Mr. Sartor became a partner of V. J. Elmore and was connected with this firm for about ten years. In 1928 Mr. Sartor purchased the interest of Mr. Elmore and changed the name of the business to The Fair. Under Mr. Sartor's supervision the Fair has become one of Clanton's leading business houses. His years of experience has placed him in a position to know the needs of the public along the lines of dry goods, notions, ready-to-wear and shoes.

Mr. Sartor has always taken a very active part in all social, civic, religious, fraternal and political activities of the town and county. He served four years as a member of the City Council and during this administration was very instrumental, with the aid of other members, to give the City of Clanton water works. He served as a member of the School Board for a number of years. Mr. Sartor is widely known in Masonic Circles. He has held the highest offices of the Clanton Lodge 423, Chapter No. 116, and Commandery No. 27. He is a charter member of Clanton Chapter No. 116, and member of Zomara Temple, Ancient Order Mystic Shrine, Birmingham, Ala. Mr. Sartor is also a member of Clanton Camp No. 322, Woodmen of the World. He is auditor of this order. He is a member of the First Baptist Church of Clanton.

Mr. Sartor was married to Miss Bell Watts of Clanton September 12, 1893. From this union five children and four grandchildren, who have brought great pleasure into the lives of these excellent people.

Mr. Sartor is therefore one of Clanton's most excellent citizens and can certainly be called a friend of man. The back of his hand is turned to no man, and the great objective of his life has been, not to make money, but to serve his fellowman to the best of his ability.

THORSBY JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

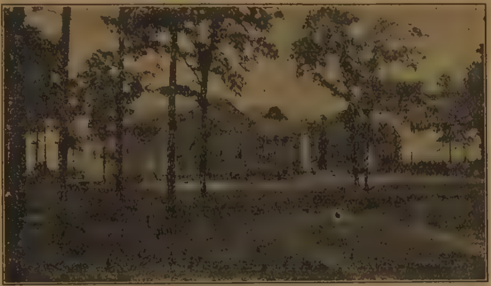
Thorsby Junior High School, Thorsby, Ala., a modern brick structure, and one of the high ranking junior high schools of the county. Prof. W. T. Bean is principal of this school.

Thorsby Institute Rated As One Of State's Leading Schools

Institute Offers Exceptional Advantages To Students Of State

Thorsby Institute has just entered on the last half of its 25th year of service to the young people of Central Alabama. From the school man's point of view conditions have changed amazingly in Alabama during the past quarter century. When Thorsby Institute began its work there was only one other High School in Alabama nearer to Thorsby than the cities of Montgomery and Birmingham.

Thorsby Institute during its earlier years could not confine itself to High School classes. There were too few pupils ready for High School work. Twenty-five years ago very few rural schools carried their pupils beyond the sixth grade. Among our earlier students, was one man who entered the school at the same time with his son. And the father devoted himself to work in the Primer. However, that case was exceptional.



HELEN JENKINS HALL

With the increasing facilities for education through the County and the State the Institute has raised its standards until now it does not attempt to carry classes below the ninth grade.

Miss Helen C. Jenkins, A. B., Mount Holyoke College, A. M., Syracuse University, has been with Thorsby Institute almost from the day of its founding, first as teacher, then as financial agent and field secretary and since 1918 as it Principal. To her in largest measure is due whatever success the school has attained.

With her are associated a faculty of three men and six women, trained, experienced, congenial, sympathetic, and three of them themselves graduates of Thorsby Institute.

Thorsby Institute is positively Christian, but not sectarian. The teachers are all members of evangelical churches and are representative this year of at least five different denominations.

DINING HALL

Some seem to consider the discipline at Thorsby Institute rather strict, but on the other hand many parents seem to be well satisfied with the fact that their girls, and their boys also, are as carefully cared for, as they would be at home.

Thorsby Institute has a special appeal for those who in their early youth did not have the educational advantages they needed. In their student body today are four married people. The two young men are preparing for the ministry. The wife of one of them is studying in the same class with her husband. The other young woman is the wife of a student in Howard College.

Thorsby Institute has never been a large school. Their ambition has not run in the direction of numbers. Seldom have they enrolled more than 100 students. Rather have they looked for quality. They have sought for the best, have been democratic enough to believe that they were more likely to find the best prospective students in humble homes, in the country, or in small towns. They have sought students who have had to work for what they got, whether in school or in the home. They have consistently and persistently "preached the gospel" of education "to the poor." They have required of all our boarding students that they work with their hands at least six hours every week. Some have come to the Institute with almost nothing except their willingness to work and they have won the honors in their classes and the Institute would like to make every ambitious young person of Central Alabama and every parent who is ambitious for his children believe that every young person of good health, good character and ordinary intelligence may secure a High School education. Thorsby Institute would like to show anyone interested how this may be done.

Thorsby Institute had in January a visit from the State Supervisor of Secondary education. After his return to Montgomery he sent the principal a letter from which is quoted:

"Much could be said in praise of the school, but perhaps a list of some of the excellent features will suffice. They are as follows:

1. Excellent campus, with space and some good facilities for outdoor activities, shrubs, etc.

2. Excellent buildings including standard classrooms, auditorium, office, commercial room.

3. Approved sanitary facilities, fountains for drinking water, etc.

4. Good general equipment and furniture.

5. Library containing many books suitable for high school use, well organized and administered by a trained all time librarian.

6. Some good equipment for chemistry and biology.

7. Unusual facilities for fire protection.

8. Faculty generally well qualified, earnest and industrious, doing much excellent work.

9. Fine morale and good work upon the part of the students. I believe their work on the whole is exceptional.

10. The buildings and grounds are well kept, and there is a noticeable air of refinement throughout the school. . . .

May I express to you, your association and the pupils of the school my very warm appreciation of the courteous treatment accorded me during my visit. It was a very pleasant day."

We would in closing call especial attention to item 5 above. The Institute has a trained librarian. The library contains 3000 volumes, many excellent books of reference among them the new Encyclopedia Brittanica. They are receiving about 25 excellent magazines and other periodicals, and the library is open to the public without charge, the only public library in the County.

NOT FOR THE DOLE

Hoover have come to the same conclusion, based on their experience, that the country does not believe in any kind of dole such as Great Britain has committed itself to. "If any member of Congress wishes to propose any form of dole measure that is his right and the bill should be considered on its merits," is the way Coolidge puts it to the public. But it is apparent that neither of these leaders will help fasten it upon the American people.

ROADS ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESSFUL FARMING

"In general, more attention has been given to the improvement of State highways during the past ten years than to country roads," says Harry Tucker, Professor of Highway Engineering at North Carolina State College. "The result is that the farmers in many communities are unable to take full benefit of the improved roads through difficulty in getting to them. They are now demanding roads that will be passable for motor vehicles during all seasons of the year—and rightly so—for the success of the modern farmer is dependent upon diversification of his farm products and the means of getting them easily and quickly to a market. . . ."

It is an ill wind that blows no one good, and the unemployment problem has done much to advance the farm road movement. In the last few months $700,000,000 has been raised for public works, and this is being augmented by the sale of bonds voted last November. A large part of the total is for roads.

To assure the greatest value from the use of these funds a fair relation between main and secondary roads must be maintained. Main highways, no matter how straight and wide and smooth, are valueless to a farmer who lives five miles away from them on a road that becomes a series of mud holes in winter. There is much talk nowadays about a new agricultural era—and good farm-to-market roads must be built if that hope ever is to be an actuality.

TREND OF TRANSPORTATION

In a recent address J. L. Haugh, vice president of the Union Pacific Railroad System, brought out some important facts concerning "The Trend of Transportation."

Mr. Haugh points out that the railroad industry, in the hundred years of its existence, has given the United States a network of transportation facilities which is unequalled anywhere else in the world, either in comprehensiveness or standards of service. Now competitive modes of travel and transportation—the aircraft, buses, waterways and oil pipe lines—are being developed and are taking an appreciable part of the business that once went to the rails. This has a definite bearing upon the future success and progress of the railroads.

These new modes of transportation have a justifiable place. By cooperating with the railroads they can still further improve and broaden transportation of both commodities and persons. The danger lies in that they may go beyond the point of their value and thus injure both the railroads and the public. This, to some degree has already happened.

The railroads are still the most satisfactory agency of long-haul transportation, and will undoubtedly continue to be. Buses and truck lines, on the other hand, may better serve smaller areas. "It should be practicable," says Mr. Haugh, "to deevlop each form of transportation within its own sphere so that the railroads will handle the mass transportation and the truck lines will handle the local distribution, thus forming a complete service and not one of ruinous competition."

All transportation agencies have a place—but their services should be coordinated so that they all prosper, and the public benefits accordingly.

THE OIL YEAR

It is to be hoped that the progress made in oil conservation during 1930 will be continued through 1931.

At the end of the former year, surplus stocks of oil were more than 26,000,000 barrels less than a twelvemonth before. This achievement was made in spite of a smaller demand for petroleum products, and the discovery of new oil pools in all of the oil producing states.

Of great significance was the legal victory of proration, which was tested in Oklahoma. Likewise, the federal government demonstrated that it is giving steadily stronger support to sound oil conservation methods.

At the present time the conservation problems has been somewhat overshadowed by the gasoline tax problem, which is close to every motorist. After the various legislatures have met, however, oil waste will take its place again as an economic problem of widespread importance. The efforts of the major producers to do away with surplus oil, and adjust supply to demand, are worthy of all public and governmental support.

This is the time for some business concerns to quit thinking that the public owes them something and think of what they owe the public.

First Baptist Church Clanton, Alabama

First Baptist Church of Clanton Is A Beautiful House Of Worship

Fine Brick Structure That Is Modernly Equipped; Has Active Church Organization

The seed from which has grown the Clanton Baptist church, were sown by several pioneer preachers who preached in school houses, vacant stores, and in the courthouse. Chief among these were Rev. James A. Mullins and Rev. P. H. Lundy. These two, composing a presbytery, called a meeting on November 5th, 1872, and organized the church with nine charter members: W. D. Sartor, H. W. Barnes, James Thacker, E. M. Cooper, Mrs. J. R. Jones, Mrs. F. A. Hannon, Mrs. W. D. Sartor, Mrs. James Thacker, and Miss Georgia Jones.

Mr. Alfred Baker gave to this small band a lot, now occupied by the dwelling of Mr. M. A. Gore, on which was erected the first building. The church was served in its early days by Rev. James A. Mullins and Rev. P. H. Lundy, and visiting ministers from time to time. The church did not make much progress, and a meeting was called on August 25, 1878, "to revive the organization which had been suffered to go down." At this meeting Rev. Jefferson Falkner was called as pastor, and served until 1884.

The church was admitted into the Unity Association in 1878. The first mention of Sunday school was in 1883, in these words: "The Moderator gave us a talk on Sunday School, which was listened to attentively." From this day the teaching work began with varied success and failure. Today the church maintains a Sunday School of 250 to 450 in attendance.

January, 1890, a committee was appointed to select a new site and erect a new building. On a site donated by Dr. J. S. Johnson and wife, the new building was erected in 1893, at a cost of $1500. This building served the congregation until November, 1921.

In February, 1920, a committee was appointed to purchase a lot and look into the matter of the erection of a new building which was begun in May, 1921, and completed in November, 1921, at a cost of nearly $40,000.00. In October, 1927, the Church began the erection of its splendid Educational plant, which was completed early in 1928, at a cost of approximately $20,000.00. The church now owns property valued at more than $60,000.00, all of which is free of debt.

From an humble beginning of nine members, the church has grown to a great congregation of 700 members. The church took on new life with the coming of Dr. S. J. Ezell as pastor in September, 1922. During his ministry of eight years the church building has been paid for, and the new educational building built and paid for. The Sunday School has grown from an average attendance of 122 in 1922 to an average attendance of 265 in 1930. During his 8 years service 580 additions have been added to the church, perhaps more than in the other 50 years of its history. The church has a constituency of noble men and women who are leaders in all walks of life.

A Tennessee reformer has received approval of his ideas from an unexpected source. Crusading for Sunday observance, he wrote a large number of railroad presidents asking that Sunday trains be abolished. Thinking him a crank, none replied except President F. D. Atterbury of the Erie, who said he "would be delighted to abolish Sunday trains, because they lose money."

INTERESTING REMINISCENCES OF ONE OF OLDEST CITIZENS RELATED

Memories Of High Spots Of Chilton County's History Is Told In An Impressive Manner

By W. B. Corley

By W. B. Corley, Sr.

Do you ever take the time and trouble to turn back, in your mind the pages of events that have contributed to evolve from the mists of the past this progressive and fertile country of ours?

Back in the stringent and terrible days that followed the history-making Civil War, everything was chaotic in all this wonderful Southland and it seemed especially so in this sparsely settled region. The few log cabin homes, with now and then a more pretentious frame "mansion," were indiscriminately scattered through the forests, with a bridle path, perhaps, or a little semblance of a road linking them together. In the eastern section of the county, along the banks of the Coosa River was occassionaly small patches in a state of primitive cultivation, with crops of corn, peas and potatoes helping to feed the population.

In those days the area of what is now Chilton County was largely what is known as "piney woods" and at that period it was not considered sufficiently fertile to warrant the labor of bringing it into cultivation. Out in that splendid territory, now known as Fairview, the father of our fell townsman, Mr. B. L. Jones, sold 40 acres of fine pine land as there was in that section, for the munificent sum of 10c per acre. Land in that section now sells for from $75 to $100 per acre and the owners are not seeking any buyers at that price.

The only land tilled in those days was valleys, rivers and creek bottoms. All the rest was "too poor" to fool with. The range for game must have been superb. Deer and turkey were plentiful and if the larder run short all you had to do was gather up your trusty shot gun and make a short round and amply replinish that yawning larder with plenty of venison and turkey. Nature was doing her part then and aided these victims of a bloody and devastating war to get on their feet and go to hustling and see what wonders they have accomplished since.

After the war a few years, our county began to vision the possibilities of its future and they began to cast about for a method of individuality. Soon a demand for separation from Autauga County took form and presto! a new county was born and they named it baker. Business began to pick up. Soon the saw mill industry was introduced and the turpentine man was a close follower. Crowds of labor flocked in an dthe sound of the saw mill whistle began to wake us up with the dawn and the endless song of turpentine darkeys was mingled all day long with happy bird notes that made melody in the virgin forests. Thousands of acres of the finest long leaf yellow pine you ever saw went through the mills, while train loads of raw turpentine went to the distant refineries.

Experimentation then began and there a farmer would clear up a patch of this "poor pine land" and behold, what a transformation! They found the soil much more easily cultivated than the "bottoms," and by proper cultivation, equally as remunerative. For farming purposes today there is no county in the State that can surpass ours in good and reliable production.

The years rolled on, like they have a habit of doing, and the first thing you knew, came a movement to rechristen our county, the result of which was that the name of Baker was done away with and the name of Chilton put at our masthead, and from the prosperity that has followed it must have been a good thing.

One prominent adjunct to the wealth of our county is not often enough thought about. I refer to the possibilities of its mineral welath. In the southwest portion of the county is deposits of brown ore that can not be surpassed anywhere in the State. A few years ago it was mined and sold readily to the steel making companies around Birmingham. These experts pronounced it as good as they have ever handled. But it lies from 2 to 6 miles from the railroad with, in those days, no roads that would stand the traffic, so the expense of transportation ate up the profits so fearfully that those engaged in the business had to quit. Have heard in later years that some of those large steel makers bought options on the mineral rights down there and are holding them intact to such time as they use up the mines they already have in operation. There is almost any quantity of it in that area and sometime there will be an active ore business carried on down there.

Then, coming on up the line of the river from the iron ore section, you enter a large area filled with graphite ore that has never been fully develped, while at one point on Chestnut creek, a plant has operated for years and is still at work on the same vein of ore.

Still coming north from the graphite plant a few miles, you run into a mica deposit that covers quite an extensive territory. The real flake mica shows up there in the only mine ever opened there, but lack of capital to put in the proper machinery for getting out the output suspended its work.

Speaking of minerals, there are other locations on the eastern side of our county that show pronounced traces of gold. Neither of these has ever been examined farther than on the surface. Sometime in the future a gold mine out there need not surprise you.

After we grew up and got our name, Chilton, properly registered and things looked good along came the Farmers Alliance, a splendid farmers organization, but, like two or three other organizations I have belonged to, the oily-tongued political montebank slipped in and the order was no more. Here in our county, I am told, that the Alliance became involved in politics, a bitter fight got up that finally resulted in two political parties, the Democratic and Republican. So, it has remained to this good day, and it is indeed a misfortune that has put many a stumbling block in the way of our legitimate progress. The good people of the county have grown suspicious of each other and do not cooperate and pull together as they otherwise would do.

Long about 1912 that exceptionally fine gentleman, Capt. Lay, succeeded, after long years of the most disheartening toil and worry, in erecting in our county that wonderful hydro-electric dam, known now as Lay Dam, and its advent certainly seemed to "turn on the light," in more ways than one. Our citizens took on new life and solid improvements have been going on ever since. Light and power anywhere in the county you want. The farmer in the "sticks" can read his paper by as good a light as the banker, and his wife can cook a meal on the same sort of range as the banker's wife.

Later on came Mitchell Dam, another wonderful engineering feat, with its auxiliary power to sow broadcast all over the land. Untold millions have been scattered in Chilton County by this great company in the past few years and their confidence in our potential future has created a like spirit in many of our good citizens. There is inspiration for all when great public achievements are wrought.

The great State highway passes just outside my window and I gaze with a reflective mind on the contrast then and 50 years ago. Cars with their happy passengers dash by at fifty miles, closed in and supremely comfortable. Fifty years ago the road would be a streak of rough road and an ox wagon groaning along at two miles per hour. That comparison is representative of the changes that have taken place all along the line of human endeavor.

Since those dark and poverty stricken days that followed in the wake of the Civil War, our County has emerged from a practical wilderness of timber into an almost arcadian land of comfortable homes, broad and fertile acres of farm lands and good, broad roads, making of travel a delight instead of a torture, as in the days of old.

Our citizens, I believe, rank up in the front van of progressive, thrifty, kind and neighborly people.

Our school facilities are something for every Chiltonian to be proud of. Our church privileges are numerous and well supported. Our sanitary department is high up in State records, and the health of our people, as a whole, is way above par. If you want a happy home and are willing to fulfill the conditions of good citizenship, come and abide with us and we will do you good and make you happy.

Methodist Church, Clanton

Methodist Church Here Stands As a Monument To Methodism In City

Beautiful Brick Edifice Erected At A Cost of Over $60,000.00; Has A Membership of 380

The history of the Methodist church in Clanton reaches back over a period of about sixty years. At that time when the section where Clanton now stands was nothing more than a country community, Methodist preachers appeared and preached in the homes where invitations were given. In 1873 a school house was built near the cemetery in East Clanton, and the first Methodist church was organized in that building soon after its completion.

The Rev. Meyers was the first regular pastor assigned from the Alabama conference to serve the church. A few years after his pastorate in Clanton he died and is now sleeping in our cemetery. It is supposed that the first Methodist church was built soon after the organization of the society in 1873. Alph Baker, a Protestant Methodist preacher, donated the lot where the present church building is now located, and a small frame building was erected. This building served the needs of the growing church until 1887, when the second church building took the place of the first.

There are those still among us who remember the effort put forth to build the second church structure. The lumber men gave the lumber, the brick masons gave their time, carpenters made no charge for work, the women served tables and the men put up the building. It was completed, but carried a small indebtedness. In the year 1890 Rev. A. J. Briggs, then a boy preacher, was assigned to Clanton. During that year he secured the services of Rev. Henry Johnson, and these two flaming evangels of the Cross, held a meeting in the new church and such an awakening was never felt before in this section. During that revival money was raised to settle all indebtedness and the church was dedicated.

We mention a few of the pastors serving the Clanton church in the closing years of the 18th century: J. W. Shores, Chas. Lamar, J. P. Sanders, L. H. S. Chappell, P. M. Guthrie, W. A. McCarty, B. E. Faegin. Since that time many of the prominent men of the Alabama Conference have been stationed among us and they have served with credit. We like to mention such names as I. F. Bilbro, R. R. Ellison, S. U. Turnipseed, R. J. Mills, I. W. Chalker, D. M. Pearson, C. C. Wilkinson, W. M. Cox, L. B. Green and E. A. Childs. The present pastor of the church is Dr. D. W. Haskew.

From the long ago we mention the names of Grandmother Sexton, Mrs. Anna Evans, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Chestnutt, Mr. and Mrs. Middleton. A host of other names could be given as having kept the faith and died with a victorious experience. What sacred memories come into our minds when we continue to call the roll: Mr. and Mrs. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Billie Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Callen, Lee Stewart, Mrs. W. W. Fox, J. C. Jones, and others.

The growth of the church has been marvelous, having on its roll at the present 380 members. It has a well organized Sunday school and its missinary society is doing most excellent work. During the last eight years the Missionary society alone has made more than ten thousand dollars, placing that amount in the parsonage, pipe organ and church building.

When Rev. C. C. Wilkinson came to Clanton in 1922 he conceived the idea of a magnificent church plant for Methodism in Clanton, and he set his forces to work to this end. The present building was erected at a cost of around sixty thousand dollars. A heavy indebtedness was carried over from the years of construction In 1930 Rev. E. A. Childs was successful in lifting the indebtedness, and now the church plant stands free of all indebtedness. The plant now stands as a monument to Methodism in the city, and carries with it ample room for expansion in the years to come. The large auditorium will seat five hundred people, and there is sufficient room in the educational annex for five hundred Sunday school pupils. At the close of the year 1930, under the pastorate of Rev. E. A. Childs, the church was dedicated, Bishop Ainsworth preaching the dedicatory sermon.

Isabella Future Farmers Of America Organization Progressing In Interest

By James M. Deason

The Isabella F. F. A. is progressing very fast. The chapter met at the beginning of the 1930-31 term of school. At the meeting they made plans for their projects. They were as follows:

1. Membership programs.
2. Improve campus grounds.
3. Fertilize shrubbery.
4. Finance educational trip.
5. Father and son banquet.

The chapter has proved its ability to carry out plans. It has completed almost all the projects for this year.

The chapter held the membership program a few weeks after school started. Several boys joined, in fact, all the boys of the Senior II and III classes belong to the chapter (with the exception of one.) In the Junior III and Senior I classes almost all the boys belong. They fertilized the shrubbery and the grass on the campus. They are working to finance the educational trip this coming summer. All the members have been asked to make a map of the places of interest that they would like to visit. The Father and Son banquet will be held March 6th. They have united it with the girls, Mother and Daughter banquet, so that they will be together, as it will be much cheaper. I can say that any person who attends one of these banquets will certainly enjoy it. To improve the campus the boys have planted shrubbery and Italian rye grass.

The chapter has sponsored the building of a room for the County Farm Bureau at the school building. This room is to be used for storing feed and seed to be sold in the Mulberry community. Mr. Thomas is to have charge of this sub-store. It will be a great help to the people of this community, because they will not have to go very far to get their seed or feed.

The chapter has representatives of three degrees of the F. F. A. They are

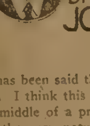
1. Greenhands, No. Rep., 11.
2. Future Farmers, No. Rep., 8, and two associate members.
3. State Farmers, No. Rep. 1 and one associate member.

We hope to have more members for all three degrees later on.

Last summer a number of the boys attended the State Convention at Auburn. We hope that every member will attend this summer. All the boys that attended this convention enjoyed it very much. The boys plan to come through Auburn and attend the Convention while they are on their educational trip. They have bought two pigs from Mr. Thomas. The pigs are to be sold at the end of school and the money put into the treasury. The money is to help pay the expenses on their trip.

The chapter had a splendid bunch of officers last year. The officers for this year are as follows: President, Marvin M. Durbin; vice-president, Crit DeRamus; secretary, R. C. Veazey; treasurer, Luther Mims; reporter, James Deason; local advisor, Mr. Earle Thomas. Marvin Durbin is also State Reporter.

If a young man is taking agriculture and there is an F. F. A. Chapter at his school, he ought to line up with it. No person will ever regret that he became a member of this fast-growing organization. Not that it is better than any other organization, nor that it will cause you to learn more than in some other organization. But it will give you a general insight of farm life as compared with others. If a chapter has a good program committee, the chapter will have many meetings with interesting programs with the facts [illegible]. Our last program was interesting. First was a talk by [illegible] Lee[illegible] [illegible] subject was, "Progress of [illegible] [illegible]nd, a talk by Crit De[illegible] [illegible] subject was "Thrift." Thi[illegible] a talk [illegible] Hannon Owens. His subject wa[illegible] [illegible]ting a Good Farm Mule." They all made splendid talks.



THE FAMILY DOCTOR

BY JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

Changing Doctors

It has been said that it's a bad practice to swap horses in the middle of the stream. I think this applies quite as well to the abrupt changing of physicians in the middle of a protracted disease.

In the very nature of some complaints, they advance very slowly, taking sometimes months and years to produce complete disability. A disorder that has been on hand two or three years cannot be cleaned up in as many weeks. Particularly is this true in diseases of the heart, lungs, and kidneys. To shift physicians impatiently every two weeks, in the effort to secure quick relief, is to invite disaster, it takes in some cases of very serious disease, several months of intimate relation and study on the part f the physician, to tide the patient ashore safely. This cannot be done by shifting tactics on the part of the invalid. It is his business to start right and stay right; his life may depend on it.

Years ago, a wealthy man offered me $1000 to clear up one-fourth of one per cent of albumin from his urine. I accepted his bantering proposition. "What shall I do first," he asked; "go to bed for four weeks," I answered. "Can't possibly do it; you see, I've got some business—" Of course he had. All men have affairs.

He went to a "magnetic healer," who cured by laying on of the han[illegible] $250 wasted. Another shift to a "pathy"; no better luck; then to a "pra[illegible] by this time dropsy was coming. A month with a masseur who agre[illegible] it out." It didn't rub out. The last I heard of the case, he had [illegible] and called his family doctor; too late—the kidneys were far beyond p[illegible] relief. Swapping horses [illegible] mid-stream. That man should be alive today. But he was too busy to "stay put." He has been dead a long time.

If you suspect serious disease, stick to your physician—don't neglect his advice—he's your best bet.

RELIGIOUS AND CULTURAL ACTIVITIES OF THE WOMEN IN CLANTON

Clanton Women Are Whole-Heartedly Engaged In All Phases Of Christian Service

One of the favorite class mottoes, "Esse quam videri," "To be rather than to seem," aptly describes the womanhood of Clanton. This statement is verified by their many activities. First, and foremost, they are Christian women. Large organized Sunday school classes are maintained in our churches. The Baptist Church has four such, with an enrollment of twenty-five to fifty in each class. The classes of the other churches are proportionate. These women also have a week-day religion. Unfortunate, indeed, is the agent who sets out to sell his article on Monday afternoon. Nobody is at home. The women have gone to the Missionary Society meetings.

In no town of like size will one find more women whole-heartedly engaged in this phase of Christian service. Practically the entire membership of the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches are enlisted. Space could not be had in one "Booster Edition" to enumerate their activities. Certainly they "Aid" in all church work, and then have their own pet undertakings also. They take particular care of the parsonage, pastorium, or manse, as the case may be. The Methodist ladies bought their beautiful pipe organ. The Baptist Missionary Society paid the full salary of Miss Mary N. Lyne, Missionary in Shanghai, China, above their regular pledges to missions, and then had the pleasure of knowing her personally as their State W. M. U. Secretary. This society has one hundred-fifty members, and is an A-1 organization. Mrs. J. P. Hayes is the efficient president, Mrs. P. T. Hinkle, vice-president, Mrs. Horsley White, Mission Treasurer, Mrs. D. C. Alred, Aid Treasurer.

The Methodist Society has begun a new year with unbounded enthusiasm under the leadership of Mrs. D. W. Haskew, President, Mrs. W. M. Polk, vice president, Mrs. L. E. Diefenderfer, Secretary and Treasurer. The Presbyterian Woman's Auxiliary has as president, Mrs. L. F. Gerald. This organization has assisted nobly in making possible the splendid new Presbyterian church, and looks forward to an even greater year.

Being a good Christian, to Clanton women, also means being interested in all the cultural activities of the town. The Grammar School P.-T. A. is fostering a lunch room, serving more than a hundred hot lunches daily; the new building is being equipped, and shrubbery planted; plans are also on foot for a spacious concrete driveway. Mrs. N. S. Johnson is president of this flourishing organization.

The High School P.-T. A. is having an equally successful year. The lovely new curtain and stage furnishings in the auditorium have been bought recently. The Home Economics Department is now being fitted out. Pianos have been purchased, pictures presented, and various and sundry other things necessary to maintain a high school on the State Accredited List. Mrs. L. E. Diefenderfer is president.

The womanhood of Clanton is not only interested in the cultural advantages of the children, but also in their own mental development. For many years they have had a Study Club, affiliated with the State Federation of Clubs. Mrs. J. E. Gowan is president of this organization. This year, they are studying Modern Drama. They have collected much valuable historical data in the county, had a series of very interesting papers published on the same, and have preserved them. To foster literary attainment in the schools, awards are given each year.

The Music Study Club is a younger but no less popular organization. Their Year Book shows that an interesting and informing course of study, based on the music of various countries, has been prepared. Mrs. L. F. Gerald is president of this club.

Mrs. C. E. Stapp, our County Child Welfare Worker, and Chest Fund custodian, than whom there is none better anywhere, also knows that "Esse quam videri" is a suitable motto for Clanton's womanhood, because she has learned that she has but to let the women know her needs and they will make a concerted effort to satisfy them—whether it be "All-Day Sewings," "Clinics," "Drives," or what not. These are some of the outward results of inward beauty.

"A woman that feareth Jehovah, she shall be praised. Give her of the fruit of her hands; And let her works praise her in the gates."

The Scrap Book

By Charles Lamb

I have had playmates, I have had companions,
In my days of childhood, in my joyful schooldays,
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

Ghost-like, I paced round the haunts of my childhood.
Earth seemed a desert I was bound to traverse,
Seeking to find the old familiar faces.

Friend of my bosom, thou more than a brother,
Why wert not thou born in my father's dwelling?
So might we talk of the old familiar faces—

How some they have died, and some they have left me,
And some are taken from me; all are departed,
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

Verbena Service Station

CHAS. GULLEDGE VERBENA, ALA.

Verbena, Town Long Famous For Its Culture, Hospitality And Refinement Of Its Citizens

Verbena is a village situated on the L & N Railroad, thirty-two miles north of Montgomery and sixty-four miles south of Birmingham. Its population is about five hundred, composed of both white and colored people.

It has long been noted for the culture, hospitality, and refinement of its white citizens.

Its principal agricultural products are cotton, corn, and melons, but a great variety of fruits, garden products and other crops are raised for home consumption. Its soil is principally Ruston sandy, and Ruston gravelly, and Orangeburg loam.

Its elevation varies from four hundred to five hundred feet above sea level, and it is noted for it mild and delightful climate in all seasons of the year.

Graphite is the only mineral that has been discovered in sufficient quantities to justify mining operations, yet small quantities of gold, iron, and mica have been found within four miles of its center, and are mined and marketed in small quantities from time to time. The deposits of graphite on Chestnut Creek about two and one half miles east of Verbena are of the finest quality to be found in the United States, and is being mined and refined by the Flaketown Graphite Company, and is shipped to all parts of the country.

It forests were once well covered with an abundance of pine, oak, poplar, hickory, gum, and chestnut timber, but the activities of the axemen and the saw mill men have about denuded the forests of these valuable woods. It is sad to know that these stately old pines, oaks and other kings of the forests are gone forever, but we hope to see in their places harvests which will mean as much as did these valuable woods.

It is believed that DeSoto was the first white man to ever visit this part of Alabama. The remains of an old fort may yet be seen within four miles of Verbena, and it is believed that it was built by DeSoto. Among the early white settlers, after the Indians had been driven from this part of Alabama, in 1838, weer the following: The Coopers, Dennis, Nelsons, Price, and Poseys. Peter Cooper owned most all the land on which Verbena is now situated. On this land he farmed extensively with slave labor. His home was located on the hill where the residence of the late Dr. H. W. Caffey now stands. At his home he accomodated travelers going from north to south and on their returning journeys. Traders with great droves of mules from Tennessee and Kentucky, making their toilsome journeys to the great cotton plantations, of Central and Southern Alabama, and Louisiana; great hog drovers, with immense herds of hogs from Tennessee, making their way to the ports of New Orleans and Mobile, apple farmers, hauling their crops of apples to the southern markets; were all eager to make this their stopping place, because they knew bounteous repasts of venison, steak and wild turkey awaited them and here they would find an abundance of provender for their weary animals.

Mr. Cooper was known as the wealthiest man of his county. He owned more than a thousand acres of land, and had a sufficient number of slaves to operate all the machinery on his farm, including his saw mill, grist mill, and ginnery, located on Chestnut Creek, near the junction of Sandy and Chestnut Creeks. He lived to a ripe old age and died at his home in 1884, after rearing a large family.

The village of Verbena was founded in the year 1869. The first real residence and store of Verbena were built by Captain Norton, of "Steam Boat Fame." The first house he built was north of Chestnut Creek, near the junction of the Knights Ferry and Higgins Ferry roads. It was on the preliminary survey of the then prospective railroad. This building burned, and he rebuilt on a later survey of the railroad. This house is still standing and is known as the "Norton House."

On completion of the L & N Railroad in 1881, the depot was established and operated in a part of the store of Captain Norton. This house was later moved northeast of its first location. It was occupied by Mr. Brown who later established the Brown Printing Co. of Montgomery. This house is still standing and for many years was known as the "Brown House." It is now a part of the Verbena Service Station property.

On removal of this house the railroad erected a depot which was used until about 1910, when a new one was erected and the old one converted into a cotton shed.

A number of wealthy planters of Montgomery and Bullock Counties, and also some residents of Montgomery, desiring to escape the dreaded malaria and yellow fever diseases so prevalent during the summer months, selected Verbena as a desirable place to build their summer homes. Therefore the name "Summerville" was first given to the village. But there being another place in Alabama by this name, it was necessary to change it. There are conflicting opinions as to how the name "Verbena" came to be adopted, the most plausible being that Colonel Sayre once carried a bouquet of beautiful wild Verbena, which grew here in abundance, to the railroad station. This, being so much admired and commented upon by others at the station, inspired the thought of naming the town "Verbena."

Many of those who made their summer homes here found it so delightful that they made their permanent homes here, among them were: Major J. C. Gibson, Colonel B. J. Baldwin, Colonel Sayre, A. J. Brooks, Dr. J. S. Pitts, the Mitchells, Merriweathers, Williamsons, Barretts, Clisby's, Jno. W. Hughes, Josiah Morris and others.

The accommodations being insufficient for those seeking the advantages of the summer resort, a stock company was formed and a large hotel was built in the year 1882. It was very successfully operated for many years under the name of the "Clifton House."

A. J. Brooks established a store about 1876-6 in the building that is still standing and occupied by T. B. Deramus Grocery and Feed Store. He later built a large store house which is still standing, now occupied by the estate of D. I. Deramus, as their main store building.

In the year 1876 F. A. Gulledge established a store in a building that he afterward tore down, and in its place built the large store building that is now occupied by his sons, J. H. and W. A. Gulledge. A number of small stores have been established and operated for a few years, but those established by Brooks and Gulledge are the oldest ones.

The stores in operation now are Gulledge Bros., Estate of D. I. Deramus, H. T. Williams, W. H. Strock, T. B. Deramus, S. D. Williams, Verbena Service Station, Hardy's Service Station, and the Verbena Drug Company.

Some of the physicians who have practiced in Verbena for any length of time are as follows: Drs. J. J. Dawson, J. S. Pitts, Tom Davis, H. W. Caffey, S. T. Williamson, A. J. L. Dennis, T. M. Barnett, C. S. Strock and J. D. Eiland, all of whom were successful in their profession, and prospered financially. The last two are our physicians today.

Strange as it may seem, Verbena had no bank until the year 1919, when the Bank of Verbena was organized, and opened for business in January, 1920.

In the year 1874, through the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Paine, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Baldwin, Major Gibson, Captain and Mrs. Norton, Colonel Sayre and others, a Methodist Church was completed. It bears the distinction of being the first church in this part of the country to have a bell. The same bell now calls its members to worship, and became famous during the World War by ringing at four o'clock each afternoon, to call all the people who believed in prayer to pray for the victory of the cause for which our country was fighting.

Five years after the establishment of the Methodist Church, the Baptist Church was established through the noble efforts of Mr. Kineon Wells, A. J. Brooks, Mr. W. B. Strock, J. T. Bland, and others. The building is still standing.

The first church service held in Verbena was conducted by Reverend Walter McDaniel, and the first school was taught by Miss Bettie Bonham, in the small house across the street in front of J. W. Lett's home.

The two-story part of the present Grammar School Building was built in 1882 by Major J. C. Gibson, Col. B. J. Baldwin, Dr. J. C. Courtney, F. A. Gulledge, A. J. Brooks, W. B. Strock, J. T. Bland, Kineon Wells, and many others. In this building Profesosr W. U. Acree, the first principal, taught a sucessful schol for a number of years. In 1918 our school took on new life, and each year thereafter a new room was added and an additional teacher employed, until 1923, under the able leadership of Prof. W. E. G. Sutton, who became principal in 1921, the Verbena High School was made accredited and now ranks high among Alabama's high schools. Verbena schools have an enrollment of nearly 400 pupils.

In 1921 and '25 through the untiring efforts of Prof. W. E. G. Sutton, principal, and J. C. Pattillo, J. H. Gulledge, and S. L. Gibson, trustees and building committee, a beautiful stone High School Building with large auditorium was erected on the hill formerly occupied by the home of Colonel B. J Baldwin. This lot commands a splendid view of the railroad, paved highway, and the surrounding country.

Verbena receives its electricity from "Mitchell Dam," one of Alabama Power Company's master Hydro-Electric Power Plants on Coosa River, only seven and one half miles distant.

VERBENA HIGH SCHOOL

One of the finest school buildings in Chilton County, built of Native Stone and modern throughout. W. E. G. Sutton is principal of this school, and it ranks as one of the best in this section.

PROMINENT CITIZEN OF VERBENA

F. A. GULLEDGE

The subject of this sketch is Mr. F. A. Gulledge, of Verbena, Alabama, whose past life is as follows:

Born in Coosa County, Alabama, September 25, 1849, hence eighty-one years old. Born on a farm where he lived until he was twenty-seven. During his early boyhood days he obtained a limited education in the one-teacher school at Providence, sometimes missing one or two years and hardly ever getting more than six weeks schooling each year. Married at nineteen years of age to Cordelia Collier of the same community. She was born October 30th, 1845, hence eighty-five years old. To them have been born five children all living and prosperous, in Verbena. His first home, bought with borrowed money, interest upon which was from 8% to 20%. Upon the sale of his home in the latter days of 1876, leaving him six hundred dollars, came to Verbena and invested it in a small mercantile business which by strict economy, and perseverance his business increased from year to year until at one time it was the largest business in Chilton County. In 1884 he built the store now occupied by Gulledge Bros. and which business grew more prosperous until 1889 he resolved within himself that he should leave business and enjoy a more quiet life. To this end on January 1st, 1903, he locked the store doors, store full goods, handed his keys to his five children with the injunction to follow his example. The business then prospered under the firm name of Oliver & Gulledge Bros. A few years later Oliver sold out his and his wife's interest to J. H. and W. A. Gulledge who have since run the business under the name of Gulledge Bros.

Mr. Gulledge's slogan in business was "The Best Goods for the Price, One Price to Black or White, Rich or Poor." Gulledge Bros. have used the same slogan, result the same customers who traded here forty to fifty years ago are today customers of his old store now run by Gulledge Bros. Politically, Mr. Gulledge is an uncompromising Democrat, religiously affiliating with the Methodist Church, but deep down in his heart a natural non-sectarian. Yet, politically and religiously, he is not one of the intolerant kind.

Mr. Gulledge was born of English stock on his father's side, a native of Anson County, North Carolina. His mother, Elizabeth Duke Mitchell, a native of Virginia, and pure Scotch-Irish, hence it is little wonder the stand he takes in both politics and religion. Mr. Gulledge, although advanced in age, very spry, commander of a considerable real estate business, with all the alertness in business, and with a social nature becoming a much younger man. Memory remarkably good, eye-sight fair and ready to undertake the solving of any financial question or social entanglement. He owns 4500 acres of land, more than one hundred pieces of property in Birmingham, all of which he looks after in person. For twenty years the largest individual tax payer in this county, taxes included in other counties of Alabama, Oklahoma, and Arkansas. Large stockholder in different enterprises including three banks.

Mr. Gulledge's argument and admonition to the young is to fix their ideal and go to it, and that a large percentage will reach the goal of their ambition.

Mrs. Gulledge is living and enjoying reasonable health (except for a recent accident) surrounded by her five children, seven grand-children and one, only great-grand-child, and all the five children in business of one kind or another.

In September, 1888, Mr. Gulledge resolved never to owe a man anything on the first day of any succeeding year. He amended that later by resolving to pay any little debt he might owe each Saturday night to his employees or to others. For forty-two years he has lived up to those resolutions, and he admonishes his friends, especially the young to adopt the same slogan. In 1899 when Mr. Gulledge resolved to quit business he owned 12,000 acres which he resolved to sell and has since sold, on long time and easy payments, mainly to the poor, who otherwise, would probably have never owned land. As it is, they are nearly all owners of homes and doing well today.

Mr. and Mrs. Gulledge, both born of fairly well to do people were broken up by the Civil War, and had absolutely not one penny in cash when they got married, in fact he borrowed the money to pay for his marriage license, and worked it out three months after, at 50c and one meal a day.

Gulledge Brothers are successors to F. A. Gulledge, who established the business in 1876 and in 1903, presented it to his five children, two of whom sold their interests to H. B. Oliver, J. H. Gulledge and W. A. Gulledge, who operated it under the name of Oliver & Gulledge Bros. In 1913, J. H. and W A. Gulledge, the present owners, bought the interest of H. B. Oliver, and it has since been operated under the name of Gulledge Bros.

In 1928 Gulledge Bros. having joined the Independent Grocers Alliance of America (I. G. A.) erected an addition to their large store and on December 19, 1928, opened a fancy grocery and market giving to Verbena all of the advantages as to asortment, and price enjoyed by any of the cities. The IGA is not a chain store, but is one of many independently owned businesses in thirty-eight states, associated together for the purpose of mass buying, giving it the second largest buying power of any business in the United States, which enables its members to compete with any and all chain stores.

BILLY SMITH TELLS WHY HE IS A BIG BOOSTER FOR CLANTON and CHILTON CO.

By R. C. "Bob" Gore

In discussing the many advantages of the Town of Clanton and the County of Chilton, the writer asked Billy Smith, editor of the Chilton County News, a direct question, "Just why do you believe in Clanton and Chilton County?"

"I believe in Clanton because I know Clanton. It is one of the best located cities, commercially and industrially, in the South; it is the marketing center and the 'hub' of one of the most productive agricultural sections, and this, combined with the marketing of a large amount of fruit and vegetables, is another incentive that Clanton should in the near future take its rightful place as one of the leading cities of the South.

"The educational advantages of Clanton are unexcelled. The city has a school system that is well abreast of the times, and with a high school curriculum on a par with the best in the United States.

"Clanton is the home of Hydro-Electric Power for the State of Alabama. Millions of dollars have been spent by the Alabama Power Company in the construction of Lay Dam and Mitchell Dam, two gigantic structures which are a credit to the South."

Thrift And Industry

"While we do not claim that Clanton is an earthly paradise, we think we may fairly say that our city ranks well up with any community in any section of the country. Our men and women are simply men and women—no better and no worse than their neighbors anywhere. Clanton and Chilton County is a community where thrift and industry are sure of their reward, and where the flowers blossom in gorgeous profusion and their delicious fragrance rivals the heavy-laden air of the tropics. All these things come naturally to Alabama.

"Nature's sunbeams warm the people and the plants—the soft Gulf winds temper the winter and the summer. The delightful climate makes it possible for one to be out of doors all the year round, and opportunities for enjoying all outdoor sports of field and stream combine to make Clanton a mecca for all who seek an ideal place to build new homes. A hearty and cordial welcome—an old fashioned Southern welcome—awaits all good citizens who may cast their lot with Clanton, the city of opportunities." Thus spake the editor of the News.

In the fall of 1928 Miss Scarborough moved to Clanton and has filled the position of Elementary Supervisor of Chilton County schools. She has 107 elementary teachers under her supervision and Miss Scarborough's popularity in this position is well brought out by the wonderful cooperation of these teachers.

A contemporary recently made a slip by atrributing to Commodore Perry the famous remark, "Don't give up the ship." Now, as everyone knows, it was John Paul Jones who said that. What Commodore Perry really said was "Damn the torpedoes," after hearing of Farragut's telling Gridley to fire if and when ready. This merely for the sake of keeping the record crooked.

PEOPLES SAVINGS BANK, CLANTON GIVES 30 YEARS FAITHFUL SERVICE

Founded In 1901, Has Been Bulwark Of Industries—Played Important Part During World War

To serve the people of a community for almost 30 years is a record of which to be proud

The Peoples Savings Bank of Clanton is the oldest bank in Chilton County. It first opened its doors to its depositors December 7, 1901. And since that time its reputation for service and security has been widespread

Its record of achievement might well vie with that of the finest banking institutions in the land. Time has told the story of the progress of the Peoples Savings Bank, which has enjoyed a constant growth since it opened its doors in Clanton in 1901.

The wonderful achievement of the bank is ascribed to the personnel, which during the 30 years has directed its destinies. Men of the keenest business acumen and reputation have been at its helm. Men who could be intrusted to lead so vast and important an institution to the success it is at present enjoying

One of the most cherished relics of the Peoples Savings Bank is the record book which contains the reports of the first organizers of the bank. Wm. F. Holloway was its first president, however, the operation of the bank [illegible] mostly in the hands of W. T. Callen and Jno. A. Thomas. W. T. Callen was elected president a short time after and served as such for 22 years until his death in 1922. He was succeeded by his son, F. J. Callen, in 1922, who remained as president until his voluntary retirement in 1927. H. G. Boyd served the bank as president from 1927 to 1930, and is now vice president of the City National Bank of Selma, Ala. Mr. Callen was recalled as president in 1930 and is at this time serving the Peoples Savings Bank in this capacity

The records reveal that in 1901 the capital of the Peoples Savings Bank was $15,000, and deposits that year were approximately $20,000. The bank's deposits today are $388,000, with a capital of $50,000, surplus and profits over $50,000, making a total of over $100,000. The bank owns its own building on 2nd Avenue and boasts of one of the most modern and well equipped banks.

During the World War the Peoples Savings Bank financed considerable of Liberty Loan Drives and after the war took the entire quota of Chilton County for the Victory Loan. The stockholders have never been assessed nor has any new capital been put into the bank. Dividends have been paid regularly since 1902 and the capital structure has grown from the original of $15,000, to a total of well over $100,000. The Peoples Savings bank is owned entirely by citizens of Chilton County and all dividends are circulated from time to time right back to the people of the county. The bank believes in truth in advertising, never misleading people into thinking there is any special mystery in successful bank operation, but that conservative management and faithful performance of duty entirely determine the success of the institution. The record of the Peoples Savings Bank clearly proves this thing to be correct.

The stockholders are never concerned about earnings, but accept their duties as servants to the public and their objective at all times is to safeguard the funds placed with them for safe keeping. They have proven faithful to this trust for nearly 30 years and stand today as a monument of strength not only in Chilton County, but is outstanding in the State of Alabama.

The Peoples Savings Bank has graduated many young men and women who are now connected with other banks and doing well, which reflects on the wonderful training in this bank.

The officers of the bank are: F. J. Callen, President; N. S. Johnson, vice president; H. G. Heflin, cashier; W. L. Smith, assistant cashier; Miss Delilah Kelly, secretary. The directors of the bank are: N. S. Johnson, G. C. Harris, W. L. Popwell, Walter Popwell, H. S. Shaw, F. J. Callen and H. G. Heflin.

Dr. Pepper Shows A Remarkable Growth In Five-Year Period

Popular Beverage Has Cultivated New Millions Each Year By Fine Food Qualities

That the popular and delicious drink, Dr. Pepper, has ben showing continuously for five years, a remarkable growth in distribution, is shown in a map recently prepared by the company.

Although it is perhaps the oldest branded carbonated beverage in America, having been first marketed in Texas more than 42 years ago, its history dates from the spring of 1927, when it was introduced into many other states. Dr. Pepper was originated in Waco, Texas, and was sold there for 37 years before it was sold in the other states.

At present this popular beverage is being distributed on a large scale in 19 different states. Each year, sales increased tremendously, and now this company is enjoying a wide popularity wherever their attractive signs are displayed.

Dr. Pepper contains, besides a delicious combination of fruit juice, essences and abstracts, it contains a full ounce of pure cane sugar. In the chemistry of syrup making, this is made "invert," which means, in effect, that it is practically pre-digested. Like a flash, the blood drinks up this new energy. Analysis shows that a bottle, or a glass, of Dr. Pepper contains a high degree of real food value. That, it was learned is where their slogan, "Drink a Bite to Eat," originated, as it was stated by a representative of the company, that it is truly a bite to eat, and they recommend it at ten, two and four, o'clock.

In the Chilton County section, the attractive plant of the Dr. Pepper Bottling Company at Montgomery supplies this beverage. This plant is owned by Harold Link, of Birmingham, and is managed by Logan B. Schirmer, who keeps an attentive eye on the interests of his company and yet at the same time, devoted untiring efforts toward giving the public one of the most popular and delicious drinks on the market. A visit to the Montgomery plant of the Dr. Pepper Bottling Company, will show anyone, a sanitary and well conducted firm.

Congressman From 4th Dist.

MAJOR LAMAR JEFFERS

Major Lamar Jeffers, of Anniston, Alabama and a member of Congress from the Fourth District of Alabama, to which office he succeeded himself last November. Major Jeffers is possibly one of the most noted and widely known Congressmen from Alabama. His World War record stands out boldly without assistance as one of service and bravery.

Major Jeffers is also a member of the American Legion, having become affiliated with that organization of ex-service men at the time of its first organizing. He has been a member of the Committee in the House of Representatives on World War Veterans Legislation since the creation of Committee and has always taken an active part in that work, having been outstandingly instrumental in securing the Veterans Hospital for Alabama, one of the largest of its kind. Major Jeffers World War Service overseas was with the 82nd Division, as Captain of Company "G" 326th Infantry, commanding that Company in the St. Mihiel drive and in the Meuse-Argonne offensive until October 11, 1918, when he was severely wounded by machine gun bullets in an attack on St. Juvin, France.

On the night of October 10, 1918, Major Jeffers reconnoitered a badly damaged bridge and early in the morning of the 11th he supervised its repair, being continually under intense machine gun fire from the opposing army. There are numerous instances where Captain Jeffers was outstanding in service and bravery to his country overseas during the World War, and page after page could be filled with accounts of such instances.

Major Jeffers became a delegate to the Eleventh Annual Congress of FIDAC, which was held in Washington and New York, the latter part of 1930. He was a delegate from the American Legion of Alabama.

It is a pleasure and an honor to the News to have such a man represented in this edition. Major Jeffers' friends in this state and elsewhere are countless, as they are numbered wholly by his acquaintances.

IN SEARCH OF PROSPERITY

Business and political leaders, looking ahead in search of prosperity, have agreed upon an axiom that America's well-being can not be advanced by narrow international policies. But application of the axiom to present-day conditions is not so easy. Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the Chase National Bank, thinks it points to a reduction of war debts and a lowering of tariffs. Collier's Weekly, strenuously nationalistic, takes a middle ground by asserting bluntly that "our prosperity depends on the earning capacity and well-being of the people of all the world."

hilton's History Is Story Of Fight Against Great Difficulties

dications Of Future Prosperity And Development; Industrial Opportunities, Poultry and Truck Farming, Churches, Schools and Social Advantages

Chilton County's history is made up of relatively small incidents. The annals that geographical and political subdivision of Alabama record no great battles n its soil, no outstanding event of world importance. They tell rather of the uggle of a courageous people against the handicap of many years of isolation ough lack of roads and other means of transportation; their efforts to combat evils of illiteracy, to establish schools and churches; to build towns and mes. One must look for Chilton's great achievements in the near future, ind of the past.

hat section of the hilly country west the Coosa River was originally the ting grounds of the Upper Creek ians. Their towns were chiefly on Coosa County—east side of the river. West of the stream were the woodhills where deer, bear and smaller e were hunted in due season, where nerous creeks afforded good fishing refuge for beavers, valued for their t and pelts. The Indian, on his hunting ground, was a conservand rarely killed game during its eding seasons. The territory reservor hunting was often used in com by numerous tribes, that recogd a truce from tribal wars when r hunting parties met upon these rvations.

here were Indian villages along lberry creek, and the mound buildleft their monuments at various ts, the largest of which may still be about 1 1-2 miles southeast of rsby.

ioneers from the Carolinas, Virginnd Georgia came with their negro es in 1833 and established perma settlements, chiefly along Big berry creek and other streams in Coastal Plain areas of the county. n and wheat were grown in quans for local use and ground at nums mills operated by water power g the streams. Whenever the land became worn out by the crude and wasteful farming methods of those days new forests were deadened, cleared and planted, while the old fields were used for grazing sheep and cattle and soon were covered with second growth timber.

Before the war between the sections freed the slaves, cotton became the staple crop of that region and some of the plantations contained from 1,000 to 5,000 acres. After the close of the war most of the large plantations were broken up and a new system of agriculture was gradually developed though cotton has remained the chief crop.

Forests of long-leaf and short-leaf pine covered the greater part of the land and the first industries were the manufacture of lumber and naval stores Logging and lumbering became the winter occupation of many of the small farmers. When the railroads came, the larger tracts of timber were soon removed and sawn into lumber at several large sawmills in different parts of the county.

Chilton County Established

Bibb, Autauga, Perry, and Shelby counties lost portions of their territory when the legislature carved out of those four the present boundaries of Chilton County, on December 30, 1866. When first established the new political body was given the name of Baker county, for Alfred Baker, a prominent citizen of the Autauga section. On December 17, 1871, it was changed by act of the legislature and named in honor of Judge William Chilton, chief justice of the supreme court and former member of the Confederate Congress, wherein he represetned the Montgomery district.

The act of establishment named Reuben Powell, Anderson Baker, William Vines, E. Ward and John Pernell as commissioners to hold an election, locate a county seat, build a courthouse and jail, and levy a tax to pay for these evidences of civilization and government. The first county seat of Chilton County was at Grantville, about four miles east of the present court house at Clanton. The old building was made of logs. It had but one room, about 16 x 20 feet. There must have been a jail, also though no mention is made of such in any of the records so far discovered. The country's first officers were Mordecai Robertson, probate judge, and Thomas H. Wililams, sheriff. Both were commissioned in 1869.

The Town of Clanton was laid out in 1872 and was named for the Confederate General James Holt Clanton, a native of Georgia and long a prominent figure in political life of Alabama. A more imposing courthouse was built at the new county seat and served its purpose until it was burned. The South and North Railroad, which later became the Louisville and Nashville, reached the point where Clanton now stands in 1870, and later connected Montgomery and Birmingham. Clanton and Birmingham are practically the same age.

The Southern Railway crosses the western part of the county giving transportation to the markets of Birmingham and Selma. A branch of the Mobile & Ohio railroad crosses the Southern at Maplesville.

The pure air and a moderate summer climate is due in part to the high elevation of the greater part of Chilton County. North of Clanton, Ala., about 6 1-2 miles is an elevation arising about 830 feet above sea level, known as Jemison Mountain. Near that point is said to be the highest elevation of the L & N Railroad south of the Tennessee River. The county is shown by Government survey to have an average elevation of about 500 feet.

Lay Dam, on the Coosa River about 12 miles from Clanton, was one of the first of the giant hydro-electric power plants completed in Alabama by the Alabama Power Company. Some years later Mitchell Dam was completed further south. The Power Company is by far the largest tax payer in the county by reason of these plants and other improvements and a good part of the prosperity and development of the county within recent years is due to expenditures made for construction and other purposes by the big corporation.

Strawberries, poultry raising, dairying and diversified farming have also contributed to improve the income and general prosperity of this section, tho cotton remains the chief money crop.

The strawberry crop has shown a steady growth and hundreds of cars are shipped annually. Shipments start each year about one week later than from Castleberry, and the berries are of fine flavor, color, and shipping qualities. There are numerous large poultry farms in the county and this industry is growing rapidly both in volume and in the quality of birds produced. The wealth annually produced from this source would be difficult to calculate, but it is sufficient to form an important item of local prosperity and the money from the industry is widely distributed.

Besides producing pure, sanitary, healthful milk products the dairy industry is bringing to the farmers of Chilton County thousands of dollars each year.

TOWN OF MAPLESVILLE ONE OF THE OLDEST IN CHILTON COUNTY

Has Shown Remarkable Growth Due to Progressive And Interesting Citizens

On the Western border of Chilton County is situated the Town of Maplesville, one of the most progressive towns of the County. Near it is the big Mulberry Creek which furnished its sportsmen and citizenship territory for fishing and hunting and has a great potential value as a water supply for the future use of the Town, for domestic and commercial purposes. The altitude of the Town of Maplesville is 338 feet.

This little city is traversed by the M & O and Southern Railroads which render to the shipper and passenger adequate and convenient service. The Town is known for its convenience as a place to market lumber, and agricultural products, and is a fine place for the marketing of cotton, the merchants always giving the best prices for agricultural products, thereby stimulating a spirit to sell and buy at home.

The citizenship of Maplesville is of the original Southern stock and can trace their descent back to the original settlers of the Mississippi Territory, which later furnished the soil for Alabama. They also maintain with pride the Southern hospitality and a person may visit the town as a stranger, with expectation of being treated as such, but as soon as he enters the gates of Maplesville, he finds that he is among friends who are friendly, and people who live on a high plane and are charitable and work for the ideal that the world may be made better for their having lived. The town has a splendid graded public schol and its citizens are wide awake and always grasp every opportunity to improve the educational facilities of the town and county. In their school, the students are offered the same opportunities as are furnished in the larger cities of the state. There is employed a high class and efficient corps of teachers and with the cooperation of the Trustees and P.T. A.'s, the school has made a splendid record and one that the citizenship of the town can be justly proud.

There is located in the Town, two churches, the Missionary Baptist and Methodist Episcopal Church, South, each having a large and enthusiastic membership. Both maintain a standard Sunday School and with the ability of the pastors of these churches and the lay leaders, the town is kept up to a high standard in its morals and a spirit of brotherly love prevails, and a real loyalty exists for the ideals of American citizenship.

We find in this Town a large number of Masons, who are members of Maplesville Lodge No. 706 A. F. & A. M. This order has just recently rebuilt their Masonic Hall, which compares favorably with any in the small towns of the state.

There is also in this Town an Eastern Star Chapter, which has an enthusiastic membership of both ladies and men. This Chapter ranks among the best in the state, and among the ladies of its membership are to be found some of the most proficient in the work of the order.

Maplesville has a strong and substantial bank, which carries the town name, "The Bank of Maplesville," which institution is backed by men of high standing in the state and county. This bank has shown a steady growth since its organization and it is today one of the strongest banks in the county. This institution has for its cashier, Mr. John Maples, who knows the banking business and gives to it every ounce of his knowledge and energy.

The officers and stockholders of this bank have been instrumental in backing the agricultural development of the county as well as the Town and community of Maplesville; each of them is a genuine booster for the Town and county and foresee much progress in this section in the next few years.

As indicated before, Maplesville's professional and business men are of the highest type of citizens who are well and favorably rated in the business and commercial world.

The town of Maplesville was first settled about three miles east of its present location in the year 1822. It took its name from a prominent pioneer named Maples. Old Maplesville was located on the stage road from Montgomery to Tuscaloosa, the latter the capital of Alabama. In 1850 the railroad known as the Selma, Rome and Dalton, was completed from Selma to Dalton, Georgia. Due to the inconvenience of mail deliveries, the post office was moved, in 1856, from the old town to the present location of Maplesville. So the railroad was responsible for the abandonment of the old town and the growth of the Maplesville of today.

Reding Hicks, became the pioneer merchant and post master of Maplesville. In 1860 he sold his place of business to Noah Foshee, who operated this business until his death. Mr. Foshee was succeeded in this business by his oldest son, later by his second son, who is today carrying on the business in the same location as did his father seventy years ago.

The Mobile and Ohio Railroad was built through Maplesville in 1897. In 1911 Maplesville suffered a very disastrous fire which destroyed practically the entire business district. These old buildings were soon replaced with modern brick. The town boasts of about twenty prosperous business houses and a population of about 500 law-abiding and church-going people.

WORTHY OF SUPPORT

High hopes are held for the success of the metal curtailment program now being put into effect by the mining industry.

Basically the problem is like that of the oil, the farm, the rubber industry and others—to adjust supply to demand. When an industry produces more of a commodity than it can sell the result is a depression. Surplus stocks pile up and prices drop to the point where it is impossible to make a profit.

When any major industry finds itself in a predicament such as this the entire industrial structure of the nation is affected. The efforts of mining to regain its economic balance are worthy of support.

The public expects to know about the business world and what they have to sell.

Out of consideration for the public, every business man should advertise.

The printed page is the proper place to advice the public who you are, where you are and what you have to sell.

Every business should look ahead. They must anticipate; they must employ well established policies of modern business; they should have faith in their city, faith in their business, confidence in themselves, and then advertise!

THORSBY ONE OF MOST THRIVING CITIES IN CHILTON COUNTY

Though Only 37 Years Old Town Has Made Many Advances

While less than forty years of age, the City of Thorsby has made for itself, through its constant and rapid growth, and advancement along civic, industrial and business lines, the reputation of being one of the most progressive towns in Alabama. This reputation is verified by the figures in the postal receipts in the Thorsby post office, and through the railroad office of Thorsby.

In 1894, K. G. Falgre, J. F. Peterson and T. T. Thorson, men from the Northern States, conceived the idea of coming South and forming a Northern Colony. They organized under the name of the Concordia Land Co., and purchased large holdings in and around the present townsite of Thorsby. The post office at Strasburg was abolished and removed to Thorsby. People began to come from the North to look over the country and many of them joined the organized colony, buying lands.

Thorsby was an attractive little town from its beginning. The early settlers being a very thrifty people, realized the advantage in building good homes. In the first years of its existence Thorsby had two Lutheran Churches, later one of these churches becoming the property of the United Protestant church (Congregational). Later the Baptists built a church which has become a very active factor in Thorsby religious circles. A Public School building, hotel and business houses were built from the beginning.

The first five or six years of Thorsby were devoted to building and setting out vineyards and orchards, including peaches, apples and plums. On the 6th day of May, 1901, an ordinance was passed to adopt a code of laws for the Town of Thorsby and a charter was drawn up.

Thorsby is located in the Central part of Chilton County, on the Main line of the Louisville and Nashvilel railroad. It is half way between Birmingham and Montgomery. The town occupies the highest point of a gravelly plateau, and is surrounded by fruit and vegetable farms interspersed with woods of pine and oak. The location is well drained and the climate is ideal both summer and winter.

In 1902 the farmers and business men of Thorsby, realizing the necessity of an organization for the advancement of agriculture in general, formed what is today known as the Thorsby Fruit and Truck Growers Association. From a mere handful of members this organization has grown until today it has over two hundred and fifty members. Hundreds of cars of fruit and vegetables are shipped through this organization each year and hundreds of thousands of dollars are placed in the farmers' hands. In 1929 over 100 cars of strawberries were shipped. The organization is in touch with the leading markets and receives the best prices for all commodities. Carl C. Peterson is President; E. R. Piper, Secretary, and J. M. Smith, Manager and Treasurer.

Largely as a result of the interest of some Alabama Congregational leaders, Thorsby Institute was started on September 17, 1906, with a High School department and two grades preparatory for high school. At the time it began there was no high school in the county. Mr. J. Lambe, a graduate of Brown University, was its first principal. In 1919 Miss Helen Jenkins became principal and through her leadership the school has grown until it is today recognized as one of the leading preparatory schools in Alabama. Its graduates speak for the standards of the school. For several years the school has been affiliated with the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Thorsby Institute is itself a booster for Thorsby and Chilton County.

The official board of the town is composed of Carl C. Petersen, Mayor; E. R. Piper, City Clerk; E. W. Butler, Alderman; Donald Merchant, Alderman; M. E. Willis, Alderman; M. J. Soberg, Alderman, and J. M. Smith, Alderman.

CONFECTIONERY OPERATOR

M. A. WRIGHT

M. A. Wright, owner of the Wright's Soda Fountain in Thorsby, is the popular son of J. A. and Rosa Franklyn Wright. He was born in Jemison, Chilton County, Alabama, in 1905, and graduated from the Jemison High School in 1927.

On leaving school, Mr. Wright entered the grocery business, as clerk, and after a few months entered business for himself. Mr. Wright has one of the most popular soda fountains in the county. It is a rendezvous for the young people of the Town of Thorsby. Each day at lunch time, this popular place of business is crowded with students and teachers enjoying the delicious lunches served by Wright's.

Mr. Wright carries a complete line of school supplies and sundries. Nunnally's and Norris' candies are carried for those who "care to reach for a sweet." A complete stock of standard and staple patent medicines are also carried at Wrights.

Mr. Wright is a young man of sterling qualities and great vision. He is vitally enthusiastic in his town and county and is a Booster.

British lexicographers have made a list of 43 words, which they declare comprise one-half of the daily conversation one hears. They are: And, as, at, about, all, be, but, can, come, day, dear, for, get, go, have, hear, her, if, it, in, me, much, not, on, or, one, say, she, so, that, the, they, those, this, though, time, to, we, will, with, write, you, your. Over here such a list would certainly include "gimme."

MERCHANT OF THORSBY

G. F. HARPER

G. F. Harper is one of Thorsby's most popular and progressive merchants.

Born on a farm in Shelby County, Alabama, May 10, 1863, where he spent his boyhood, Mr. Harper received his education in the schools of that county. He is the son of Thomas and Jane Caroline Harper, who were early settlers of Coosa County.

Mr. Harper remained on the farm until he entered the mercantile business in Ensley, Alabama, where he remained for six year. He then returned to his farm in Shelby County where he remained for several years. In 1901 Mr. Harper was in charge of the State School Farm at Montevallo for one year.

Mr. Harper then entered the mercantile business at Wilsonville, Alabama, and in 1919, moved to Thorsby to enter business. Mr. Harper has established himself as a reliable merchant and his growth in his business has been rapid. In early life he learned the importance of dealing fairly and squarely and his success is partly measured by the hundreds of people whom he has served. He is a man active in all the civic, religious and business affairs of his town. He is a Booster for his town and county and would be an asset to any community. He was a member of the City Council of Thorsby for four year and member of the Board of Directors of Thorsby Institute for four years. He is a member of the Baptist church, of which he is chairman of the board of deacons, and a member of the Masonic Lodge.

Nov. 18, 1883 M. Harpe[illegible] married Miss Elizabeth Miles of [illegible] Alabama, and to this union were born four splendid children, Lucy Lee, G. H., Florence and Edward. Mrs. Harpers death occurred while living in Ensley.

On May 10, 1911, Mr. Harper was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Burke of Evergreen, Alabama.

Editors Play Important Part In Developing The Town And Community

Newspapers Are Continually On Lookout For New Ideas of Progress and Industrial Expansion

You, perhaps, have never considered the question: "Just what part does the editor and printer play in the life of your community?" The printer and editor, have probably always been, in your mind, considered as a sort of necessary evil to be tolerated, but as having small place in the active scheme of things. They are all right but—they don't mean much, really. But, doubtless you have never thought about the matter seriously.

Listen! The printer and editor carry a much greater burden in the community's interest than you probably do, or possibly ever will. If there is the prospect of an industrial plant being located in the community—where he exists, he is on the job at once, doing all in his power to further the new development. If there is talk of some civic improvement, he is on to the movement, doing his utmost to put it over. In any and all movements that spring up to better or boost the common good, he is there with all he has to help. If the shadow of death falls over your home and some loved one is taken away, his heart sorrows with you and his paper pays its sympathetic dole to the loved one who is no more. When the wedding bells ring their happy carols at your home he rejoices with you and tells all your friends about the happy event.

He is always about the first one to lament your "hard luck" when calamity dogs your footsteps. In all the epochs that come and go as the years roll, he is there to sorrow and soothe or to sound loud peans of joy, as the case may be.

To your churches, he is the one constant friend. He spends his space lavishly, gratis, for them and their labors. To the schools he is always a champion among those who strive to make our educational system bigger and better. He preaches his humble sermon, week after week and never falters at criticism, but goes evenly on his way, realizing his efforts will bear precious fruit in days to come.

The friend of every honest man, woman and child in his community and the sincere well-wisher of every movement that looks toward making the community better in every way, for the people who make it.

Hoping a bright crown of glory will finally adorn the brow of every country printer and editor, I am,

—One Who Knows.

MERCHANT OF THORSBY

DONALD MERCHANT

Standing high in the ranks of Chilton County's progressive young business men, is Donald Merchant of Thorsby, who has been in business there since 1926.

He was born at Riderville, Chilton County, 1904, and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Merchant, who now live at Centerville. Being a successful merchant is rather a tradition in the family, since his father has been a well known merchant in the state for many years.

Mr. Merchant attended grammar school at Maplesville and high school at the Bibb County High School. He was also a student at Howard College in Birmingham.

His first experience as a merchant was gained in Clanton. In 1926 he moved to Thorsby where he is a popular merchant.

In 1924 Miss Anice Kemp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Kemp, became the bride of Mr. Merchant. They are the parents of one child, a charming little daughter.

Mr. Merchant is a real booster for his county and a very useful citizen, taking a prominent part in the affairs of Thorsby. He is a Mason and is also local clerk of the Woodmen of the World. In the last city election he was elected a councilman of Thorsby. He is a member of the Baptist church.

CHILTON COUNTY COURT HOUSE ERECTED IN 1918; A CREDIT TO THE COUNTY AND TO THIS SECTION

Beautiful Brick Structure; Costing $60,000.00, and Valued Today at $150,000.00; Fire Proof Throughout Rising majestically from the ashes of two former court houses, the present Chilton County Court House, erected in 1918, at a cost of approximately $60,000.00, and built of modern brick and stone, is one of the most beautiful county buildings in Alabama.

The first Chilton County Court House in Clanton was a two-story frame building that stood directly in the crossing of 6th and Main Streets. The plot of ground was deeded to the county by Alfred Baker, a pioneer settler in the county. The first session of court in the county, however, was held in an old house located on the Adams lot, in 1871.

In 1894 this courthouse was sold to Dr. Sam Johnson, and a two-story brick structure was erected on the northeast corner of Second Avenue and Sixth Street. This building served as the County Court House until destroyed by fire in 1918.

The magnificent brick and stone structure which is today the Chilton County Court House, is located on the same place the first brick court house was built. The present building was erected at a cost of approximately $60,000 in 1918, to the people of the county and various improvements made on it since have enhanced its value to approximately $150,000.

STANDARD OIL CO. TAKES OVER PROPERTY HERE

J. P. Lawrence, Distributor Says Business Outlook For This Section Is Good

As evidence that business of the Standard Oil Company is showing an increase in this section, especially this county, information was received by the News to the effect that the Standard Oil Company has secured the service station, located on the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway, near the Ford Building.

Not only has the oil company opened this station, but they have also leased a station at Cooper, Alabama, and one at Midway, two miles south of Verbena, as recent additions, according to J. P. Lawrence, local wholesale distributor of Standard Oil Products. The Midway Station will be operated by O. H. Garrick. Other places recently added also are J. L. Jones, Verbena, J. D. Rockett, Cooper and Cooper Merc. Co.

The new station at Clanton is to be repainted in accordance with the specifications of the Standard Company, and will be operated by N. J. Griffin, of Verbena, who will have assistants. Mr. Griffin is a veteran railroad man, and knows the filling station business as well. A full line of tires and tubes will also be carried by this new station, using three gasoline pumps.

In giving this information to the News, Mr. Lawrence stated that he had all the confidence possible in the future of this county, and that in his opinion business is already showing an increase here. It was his faith in the future of Chilton County and his belief that business is on the upgrade, that caused him to put forth efforts to obtain more stations for the products he sells. Mr. Lawrences' statements in regard to this come from years of experience here, and are well founded.

Tentative Plans Made Known For Modern Filling Station Near The Ford Place

Information from a reliable source was given the News this week stating that Clanton will probably get another modern filling station in the very near future. This station, it was stated, will probably be occupied by the Shell Petroleum Corp., and will be erected by J. R. Mullins and J. Watts Moore of Clanton. It was said that blue prints are now being prepared and although it was not definitely informed that the station would be erected, it is believed the plans will be carried out.

Matt's Will Give Free Lunches Daily

Beginning Sunday, March 8, and thereafter, someone in Clanton will receive a cordial invitation to dine at Matt's Lunch Shoppe as the guest of the shop for lunch each day.

Those who, in the past, have been served with regular dinner at this popular eating place, will be in line to be the fortunate guests, Mr. M. L. Ware, proprietor of Matt's stated. Names on slips of paper will be placed in a box and each day one will be drawn out. That person will receive the invitation for the following day, and so on. If your name is picked, you will be notified either by telephone, mail or thru the Chilton County News, and the name will also be shown on the window in a small corner at Matt's Lunch Shoppe each day.

Elsewhere in the News this week, appears an ad from Matt's telling of this idea. Before anyone's name can be placed in the box, they will have had to have been served at the Lunch shoppe in the past with a regular dinner, or an order equivalent to that. If the fortunate person does not have a telephone, they will be notified by mail. At times, a man and his wife will probably be invited. Watch for your name in the News and an invitation for the following Sunday. An invitation will be sent out for each day in the week by Matt's Lunch Shoppe.

Editor Of The Business Week Cites Figures To Illustrate Point That Depression Is Near Close

By Sam C. Starke
Executive Vice Pres. Birmingham Real Estate Board
In The Birmingham News

It is not too late to review an address by Mark A. Rose, managing editor The Business Week, before the last meeting of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The caption of the speech consists of the question "Where Are We? How Long Will We Be There? Then Where Will We Go, and How Will We Get There?" Summarizing, we give some outstanding points in his answers.

We are at the bottom of the deepest depression ever measured, and even at that business has been hanging around 80 per cent normal, and according to statisticians comprising more business than the rest of the world transacts. Of course this business does not cover needs of incompetents. While some concerns set new records in 1930, others lost money even in 1929, which latter fact, he says, required a real talent for failure in many lines.

He believes we are a little better off than at the bottom and the tide has begun to rise. He finds average depresisons have covered 24 months from their beginning up to normalcy; that general business began to slip about the middle of 1929, and that experience shows the odds are seven to one that events will follow this two-year rule

ADVICE GIVEN TO VETERANS ON GOV'T. LOANS

Service Commissioner For State Outlines Plan For Veterans

Veterans of the World War who feel they have a claim under the terms of their war risk insurance should file these claims at once with the Veterans Bureau, according to a statement issued by W. M. Weston, state service commissioner.

Under a recent court ruling the disability need not have resulted from service during the war, the statement says. Suits may be brought in the United States Circuit Court, but only after a claim has been disallowed by the Veterans Bureau, the statement holds. Weston said it might be advisable for the veteran filing a claim to have the papers prepared by a lawyer, so that if suit is necessary the lawyer will be familiar with the facts.

The statement is as follows:

Veterans who served in the army, navy, marine corps and in the nurse corps during the World War were given the privilege to contract for insurance in multiples of $500, not less than $1,000 and not more than $10,000, and were issued insurance certificates in the amount contracted for by the veteran.

Veterans who now feel that they have a claim against the Veterans Bureau under their war risk insurance are privileged to produce evidence to the effect that they have been unable to follow continuously any substantially gainful occupation since discharge from the service or from the date of the last payment of premiums on their insurance.

This evidence may be in the form of doctors' statements showing their dates of treatment and giving in detail the history of the disabilities that have disabled the veteran from maintaining himself in a continuous gainful occupation. Also affidavits from laymen setting forth their knowledge of the veteran's disabilities or inability to carry on a continuous gainful occupation.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled thus:

"Total disability within the meaning of the policy is any disability of mind or body which renders it impossible for the disabled person to follow continuously any substantial gainful occupation, and such disability is deemed to be permanent whenever it is founded upon conditions which render it reasonably certain that it will continue thruout the life of the person suffering with it."

It is not necessary for the veteran to show that the disabilities claimed are the result of his service during the World War. The Veterans Bureau has a Form 579 which the claimants should use in making demand for payment on their insurance contract.

CARE OF SHADE TREES TOLD BY. A FORESTER

Trees planted for shade or ornament require care after planting, says Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. Too often the money, time and effort employed in carrying out the details of planting are partially lost due to later neglect of the growing tree.

The soil about a young newly planted tree should be kept cultivated and free from weeds for a distance of two or three feet from the trunk of the tree. It is desirable that the cultivation be done as soon after a rain as is feasible. A small amount of artificial fertilizer is also of material benefit.

The objection is sometimes raised that shade trees planted adjacent to agricultural operations will draw heavily on the soil fertility and moisture of the entire field. As a matter of fact, the area affected by the drawing power of the roots is only approximately equal to the spread of the crown of the tree. Cultivation, fertilizer and water accorded the tree when required need therefore be only within this area.

Full Rows

V-C FERTILIZERS FILL EVERY ROW WITH PROFITS.

Cost per bale or pound of bushel—that's what spells Profit. Not cost per acre.

"The three-year average on my tobacco crop, twelve acres each year, has been 1,492 pounds per acre, selling for better than 20 cents a pound. I attribute a large part of my success to V-C Powhatan 8-3-5 fertilizer."—W. R. Wimberly, Lovett, Fla.

Out of the Ground

All of your profit comes out of the ground. But ground can't grow a profit without the help of plenty of plant food—good plant food such as you're sure to get in V-C fertilizer. Make your ground rich, start your profit there and grow this profit big, with V-C fertilizer. Demand V-C—insist on V-C!

J. O. Wall, Eatonton, Ga., gathered eleven bales of cotton from eight acres, after applying 700 pounds of V-C Owl Brand 10-4-4 per acre at planting time and 100 pounds of side dressing per acre just after chopping.

"It is false economy to buy fertilizer merely on the basis of price per ton. It pays to buy goods made by companies of established reputation. These companies owe their existence to the farmer's success with fertilizer and are anxious to sell the proper kind for each crop."—A farmer's letter to a newspaper.

EXPERTS GIVE VIEWS ON COTTON PRICES

F. W. Gist, agricultural statistician of the department of agriculture has released the opinions of 21 leaders of the cotton trade on what price cotton might be expected to bring this year for crops of varying sizes.

The following table represents the average judgment of these men, Gist said:

10 Million bales	16.50 Cents
11 Million bales	14.50 Cents
12 Million bales	12.50 Cents
13 Million bales	10.20 Cents
14 Million bales	8.45 Cents
15 Million bales	7.40 Cents

Gist said these estimates are much more optimistic than the judgment of the federal farm board and the economists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The latter authorities, he said, rather expect a graduated price two cents per pound lower if the varied sized crops materialize.

According to the two opinions if a crop of ten millions bales is grown this year the aggregate value would be $825,000,000 and $725,000,000 respectively.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois.

Only Boy Scout Girl

A FAMOUS SLAVE CASE

As the United States prepares to cooperate with a League of Nations commission in abolishing vestiges of slavery in Liberia, and as the League is informed that 5,000,000 inhabitants of the world are in bondage today, the French ptople claim with pride that their country was the first in Europe to have chattel slavery declared by a court to be unlawful. From Paris comes the story of the famous case.

Denmark was the first European nation to declare by legislative act that all human beings on its soil were free. That was in 1792 and the law took effect ten years later. But the legal case of John Boucaux, who was set free by a French court. in the time of Louis XV came a half century later.

Boucaux had been brought to France from Martinique, in the West Indies, by a Monseiur de Verdelin, whom the negro served as a cook. Remarking finally that he was in a free country, Boucaux demanded wages. His master's reply was to have him put in the prison of the Chatelet, at Paris. Boucaux was liberated after three days, there being no law to fit his case, and he thereupon sued his master for ten years' arrears of wages.

Since he came from a French colony, the suit had to be heard by the judges of the Admiralty court, who were compelled to detain him nearly three months while they considered what their decision should be. It was a victory for Jean Boucaux, who was declared to have been "free from the moment he stepped on French soil and to be a free man from now on."

BEST FOUND FIRST

Among the amazing developments of the last half century is the growth of the oil industry, which was an entirely insignificant enterprise fifty years ago.

The first commercial oil well was drilled near Titusville, Pa., in 1859, a small producer only 69 1-2 feet deep. This earliest well was relatively unimportant in comparison with the gushers of recent years, some of which reach a depth of more than a mile and a half, and have a daily output of more than a hundred thousand barrels.

At first crude oil was used principally in the manufacture of kerosene, the elements from which gasoline is now produced being discarded as worthless. But gradually a variety of useful products were developed, of which gasoline is now by far the most important.

A strange fact in connection with the development of the oil industry is that while hundreds of oil fields have been discovered, none have been found that equal in quality the product of the earliest Pennsylvania wells and those producing throughout the Pennsylvania grade area today.

Pennsylvania crude is peculiarly suitable for the manufacture of the highest grade of lubricating oil, and by reason of this fact, has always commanded the very highest market price. Even now, in the present period of overproduction. it brings from four to five times the price paid for the lowest grades found elsewhere.

STORRS ADVISES LESS ACREAGE IN COTTON

Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, Friday issued a statement advocating a "very material" reduction in cotton acreage in Alabama this year.

"At least 1,250,000 bales of cotton were in storage and on farms in the State on January 1st of this year despite the fact that the State produced only 1,495,000 bales last year. This is an unanswerable reason why farmers of the State should reduce their cotton acreage this year," he said.

"Statistics compiled in the Warehouse and Gin Division of the Department of Agriculture show on January 1st this year 1,$26,000 bales of cotton were stored in wareshouses in Alabama under warehouse receipts. In addition a large quantity is in storage at Mobile Docks under bill of laden and an unknown quantity remains on the farms of the State."

Anthony Mierczjewski of New Britain, Conn., was ined $10 for re-enacting with his wife a moving picture scene in which the wife couldn't get along with her husband.

Proving That It Pays To Advertise

Said the puddle duck to the little white hen:
"I've not sold an egg since I don't know when:
"Yet I feel quite sure that the eggs I lay
Are as good as a hen's any old day."

Said the little white hen to the puddle duck:
"The whole fault lies with your salesmanship.
You produce your eggs and without a quack
To your swimming pool you waddle back.

I tell the world to let it know
So I cackle around for an hour or so;
There's a great demand for the eggs I lay,
For I make my advertising pay."

We often "razz" the man who toots his own horn, but when we buck up against a heardboiled business world, if we don't toot our own horn, who'll toot it for us. In other words the man you are competing with isn't going to advertise for you. Nor is anyone else for that matter. We must make our own "ballahoo," or else see the customer follows the man who is.

Just like the little white hen, we see it every day. When some small business has told the world about what it has for sale, and has found a buyer, The waddling old duck reminds us of some of our large business houses, with a large stock but few sales. The old duck is content to lay the egg, then waddle back to the pond, lounge around all day, and then wonder why no one comes to get the egg. If you lay your merchandise on the counter, then go to the back of your place of business and light the old pipe and wait for a customer—you may wait a long, long time. Tell the world what you have to offer and the world will come and buy. If you doubt it, give it a trial.

Let's Keep Boosting

The News fired its big gun last week when it mailed out its big 40-page Booster Edition. Approximately 3,000 pounds of paper were used, and through this edition Chilton County and its numerous advantages were advertised far and near. It was with a feeling of sincere satisfaction that the News staff mailed out the last copies last Thursday morning. Glad because the extra hours of labor on this Booster Edition were ended, and far more than that, a feeling of deep gratification that so many of the people of the county had given, without stint, their wholehearted cooperation in this endeavor. We were made to feel that the gloom and depressing spirit so talked about at this time, has only a small grip on the people of our progressive county.

But, "Rome was not built in a day" and our task is not done. In our Booster Edition, we mentioned many of the outstanding advantages that Chilton County offers to its citizens, and to the outside world. We gave credit to numerous prominent citizens of our county, who have aided in the progress of their community and their county. But not in forty pages—nor in a hundred—could we tell of all the things of merit which surround us, nor of all the men and women who have sacrificed and labored to produce the development which we now enjoy. It behooves all of us as individuals and as groups to think deeply of the good things of our county, and of the opportunities for advancement and development which are ours for the taking. In a material way we can go far in making still better use of our resources. And in our churches, schools and civic enterprises, we have much progress ahead which we may well look forward to as a challenge to our energy and ingenuity.

We sincerely thank those who helped us to put over our Booster Edition in such a fine way, and though we lay no claim to perfection, we believe some good has been accomplished. But to keep on making progress as the years slip behind us, we must keep on boosting and working, and go forward each day in whatever task is our responsibility.

High Resolve

"That I shall put aside every mistake; all false steps; all worries, all hatreds and follies and jealousies; forget all disappointments and heart breaks of the past year, and put all that has hitherto handicapped me, out of my life forever.

"That this year I shall stand four square to the world. I will be as fair with the man at the other end of the sale as with myself. I will be clean in my thought, honest, earnest, true.

"That I shall seek to better my best, to top my last success, to improve and fit myself to do the biggest thing possible and make this a red-letter year. Thereby I will lift my life to the level of my highest gift—to be somebody with all my might. To make myself the man I ought to be, and can be, shall be my daily aim.

"I shall be kind and considerate, genuine, courteous, true—lending a helping hand wherever possible.

"Manhood can outweigh all wealth, overtop all titles, and is greater than a career. Whatever happens, this year I shall endeavor to be a man."—By John J. Fisher in Inland Printer.

How It Goes With The Country Newspaper Man

One of the peculiar things about the so-called "hard times," as we view the situation is that the local country newspaper is supposed to stand out squarely and firmly for the optimistic view, and must publish columns and more columns of stimulating matter whilst some of the business houses, which are sometimes good advertisers and good boosters in good times, cease their advertising and some of them stand in the front door of their places wearing a downcast look and greeting everyone with a word of woe. As a general thing these succeed in destroying effectively and completely all the possible good the continued and never-ceasing boosting of the home-town newspapers might accomplish.

The country newspaperman goes the rounds each week, hears the hard times talk of his local merchants, hitches his pants up another notch, returns to the office with about enough advertising for an ordinary church festival, grins at his helper in the back of the place, says that things are going to get better and proceeds to dig up evidence to support his statement. He ransacks the daily papers that come to his desk on an advertising exchange arrangement, finds an item here and there from this or that "big dog," amplifies it with a scare-head that hasn't been used recently, grins feebly again, puts the old sheet to press with about half enough business to meet a curtailed payroll. At the end of the week, he pays off the helper if possible (the latter being only a beginner, is an optimist), hitches up his pants again and goes home to tell his wife (who is an old-timer as an optimist) that things are beginning to pick up.

The following Monday, the editor starts out afresh, and finds that some of the folks loafing around the corner drugstore read about good times, but that the local merchant either didn't read it or didn't believe it, or both. He gets the usual cold shoulder and sad look, and he hitches up his pants and draws up his belt two notches.

But he never complains, never knocks, never loses his spirit of optimism—why?

Well, that is the only thing he possesses that is worth holding onto. He has nursed it in adversity, petted it in prosperity, massaged it through misfortune, argued for it in the face of every conceivable rebuff, until he can't change his mind.

He continues to believe things will come out o. k. And they will!—Cleburne News.

"ROUND TOWN"
---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

* * * *

> "If we do our best; if we do not magnify trifling troubles; if we look resolutely, I will not say at the bright side of things, but at things as they really are; if we avail ourselves of the manifold blessings which surround us, we can not but feel that life is indeed a glorious inheritance."
> —John Lubbock.

* * * *

And yet, those persons who try to do their best; those who do not magnify trifling troubles, and look at things in a broad way at all times, trying to make people feel that life is indeed a glorious inheritance, get it in the neck quite often, so I have learned not so long ago.

* * * *

Perhaps, you would say that I should practice what I preach. Did it ever seem to you that I do?

* * * *

This word, "Luck" is something that means a lot to many people. Some have good luck and some have bad luck. Dan Webster gives the meaning of the word, in detail. But Luck is simply all the trains you were able to catch on time, all the appointments you were able to meet on time, the money you have been able to save, the long nights you have devoted to work, and the hardships and privations you have not hesitated to endure. Or, is it really Luck, after all? Isn't it just a matter of being competent and there with the goods?

* * * *

Somebody ought to start a campaign, contest, or whatever is necessary, in order to find out what people of Chilton do,—dunk or crumble their cornbread in potlikker. Since the nation-wide controversy over that subject has started, I have tried it both ways. To dunk or crumble, that is the question. Of course, I believe that it is proper to dunk your doughnuts, but am inclined to believe that one shuld crumble their cornbread in potlikker. Would like to hear from some of my readers on the subject: To dunk or crumble.

* * * *

Folks, don't worry. Things are going to pick up next year. Already I have noticed an unusual smile of satisfaction on several faces of old maids. And, too, you bachelors will no doubt have a pleasant and rushing year of it in 1932, saying nothing of the handsome young men who may have to watch their words under the spell of the moon, soft lights and music next year. 1932 is Leap Year.

* * * *

It is the little things in Life that count. We all, just humans, never fail to notice the little things. And true, it doesn't take but just two or three of the "little things" to disillusion us, where once we admired.

* * * *

Once heard a woman who said the other day that there is no reason nor excuse nowadays for a woman to appear and not be perfectly manicured, coiffered, facialed, and et cetera beauty aided. And, no doubt she is right—there isn't any reason, unless there may be a shortage of that item sometimes referred to as "wherewithal." But in my opinion, there are very few things more pleasing than a well groomed look for men and women.

* * * *

"It's front that does it." I heard that statement not so long ago from a distinguished gentleman whom I had the pleasure of dining with in a palatial dining room. I had asked him why a certain man in question had put across a certain worthwhile deal, with such ease and that was the reply he gave me without hesitation. Just another pointer that it pays to look your best. And to look your best does not mean that one must spend a small fortune in clothes and other items, neither does it mean that one must go to the larger cities to purchase their clothes. In Clanton we have stores that carry in stock some of the most widely known makes, and at all times, the latest in styles. As far as the price is concerned, there is no question about that. The Clanton stores have the lowest, and too, one must consider that they are trading with their friends—merchants who are interested in the town, and in you. Look at your hat. Look at your shoes. Look at your clothes. If they don't suit you, and you are able, then call on one of our merchants and get properly outfitted, at a very small cost.

* * * *

Week before last, I told you I would see you last week in full bloom. Well, I bloomed out all right, but the editor bloomed me back in again. But I did appear in part of that swell edition, and had a great message, so I thought. Was talking to the editor the other day about that edition, and he said so far as he could ascertain at present, it was a success, but that he would like to hear any comment from anyone on it, whether pro or con.

Was in one of our fine barber shops the other night and found out that fish stories are already starting out. Noticed several varieties of flowers in bloom too, and that brought on the reminder that Spring will soon be upon us. Hance Alred and Doc Neighbors have a supply of "Liars License" on hand, and I might suggest that those intending to do any amount of fishing, should see one of these men and get prepared for the season, soon to open.

Was thinking back over old times the other day and wondered about the little boys who used to make bean flips, and other gadgets out of the flat springs from his mother's corsets. I couldn't at the moment determine whether the little boys are no more, or vice versa.

Haven't heard so much about the dance last Friday night. The paragraph above, and the thought of the dance, made me think of a thought that occurred to me not so long ago, after seeing several of the youngsters, both boys and girls, stepping out and pairing off, dating, etc. At the rate the generations are going, doing bigger things with younger bodies and minds, it might reach the point to where girls will be born with dresses and high heel shoes on, and boys with long pants on. What's next?

Hoover's Lincoln Speech in Conflict With Speakers Record in White House, Says Baltimore Sun

Washington, March 2.—Commenting upon President Hoover's Lincoln's birthday address, the Baltimore Sun says that a collection of "principles," such as enunciated by the President, "gains most of its practical significance by application to concrete cases. When the President's speech is subjected to this test, one must conclude that he has acquired a quite new intellectual outlook during recent weeks, that his memory is a bit hazy, and that he construes his record in the White House in a most extraordinary way."

The Sun quotes from Mr. Hoover's Lincoln Day speech:

The moment the responsibilities of any community, particularly in economic and social questions, are shifted from any part of the nation to Washington, then that community has subjected itself to a remote bureaucracy with its minimum of understanding and sympathy. . . . Victory over this depression and over other difficulties will be won by the resolution of our people to fight their own battles in their communities by stimulating their ingenuity to solve their own problems. . . . "

"Clear-cut doctrine!" says the Sun. "But how does it look when applied to Mr. Hoover's major works since entering the White House?"

The paper cites the Federal Farm Board Act and the Smoot-Hawley Tariff law as the outstanding enactments of the Hoover Administration, and says "He does not appear to have been impressed by the dangers of having agrarian ingenuity sapped by Federal control. He did indicate a concern about the danger of having his plan get overweighted with bureaucracy, for, in urging its adoption, he told Congress 'No governmental agency should engage in buying and selling and price-fixing of products, for such courses can only lead to bureaucracy and domination.' But they were words, mere words. A Farm Board, entirely of Mr. Hoover's choosing, has engaged on prodigous scale in 'buying and selling and price-fixing of products,' and he has not been heard to make the tiniest peep of complaint or criticism."

Concerning the tariff act, the Sun says:

"Here, instead of attempting to stimulate the ingenuity of our producers, the President has buttressed them against a tiny fringe of foreign competition, by mandate from Washington that is administered by one of the most far-flung of bureaucracies."

It compares his former position on drought relief, which it says "shows him in the forefront of the practical proponents of that paternalistic Federal Government which he scores in his Lincoln's birthday speech.

"Placed against the broader background of his record in the White House to date," the paper concludes, "Mr. Hoover's speech represents a remarkable conflict between birthday oration preachments and practical performance."

Democrats to Elect President in 1932 if They Hold States Won in 1930, "Victory May" Shows

Washington, March 2.—A "Victory Map" with a compilation of figures showing that the Democratic Party will win the next Presidential election, if it holds the ground won in the 1930 election, will be submitted to the Democratic National Committee at its meeting on March 5, according to the New York Evening World.

The map and figures show that the Democrats had a majority of more than 1,000,000 votes in 1930; that they carried twenty-three states which have an electoral vote of 284 as compared with 247 in the twenty-five States carried by the Republicans. If the Democrats can hold these States in 1932, they will have a majority of 37 in the electoral college.

The Evening World article states that "the new combination which gave the Democrats their victory last November is a more natural arrangement of the States behind a Democratic candidate than that which re-elected Wilson in 1916."

In confirmation of this, the Evening World adds that "of the thirteen states outside the solid South carried by the Democrats last November, all except Indiana and Missouri elected a Democratic Governor, a Democratic Senator or both.

The twenty-three States carried by the Democrats in 1930 were:

Alabama, Arizona. Arkansas, Florida. Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

Result of Next Election Depends on Young Voters, Chairman Shouse Tells Oklahoma Young Democrats

Washington, March 2.—"The result of the next Presidential election will depend upon the young voters," Jouett Shouse, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Democratic National Committee, told members of the State League of Young Democrats of Oklahoma at their state convention at Muskogee recently. He cited statistics to indicate that every two years between 1920 and 1928 approximately 1,500,000 new voters became eligible, increasing with the ratio of population.

Mr. Shouse told of the tendency of the younger element f the electorate to take charge of affairs, and said: "This is as it should be, and I am glad to see organizations such as yours here in Oklahoma being formed by Democrats in all sections of the country; first, to educate the new voters, and second, to enlist their interest in the duty that they owe to take an active part in the political affairs of the nation.

Chairman Shouse stressed the necessity of organization. Referring to the 1930 elections, he declared, "We could not have had the sweeping, nation-wide victory we achieved if there had not been fifteen months of careful preparation in the way of education and organization to precede it. He called upon the party to avoid the mistakes of the past and return to the fundamental principles upon which the party was founded and which had made it great.

The speaker reviewed the failures and mistakes of the Hoover administration, and declared that that administration was incompetent to deal with the present economic crisis. He recalled Mr. Hoover's promise to abolish poverty and his assertion that the economic policies of the Republican party were the best guarantee of a job; his failure to issue a word of warning against the then impending stock market crash; his request t corporations to maintain their payrolls and his personal orders under which the personnel of the postal sevice was cut down, and the general inability or refusal of the administration to meet the situation.

Chairman Shouse declared that he was in sympathy with Democratic Senate Leader Robinson in his position that food must be provided for human beings as well as work animals in the drought states.

Editor Cites Figures to Show That Depression Nears End of experience to bring us back to normalcy, about July, 1931.

Sentiment Better

As to where we will go from here and how we will get there, he lays down the following predicate: Sentiment is better, business men having resolved at last to fight for business and are out after business; there is plenty of idle money, and long term money, the crux of the situation, is getting cheaper; retail stocks are exhausted, and all sorts of things are being worn out, with replacement buying beginning; consumer purchasing power will be better, and bargains becoming tempting with previous installment buying largely cleared up.

Finally, of high importance, Federal Reserve banks give evidence of intention to liberalize their policy. He sums up the following conclusions: Business will improve during the first quarter of 1931 (his speech was made in January); March, April, May should show an upturn plain to anyone; business should turn upward again in the Fall, taper off at the year-end, and in the Spring of 1932 should be above normal.

He admits this sounds glib, casual, offhand, and is quickly and simply said—a one-man guess to make his hearers feel good. But he admits it is the result of endless computations, bales of statistics, acres of charts, intensive study of economic history, survey of scres of industries, dozens of interviews reoprts from scouts in this country and agents in Europe, not necessary to trot out here, without mercy for his audience and respect for their intelligence.

DIEF'S HAS GASOLINE DEMONSTRATION OF INTEREST ON PAN-AM

UniqueDemonstration Shows Virtues of New High Powered Fuel

A unique gasoline demonstration at Dief's Service Station, for the benefit of those among motorists who are skeptical of the virtues of the New Pan Am Ethyl Gasoline as compared to an ordinary fuel, the Pan American Petroleum Corporation provided a practical demonstration which was held Saturday at Dief's Service Station in the presence of a large and very interested gathering of people.

A unique device developed by General Motors Research Engineers as a means of measuring the efficiency obtained from the different types of gasoline was brought to Clanton through arrangements made by Dief's Service Station, local Pan Am dealers.

Mounted on the rear of an automobile for convenience in transportation, it consists of a single cylinder high compression motor to which is attached a number of instruments which indicate the variations in anti-knock value, power, and speed while the machine is in operation: viz: a special carburetor, an electric generator and a third device invented by Mr. Midgley to indicate anti-knock rating. This is attached to the combustion chamber of the motor and consists of a small steel tube at the end of which is located a steel diaphragm. This diaphragm has its position inside the combustion chamber of the motor. When fuel knock (or carbon knock) is developed the high pressure waves which are set up cause the diaphragm to vibrate and this in turn causes a steel pin to bounce up and down. One end of the pin then comes in contact with a form of electric switch which operates lights on the instrument board indicating the exact reaction of gasoline to high compression.

The extraordinary benefits to be derived from a gasoline containing Tetraethyl lead fluid is not yet generally recognized by the motoring public.

Few people realize that vast sums of money and years of engineering and chemical resarch have been devoted to the development of Tertaethyl lead fluid in order to bring it to its present state of utility and perfection.

The demonstration was in charge of Stanley Beck, lubrication engineer of the Pan American Petroleum Corporation of New York and it was successfully shown that from the use of this product we obtain (1) Complete elimination of "knock," (2) Added power on hills. (3) Faster pickup. (4) Lessened gear shifting. (5) Cooler motors. (6) All-round increased performance.

Alabama Butter Is Found Better

The sting of being inferior to butter produced in other states was removed from Alabama butter at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, by Joel J. Winjker, butter specialist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, in connection with the short course in dairy manufacturing, of which A. D. Burke, professor of dairying at Auburn, was in charge.

Twenty samples were scored; ten came from Alabama creameries and ten from outside the State, many of them being in the Middle-West. The lowest score on Alabama butter was 87 and the highest 90.5. The lowest on butter from outside the State was 86 and the highest 89.5. Although Alabama butter was found to be better, Mr. Winjker said that butter from other states is being sold in Alabama for five cents a pound more than butter produced by Alabama manufacturers.

He explained that the butter which came from other states was a good as the Alabama butter when manufactured but that it deterioriated in shipment after being removed from storage. He insisted, therefore, that Alabama butter should be preferred even at a price above that for butter manufactured elsewhere.

Mr. Winjker insisted that in addition to producing good butter from Alabama cows, creameries of the State are surrounded by conditions favorable to dairying. He said that Alabama can continue with her developments by taking advantage of opportunities within the State and following practices for successful dairying.

WAR WIDOWS OF 1812

Ten women are still on the pension rolls as a result of the War of 1812, according to a report from Washington. Nine are widows of veterans and one is a daughter. Ages of the widows range from 71 to 90 years, while the daughter is 73. Their pensions average $48 a month. They are:

Arminia Anderson, Cedar Grove, Ga.; Marion Clark, Iowa City, Iowa; Mary Coleman, Claudeville, Va.; Lydia Graham, Brushy Run, Va.; Mary Isgrigg, Cincinnati, Ohio; Caroline King, East Aurora, N. Y.; Emma Mann, Greenbrush, Mass.; Mary Williams, Philadelphia, Pa.; Elizabeth Huron, Indianapolis, In.; widows, and Esther Morgan, Independence, Ore., daughter.

Thus Uncle Sam is not quite finished paying for a war that ended more than 116 years ago. Actual veterans were on the pension roll more than 90 years after that war, the last one, Hiram Cronk of Ava, N. Y., having died in 1905 at the age of 105.

It is extremely probable that pensions on account of the World War will continue to be paid a hundred years from now, reaching a total of no telling how many billions of dollars in the meantime.

"BURSTING HEADACHES" Dizzy Spells

Mrs. Cora Moshier, of 601 North New Orleans Ave., Brinkley, Ark., writes:

"I was so constipated until I was just sick. I could not stand to take strong medicine, so I decided I would take Black-Draught, and I found it to be all right.

"I would have such dizzy spells, and such bursting headaches, until I could hardly go. But after taking a few doses of Black-Draught, I would feel just fine. It is a good medicine, and I recommend it to all who suffer as I did. It is very easy to recommend a medicine that has done as much for me as Black-Draught has done."

MAIN STREET Looks at BROADWAY

Poor But Proud—

If you have to be poor, be poor in style.

That is the attitude of some of New York's neediest needy. Police, distributing clothing to those in want, say that many of them turn up their noses at clothes that aren't stylish. People in dire need examine the clothing they are offered with critical care. If it does not meet with their ideas of style, they reject it outright or make the excuse that they will return later.

At an East Side distributing station, they tried to give away several pairs of women's high-laced shoes. In practically all cases, women refused them, even though the shoes they had on were shabby and worn.

Blood Money—

The shedding of blood for cold, hard cash is quite a business. 170,000 was paid out in this city last year for 3,056 transfusions.

The health commissioner has established a bureau for the central registration of blood donors. It issues licenses from the health department to those who pass the required tests. Professional donors now carry pass books which they must show before they can give transfusions for a fee.

The move is an effort to eliminate malpractices which have caused serious accidents. Medical authorities say that there have been instances where unscrupulous agencies, operating solely for profit, have spread communicable diseases by the use of blood from unhealthy persons.

It is estimated that there are between 5,000 and 8,000 professional blood donors in New York.

At Dawning—

If you are one of those who get up early enough to hear the radio program "On the 8:15," (cries of "Early! That's almost noon, my boy.") you will be interested (I'm an optimist, all right) to know that the Landt Trio and White have received a scroll of honorary membership in the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. This was awarded for the realism of the program's train effects.

Big and Clean—

In some sections of the city, where buildings are not modernized, there are public bath-houses for the convenience of those who wish to use them.

A customer nearly caused the attendant to fall into the pool when he handed him a check for $1,000, saying that the money was to go to the city in payment for its generosity in letting him use soap and towels. The attendant found the check payable. He refused to cash it, however, for further investigation disclosed that the donor, in addition to his startling generosity, also had the habit of trying to jump off of bridges.

Authorities sent the check back to the bank and put the grateful bather in an observation ward.

To Market, To Market—

Two young men connected with the New York Stock Exchange ought to be able to cause a run (broken field variety) on the market any time, if they remember their past training.

Both of them are football stars. One is "Red" Cagle, former captain of the Army team, the other, John Law, captain of the Notre Dame Eleven of 1929. Cagle is reported to be earning his bread as a telephone clerk and Law's duties are said to be of a similar nature.

That at least proves that all college graduates don't become bond salesmen.

Tant-a-ra Dept.—

Speaking of sound effects, the latest thing in the radio studios is a keyboard which controls the sounding of automobile horns. The new instrumental creation, composed of 36 horns, each one tuned to one of 36 notes in a scale of three octaves, is played by fingering a row of buttons, all of which are like the horn buttons on the steering wheels of traffic going automobiles.

The Legislature and Its Grist

By Bob Vail

There has been little serious talk about state politics during the present session of the Alabama Legislature, though one occasionally hears some senator bring forth the name of Lieutenant Governor Hugh D. Merrill for governor or some member of the house mention Speak Alf. Tunstall for the same position. Both presiding officers have strong following or would have if they showed desire for the governorship. Another name occasionally heard is that of Senator Chas. McDowell of Barbour, who ran so well in 1926.

In his quiet way, Senator John E. Delmey of Colbert County, gets as much fun out of the legislative job as any other member of either house. This is his fifth term, though he has heretofore served in the house; in 1900, 1903, 1923 and 1927. For six years he was probate judge of his county; though he gets more kick out of the antics of noisy lobbyists and legislators than he did out of the more profitable office of judge of probate.

Wililam Charles Warren, senator from Tuscaloosa for the second indeterminate sentence used to be a school teacher and still appears sometimes to be teaching a class, even when he addresses the senate. He learned how to be a farmer at the Seventh District Agricultural school located at Albertville, how to be a lawyer at the University of Alabama and how to be a deep sea fisherman in the Gulf waters of Baldwin county.

Most everybody thought that seaport legislation was completed for the present session when the house and senate passed the bill restoring to the pilots their old status, independent of the docks commission, but now Representative J. Morgan Burns, of Dallas county, has revived discussion of amending the seaport act which was believed to be laid to rest when the Givhan bill was put to sleep in committee by request of its author.

Despite the administration's opposition to recess committees, a number have been proposed. One of the first resolutions offered was one by Senator Craft to create a recess committee to look into transportation subjects, then Senator Brown developed a plan to look into the school book situation, while Senator Kelley, Representative Kelly, Senator Riddle and a few others would like to take the Alabama Power Company to pieces in recess and see what makes the wheels go 'round, and a port inspection committee is proposed All recess proposals that cost money have been opposed by friends of the administration on the score of ecenomy.

Girard is well represented in the State Legislature. That little east Alabama town has four citizens in that body. The line dividing Lee and Russell Counties goes through the town of Girard. Each of these counties has two representatives and all of those representatives — Messrs. Smith and Gullat of Lee and Clayton and Wallace of Russell—live in Girard. Only Birmingham and Montgomery can match that.

The program adopted for adjournment differs from that at first planned. This current section of the present session will adjourn this week. The House will re-assemble March 31st and rush through the remaining days on its calendar. Up to Tuesday of this week eighteen Legislative days had been consumed. The limit is fifty. As the administration forces are said to desire final adjournment at the earliest possible date, it is expected that some hard work will be indulged in by the members.

Representative Kelly of Conecuh is a small town merchant and farmer. He lives at Repton, Ala. Consequently he is vitally interested in rural problems. Chief among these is that of education and Representative Kelly is studying and planning in connection with this subject.

Chairman Beebe of the House Committee on Commerce and Common Carriers piloted another of the famous "Bus Bills"—No. 53, regulating common carriers—safely through the House last week.

Cartoons by Spang in the Advertiser showing the members of the legislature how they appear to a real artist are a daily source of amusement while the solons are in session. The members who are stung by Spang's sharp pencil come in for a good deal of kidding from those who have been or are about to be stung by the same instrument But it's all in fun.

The most observing old boys at the press desk observe that the only legislators who come back are those who vote against dog tax laws and for good roads!

Mobile has a divided delegation in the legislature. Senator Craft and Representative Taylor and Sossaman can usually be found in the same boat on local measures, but Representative E. J. Grove does not join with his colleagues in certain matters of Mobile county legislation. The house generally decides with the majority in such cases.

My Best Girl

BY

KATHLEEN NORRIS

TENTH INSTALLMENT

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter-carrier, her mother a lazy woman who has "seen better days," and her sister a bootlegger's sweetheart who works in a beuaty parlor, is stock girl in the "Mack" stores, the Five-and-Ten of San Francisco. A boy whom she knows only as "Joe Grant," but who is really Joseph Grant MacKenzie Merrill, son of the owner of the "Mack," is learning the business by starting at the bottom. He doesn't like the job until he meets Maggie. And neither of them realizes that they are falling in love with each other, at first. Joe is impressed, however, by Maggie's intelligence and goodheartedness, and gives her advice on the subject nearest her heart, how to live the ideal life. She makes a suggestion for a better way of selling certain lines. He tells his father, as if it were his own idea, greatly pleasing the old man. He finds that the girls he used to know don't interest him as much as Maggie does, and when Maggie discloses her love in a burst of jealousy, he relaizes that he loves her, too.

Joe is afraid that if Maggie finds out who he really is she will not have anything more to do with him. So he pretends that it is some other fellow's car when he takes her home in his big yellow roadster. And on the way they talk, at last, about marriage.

Joe that night reveals to his father for the first time that he has been working in the store under an assumed name, and tells him about Maggie.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"I thought you—that night Flint was here——"

"It was a girl who suggested that," Joe said. "One of the girls in the Mack. A kid—reallv. She's only seventeen. She'll be eighteen tomorrow."

"How d'you happen to know that?"

"She told me. I took her home tonight and she happened to mention it."

A silence. Then George Merrill said slowly: "I see."

"See what?"

"What's been making the change in you, Joe. It was a girl was it?"

"I'm not in love with her, if that's what you mean. She's only a kid."

"She likes you, eh?" the older man asked.

"Well, she's only a kid."

"How far've you gone, Joe?"

"Oh, nothing!" he said vexedly, "'ve talked to her—she's a kid who's determined to make the best of herself."

"She's awfully pretty."

"Your mother—and I myself, too," George Merrill said, afte ra moment, "have always rather hoped that you and Millicent Russell would give us a wedding, one of these days. She's a fine little girl—seems to be different from the rest."

"The trouble is," Joe began slowly.

"That she's in love with you," his father finished mildly.

Joe gave an abashed, youthful laugh. "She thinks you are merely another clerk among all the clerks, does she?"

"She never dreams anything else!"

"Engaged, Joe?"

"Well, no. And yet, yes, in a way we are. You know how girls are, dad?"

"She's a pretty common little thing, eh?"

"Well——" No, he couldn't say that Maggie was common. Joe groped for words. "Not exactly that, Dad. But—but you see she thinks I'm like all the others—just one of the boys down there, the sort of man she would naturally."

Perhaps the shrewd eyes watching him saw more than he dreamed.

But if he saw this, George Merrill made no sign.

"If she knew who I was—who I am," Joe floundered on. "it might break her all up. She's no gold-digger—she wouldn't know how to marry a rich man—it'd scare her."

"I want to get out of this without hurting Maggie!"

"You're quite sure that you don't want to marry this girl, Joe? Oh, I don't mean immediately—I don't mean now. But she could be sent to a fine school for a year or two, travel, maybe. Of course, Millicent Russell is a straight little girl."

"Listen, Dad, I don't want to say anything against Millicent, but beside Maggie—Millicent is a drunken little moron——"

"Steady, my boy! Steady!" George Merrill interrupted. "Why, Joe, you must be halfway in love with this Maggie."

"Well, I'm not," Joe responded shortly. "But she's a fine little girl, and she—she seems to be reaching out for everything that is fine, just as these other girls reach out for everything that's rotten! She doesn't know what they know—she wouldn't understand their jokes——"

"H'm!" ejaculated Merrill senior in a somewhat perolexed, dissatisfied tone. And at the time nothing more was said.

On Sunday morning, however, just a few minutes before twelve, George Merrill met his son in the upper hallway of the family mansion and noted that he was dressed for golf.

"Got out of your engagement, eh?"

"Yep. Sweeney was going into town for mother, and I asked him to send a note to—Niss Johnson, with flowers."

"Well—I guess you're wise!"

"I hope so!" Joe said unconvincedly.

He played four holes, played the fifth—ashort one, and suddenly turned back to the clubhouse. It took him fifteen minutes at the telephone to locate his mother's chauffeur.

"Sweeney. This is Joe Merrill speaking. Sweeney, did you get those flowers to that young lady?"

"They went right out."

"I see. Thanks."

And he hung up the receiver, feeling flat.

She probably had them by now. Poor little disappointed kid!

Damn it, it made him feel hot and uncomfortable, and like a skunk.

Maggie, doing the Johnson dinner dishes, and perhaps shedding surreptitious tears into the sink.

Joe had an inspiration. The intelligent thing to do, the honest thing to do, was to go to her and say, "Now, look here, Maggie——"

Rushing cityward in his car a few minutes later, he soon reached the Johnsons' dilapidated cottage.

Maggie came to the door herself—everyone else was out.

"Pop volunteered for special delivery today—it's Valentine Day," Maggie said. "Liz was off with her beau, and Ma had to go to a funeral at one. So I had a real good chance to make the kitchen ideal."

"You certainly did that one little thing," Joe said admiringly.

"And what did you get for your birthday, Maggie?"

"Nobody remembered it but Pop," Maggie said lifelessly.

"But you got my flowers. You aren't mad at me, are you, Maggie?" he asked suddenly.

"Oh, no, Joe. Why would I be? I wouldn't have any right to be mad at you," Maggie said, adding the last phrase as if to herself.

"You seem sort of—stiff," Joe said.

"Here's what it is, Joe," Maggie said. "I just happened—when I got your note—to see your side of it, Joe, I know you like me but I know you don't love me. I hope we'll always be friends. But—" she stopped short—"but—this part of it—isn't easy for me, Joe," she finished.

"What made you change this way—from last night, when we sat in the car and talked?" he temporized gruffly.

"I think kinder realizing that you were—saying more than you meant, Joe!" she answered simply.

She was delicious, small, confidential, brave in her first battle with hurt and humiliation. Joe felt ashamed and bewildered.

"Did you know they were thinking of trying out your automat idea for the buttons and pins and tacks and so on, Maggie?" Joe asked.

"I don't believe it!" she said scoffingly.

"It's true. What would you do, Maggie, with—say, twenty thousand dollars?"

"With—with what?"

"With twenty thousand dollars for all your rights in that idea?"

"Joe, I'd sell my rights in that idea for twenty-five cents, if you ask me!"

"Yes, but you couldn't do that. They seem to feel it's a new idea and a darned good one, and my father—" he floundered, grew red, and saved himself by a hair—"my father thought it was a pretty good idea, too; I was talking to him about it," he said.

She had noticed nothing amiss. Her eyes were dreamv, happy.

"Joe, do you and your father talk about things?" she asked, as if she liked the picture.

"Not much. But lately we have been, more," he answered truthfully.

Her eyes were flashing, and the beautiful little face that had been so pale when he entered was shining with its loveliest radiance now.

Suddenly—suddenly she was in his arms.

"Joe—don't!"

"Maggie—you belong to me. We love each other!"

Instantly the little arms went about him, tightened, the small head, with its crown of gold, was pressed, with the little loving, jerking digs of a child's head, against his heart. Joe kissed the top of her head and the rosy ear that a curving filament of gold hair left free, kissed the eyes that were flooded again with tears, and the sweet fresh mouth that was ready, now to return his kisses.

And to Ma was first announced the engagement of marriage between Mary Margaret Petheridge Johnson, spinster, and Joseph Grant.

In his mother's dressing room, before dinner, he had told his parents the whole story frankly.

Mrs. Merrill took the successive shocks heroically. Her son, working in one of the Stores? Joseph Merrill a stock clerk? And in love with one of the humblest of his co-workers?

All this had been before dinner. Now it was late at night, and Joe, coming in quietly from a dinner and cards with some of the members of his own set, found himself summoned to his mother's room again.

She was in bed.

"Sit down, dear. Sit here on the edge of the bed, if you like," she said comfortably, "I've been thinking of your affair all evening."

"Dad tells me that some man named Baker or Bradley was going to Japan for the firm next Saturday," she began again.

"Oh, Brewer, you mean?"

"Brewer. Well, Brewer isn't going. In fact, he's leaving the Stores, I believe. What I suggested was, that you go for the firm to Japan. It would mean a very sensible chance to wait a little, to get a new eprspective on this engagement and this girl, and Dad's idea was that it would be a very easy way to break off your present relationship with the Stores."

"Now, Joe, why not get your passports, and take up Brewer's tickets—in less than six days, you'd be at sea, and have time to think all this out, and get your mind cleared about it all. Tell your Mary Margaret that you are being sent away by the firm—she's very young, and if—when you come back, you both feel the same way, there'll be plenty of time to make plans then."

"You see, Joe, marriage is more than falling in love. You want to be proud of your wife, as the years go by. A girl who belongs to an entirely different class of society not only makes her husband unhappy—makes him the butt of ridicule and pity for his friends, but she herself is bitterly unhappy, too. She doesn't know how to amuse herself, she has no resources. . . ."

It went on for a long while. And for a long while he listened. Then she said, more lightly:

"Now run along to bed, dear. We've had enough of this for one day. But to-morrow—think it over. It's late, Joe. Get to bed quickly and go right to sleep, dear."

He obeyed her as far as getting to bed was concerned.

But sleep was a different matter.

Then it was Monday again, and there was a pleasant fresh bustle of girls busv in the Mack.

The front door and the side door were propped wide open, and fresh damp air blew through the place that would be hot and close and jaded so soon. Joe, on the mezzanine floor, stopped up there for a minute and stood looking down at the confusion and activitiy of the store.

And presently, with an odd, sharp twist to his heart, he saw Maggie.

He had rather dreaded meeting her today, after yesterday. But, unexpectedly, he wanted to talk to her now—be near her, assure himself that this little willing slave of a whole hurried scene was in a special sense his property.

And presently, running upstairs, she nodded to him joyfully.

"Hello, Joe! Say, Joe——" And her smallness and sweetness and her absurd little-girl seriousness were beside him.

"Hello, Mary Margaret! How's the world with you this morning?"

"Happy, huh?"

"I guess I've got enough to make me happy," she said soberly.

"You aren't scared of thirty-five a week?"

"I'm not scared of anything. I wish—I wish they would fire you, Joe!"

"Fire me!" he repeated.

"Joe—to show you how much—I like you!" she faltered. "If you came home to me some night, fired, and if we didn't have a cent——"

Joe could not speak, his own eyes were wet.

"Maggie!" The call was rising into a chorus downstairs. "Maggie Johnson! What'd you do with them all-linen monogrammed handkerchiefs? Maggie! Hustle and get me about a half box of them red hatchets and cherry trees—at the candy counter!"

And in anther second she had fled down the stairs.

Serious days, these for Joseph Grant MacKenzie Merrill

For he had got in the habit of talking confidentially to his father.

"She loves you, does she Joe?"

"Sure she does."

"And she's straight and pretty and intelligent?"

"She's quicksilver."

"It would be hard for you to go to Japan next Saturday, Joe, and leave her behind?"

"Oh, no. She's only eighteen—just eighteen." Joe paused.

"You haven't thought of marrying her and taking her to Japan with you, Joe?"

Joe looked at his father.

"I merely suggest it. I don't want you to miss—anything good, my boy."

"We could postpone your sailing for a boat or two—no use rushing things. Then you two get away, and your mother—and your wife's family—can reconcile themselves to the idea by degrees."

"Wife's family!" The boy repeated the phrase in an undertone.

"It doesn't frighten you, Joe?"

"Not—you don't know her!—but not when it's Maggie."

Joe took Maggie to lunch the next day. The firm wanted him to go on a trip," he told her, and she must go along. She had to have her picture taken, and they'd have to be married And after twenty-three minutes in seventh heaven, they jumped into taxi, went up to the City Hall, and got a marriage license.

"They wanted me to start tomorrow, Maggie!"

"Tomorrow!"

"But now we're going to put it off a couple of weeks, so that you and I can combine the trip with our honeymoon."

Maggie and Joe, both finding themselves drawn for the Friday night shift, whispered a rapturous plan for dinner together late that evening, when their work should be over. at eight.

Joe's aristocratic mother called him to the telephone at about five o'clock. She and his father were coming into town tonight, she said, to stay at the St. Paul, and see him off tomorrow, and they wanted to know if he would like anybody else invited to an informal little good-bye dinner?"

"When you say 'good-bye to everyone'; you mean to my girl, too, Mother?"

"My dear—I only meant that it is a separation, and things will be different when you come back, and however sweet and charming your girl, as you call her, may be, if your feelings had changed. . . ."

There had been more of this. Joe had presently interrupted it unsympathetically:

"You'll be at the St. Paul, Mother?"

"Yes, dear. And we'll take a room for you there."

"Thanks. Well, I'll tell you who I'd like to bring to dinner, Mother. I'd like to bring Maggie."

I want you and Dad to meet her. My plans have changed slightly. I may not sail tomorrow. Anyway. I want you to meet her."

He could hear panic behind her carefully cheerful tone.

"Certainly bring her, Joe. Under those circumstances, perhaps I'd better not ask anybody else."

Joe had seized upon this instantly:

"How do you mean 'under those circumstances'?"

But his mother had been too smart for him.

"Merely, dear, that your father and I would like an opportunity to really know her a little."

"I want you to meet my mother and father, Mary Margaret," he told her, as they toiled to and fro with crates and trays of merchandise. "They want us to have dinner with them tonight."

"Honest, Joe?"

"They're living at a hotel now," he said.

"Joe, where is your father and mother's hotel?"

"It's right on the square opposite the new bank building."

"Oh, right near the St. Paul?"

"It is the St. Paul."

She eyed him incredulously, amusedly.

"Yes, it is! Now you tell another."

Joe, within a few hundred feet now of its august doorway, felt a first prick of misgiving.

"Joe, you're kidding!"

"No, I'm not darling. This is just a restaurant, like any other, and you'll find the food isn't as good as your own cooking—The young lady will leave her coat, too, please. Lebeau, Mr. Merrill's table, please."

They were in the hands of the bowing, obsequious headwaiter. Maggie did not hold Joe's hand, but she kept her frightened little person close in the shadow of his as they entered the warmth and intimacy and beauty of the Legend Room.

White tables, at all of which were diners, brilliant big lights far overhead, and little lights on the tables, women whose shoulders were bare and whose hair was moulded into close caps of curls, jewels nd voices and perfumes and flowers and soft music—it was all a wild whirl to her stunned senses. Her shabby little shoes, her plain little gown moved beside Joe blindly. She heard him say: "My mother, Maggie." She saw a steel-bright, handsome face looking at her under beautiful scallops of feathered hair set with a jewelled aigrette. She murmured: "Pleased to meet ju," and sank dizzily into a seat.

Mrs. Merrill's handsome eyes flashed with a malicious satisfaction She had hoped, in her somewhat twisted conception of motherly loyalty, that Joe's girl would not make much of a showing tonight. But she had hardly dared hope for a conquest quite so overwhelming and immediate.

"We took the liberty of ordering Miss Johnson," she said smoothly, although perhaps etiquette might have hinted that we wait!"

Joe eyed his mother—shut his jaw hard. But Maggie looked up, and he saw with a sort of delighted terror that she had been angered into self-control

"I thought you knew," she said clearly, "that I don't know anything about etiquette! Are you—" she pursued even, turning to Joe's father—"are you G. J. Merrill of the Stores?"

"I am, my dear," said George Merrill kindly, feeling sorry for the bewildered little thing.

Maggie grew very white and sat back slightly in her chair.

"Joe never told me—I didn't know it," she said in a lifeless little voice.

"But now that you do know it—and I ought to have told you long ago, and I'm a fool!" Joe said quickly, uncomfortably, "—it doesn't make one scrap of difference, does it?"

She raised her eyes to his, there was a second of silence.

"Not at all," she answered them, quietly.

G. M. WYATT HAS CHARGE OF THE WOCO STATION

Assumed Possession, Popular Filling Station On The First Of March

A business transaction which brought together a most prominent filling station operator and tire dealer and a popular filling station, was closed recently in Clanton when G. M. (Mun) Wyatt took over the Woco-Pep Station, located in the heart of town, just across from the courthouse on Sixth Street.

Mr. Wyatt took this station over on March 1, giving up the station formerly operated by him, on the highway, near the Ford Building, where Shell products were handled. Mr. Wyatt stated that he will continue to handle the Firestone line of tires and tubes, and carry on his tire and tube vulcanizing business in his new location.

The station will continue under the firm name of the Woco Station of Clanton, and Mr. Wyatt wishes to impress on the minds of the people his new location, just across the street from the courthouse. He will have as his assistants at the station, Reuben Wyatt and Jack Armstrong.

STILL PAYING CENTRAL FEES OF PEOPLES TELEPHONE CO.

Some few are still paying up central fees to the Peoples Telephone Company. Up to the present there have been a total of 202 to pay their fees. Better service is being given this year than for the past several years, and there is nothing to prevent phoneholders getting good service all the time. Of course, there will naturally be interferences caused from one thing and another. But the minute that you realize something is wrong, you should locate the trouble. If it is something wrong with your phone or the line, fix it and don't wait for somebody else on the line to do it. And if you are positive the trouble is in Clanton, make your complaint to Mr. Giles or to T. E. Wyatt at The Union-Banner office, and every effort will be made to get it straightened out. Don't come up here and say that you have not got central in a month; but let your troubles be known at once, because we want you to get service all the time.

Now, if you have not paid your central fees, do so just as early as you possibly can. If you haven't paid, don't expect the company to tote you on thru the year for nothing. Be man enough to not ask for service over your own or anybody else's phone unless you have paid your fees. The company needs the money and you need the service.

MT. PLEASANT SCHOOL WINS OVER CLANTON M. E. TEAM

On last Friday afternoon the boys basket ball team of the Clanton Methodist church went down to defeat at the hands of the Mt. Pleasant team, 19 to 4.

This game was more exciting and interesting than the one-sided score indicates, for it was fought in a clean, clear-cut manner, both teams displaying real sportsmanship.

The Methodist boys seemed unable to break the defense formed by the Pleasant boys as they were limited to one field goal. The other two points came by fouls.

Curtis Traywick flashed his usual goal-shooting ability for the winners by netting the ball for 13 points.

Parker and Cecil Traywick played a great defensive game at guard positions.

These two teams meet again on the Mt. Pleasant court next Friday evening March 6th, at 3:15.

The Clanton boys won over the Mt. Pleasant boys Saturday night in a very lively and hard fought game, 16 to 20. The scre was tied, 16-all, with one and one quarter minutes to go, but two long field goals by Busby and McMurray at this anxious moment of the game gave the church boys a 4-point margin.

The lights were somewhat confusing to the Mt. Pleasant boys as they were unable to pass the ball systematically without fumbling. Curtis Traywick was high point man for Mt. Pleasant. He looped the ball for 12 points.

Everyone is invited to see this game between these teams next Friday. Go and pull for your favorite.

President of Rumbley Brothers Endorses Nature's Own Prescription

Hardly a day passes but what some new and outstanding accomplishment of Ferrac, nature's wonderful prescription unchanged by man, comes to light. How its strengthening, invigorating, health-giving ingredients go to the very root of ailments that have previously baffled all medicines and treatments tried. Read the statement recently made by Capt. Wm. A. McQueen, Greenville, Ala.

"I want to go on record as saying that for chronic stomach troubles and indigestion I don't believe there is anything that will even approach Ferrac. I was in a hospital in Montgomery for eight weeks for an operation, and when the operation was over, nausea set in that it seemed impossible to control and I actually thought I'd die from it —and so did everybody else. When everything at hand in the hospital had been exhausted, I sent to Greenville for a bottle of Ferrac, and as wonderful as it may seem, after the fourth dose my nausea had entirely ceased and I was actually eating and enjoying he meals to the astonishment of everyone in the hospital. I have known Ferrac to be tried in many different ailments and never yet have I ever heard that it failed to bring relief."

This marvelous natural compound is on sale at All drug stores, or if the druggist cannot supply it, send $1.00 to the Greenville Products Co., Greenville, Alabama. adv.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which quickly neutralizes acids. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali neutralizes instantly many times as much harmful acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

New Chevrolet Stolen From Polk Brothers

Monday morning of this week, the Polk Brothers Motor Company was one car less in their show rooms, and it was not a sale, nor a gift that caused the shortage. Someone entered the building during the night and simply drove the car, a new Chevrolet coach, ut the front door, and also carried with them approximately forty dollars in cash, taken from the safe.

According to the information given the News, the burglar entered the building by breaking a small glass from a window, and unlatching the window, made his entrance. Before leaving, the safe was opened and rifled of the money, and the car stolen, the front door of the show room being opened from the inside. It was also stated that supply of tools belonging to an employee was taken.

The discovery was not made until Monday morning when employees came to work. Police of Tuscaloosa notified Polk Brothers that they had found the car, parked on a street there, abandoned. It was sent for Tuesday afternoon, and it was stated the car was not damaged.

SIXTH ANNUAL SIGN WEEK IS IN PROGRESS

James Sign Shop Of Clanton Is Taking Active Part In Large Program

The Sixth Annual National Sign Week is being observed all over the United States this week, from March 9 to March 14th. The James Sign Shop of Clanton, known the state over for its splendid work, is taking a most active part in the program for Alabama, which is being most effectively carried out in Birmingham.

Frank P. James, proprietor, of the James Sign Shop, has been in Birmingham for several days at intervals, assisting in the arranging of displays, that are occupying three large display windows in the building of the Birmingham Electric Company, located on First Avenue, and 21st Street, North.

Clanton is most attractively represented in the display in one of the large windows in the Magic City, the material for which was furnished by the James Sign Shop. This shop was awarded one of the coveted prizes for appearance of displays of signs and such work in the celebration of last year, and will no doubt be honored again this year as their work is receiving numerous favorable comments from various sources.

Elsewhere in this issue of the News will be found a large ad from The James Sign Shop calling attention to the Sixth Annual National Sign Week. They are working in cooperation with the Birmingham Associated Sign Contractors. Those people from this section will receive a treat, if while in Birmingham during this week, they will go to see the attractive window displays as stated above. Come to Play Day, Friday, this week.

Entire County Looking Forward To Play Day

Local Post American Legion And Boy Scouts To Take Part In Parade Tomorrow Morning; Thousands Are Expected Here Friday

Through the energetic efforts of the county school officials and the cooperation of the entire teaching staff of Chilton County, there will be one of the best days we have ever had in this county on Friday of this week. Patrons and children alike are looking forward to the day of educational exhibits, the county spelling bee, and complete enjoyment in organized play. Some of the interesting features of the day are the greasy pole climb for the boys and the sack race for girls and boys. That will interest and be a treat to the most pessimistic onlookers.

The parade from the high school thru town led by the local post of the American Legion promises to be a feature of the day according to Prof. L. C. Warr of the Chilton County high school who heads the Parade Committee.

Coach T. H. Walker, head of the athletic events committee, will be busy this week with the help of C. C. H. S. students marking off the athletic field in Clanton for the convenience of Chilton County schools and each school will have a definite part in play day.

The committee on exhibits, of which Miss Thomas of Clanton Grammar school is chairman, is hard at work with the problem of labelling each space for exhibits, and designing directions for each school, to display its work.

According to Prof. I. J. Quinn, principal of the Clanton Grammar School and Chairman of the Play Day Activities, the day will be completely filled with interesting instructive and constructive events.

School publicity men and newspaper folks are expected and each performance will be observed and credited with it's merits, and passed on by due authority to those unfortunates that will not be able to attend.

The interest is at white heat at the different schools and according to reports, each student from each school is looking forward with eager enthusiasm to the promising eventful day.

According to the school census 6,000 students are expected to gather at the Chilton County High School for the Red-Letter Day in school progress.

Teachers should and must bring their exhibits Thursday afternoon to the County High School in order that the exhibits committee will have time to space their exhibits.

Miss Jessie B. Garrison of the State Department of Education will direct the elementary games to be played through the day, assisted by the Elementary Supervisor, Miss Madge Scarborough and chosen aids.

Everyone is optimistic about the success of Field Day and according to some of the teachers they are looking forward to and comparing the tentative Gala Festival with the early civilized Roman lust for enjoyment stating that all is well if the bell rings and the drum beats.

Well Known Cotton Buyer Tells of Condition Of Chilton County Cotton in Letter To Agent

George C. Polk, widely known in this section as a cotton buyer with his brother, W. M. Polk, Sr., tells something of the condition of the cotton raised in Chilton County, from the opinions of several boards for the grading of cotton. Apparently the farmers of Chilton County need to forget about raising cotton for awhile until they see fit to improve the staple, and get busy raising something for other markets, not quite so flooded. Following is the letter from Mr. Polk, to County Agent Stapp:

Mr. C. E. Stapp,
Clanton, Ala.,
Dear Sir:

The time is drawing near when the farmers will begin to plant cotton seed, so we think now is the time for you to increase your efforts to encourage the farmers of this county to plant a better variety of seed than they have been planting in the past.

As you are no doubt aware, Chilton County grown cotton has a very poor reputation with the mills account of it being so very short in staple. In fact some of the large mills will not buy any Chilton County cotton at any price on account of the staple.

Just the other day a cotton shipper told me he shipped a carload of Chilton county cotton to one of our largest Alabama mills and that when the cotton reached the mil land they opened the car door and saw from the tags that it came from Chilton County that they closed the doors and refused the entire shipment without even looking at it.

Naturally when our cotton has a reputation like that, we can not expect to get the best market price for it, and the only way we can improve our market is to get the county as a whole to plant a variety of seed that will produce full 7-8" to 1" staple, and then when they do that and the shippers and mills see that we are raising full 7-8" to 1" cotton they will compete for it and we will get a much better price.

We note from cotton journals that there is a great falling off in consumption of American grown cottons as compared with foreign growths. This is because we have let our staple run down until it is no better than the foreign growths and the foreign growths

New Market Opens Soon In Canton

Much activitiy was going on in the grocery side of the Clanton Cash Store this week, due to the installation of a modern cooling refrigerator and show cases to be used in the meat market which is being added to this store.

O. B. DeLoach stated to a representative of the News that by Saturday they hoped to be ready to serve their customers with meats of all kinds. Heretofore the grocery department of the Clanton Cash Store has been confined strictly to groceries, but will now be in position to furnish the choicest of meats, both local and Western, according to Mr. DeLoach.

The new equipment which is being installed is of the latest type, insuring sanitation at all times. It was also stated that Eli Moatts. a well known market man of this county will have charge of the new market. Mr. Moatt's experience in this line will assure the people of this section some real service, now that he is again back in his former role. A formal opening day for the new market will be announced later Mr. DeLoach stated.

SCHOOL TERMS DISCUSSED IN THIS COUNTY

Board To Meet With Teachers This Week to Discuss Problem of Term

Information gathered from the office of the Superintendent of Education of Chilton County this week that the County Board of Education will be called to meet sometime this week for the purpose of a discussion of the problem of the seemingly inevitable short school term for Chilton County schools now facing them.

Teachers of the county will also be called to meet with the Board of Education on this important subject, it was also stated, to decide what steps can be made to continue the school terms for the usual full number of months.

Many persons are of the opinion that something will occur by which Chilton County will be able to continue their schools this year for the full term, while others are skeptical over the situation. As far as finances needed to carry on the school term, are concerned, there is grave danger of the schools being discontinued right away, it was learned this week. as the balance now in the treasury for this purpose is very small, and there seems to be no indications of more finance coming in right away, that is, a sufficient amount to pay salaries of the teachers.

The money borrowed by the state has already been used to pay salaries of teachers in the county, according to information given the News, and the amount set out for school purposes by the state from poll tax in this county for the year 1930-31 is only $1765.50, an amount which is said to be one of the lowest known from this source in Chilton County in several years. This being due to the fact that this is not an election year.

Apparently there are only two alternatives. One is that the teachers of the county, through their generosity, will agree to teach the full term out, and receive their compensation when it will be possible to pay them, and the other is for the schools to close immediately, it was learned at the educational offices here this week. A general concensus of opinion states that the teachers of the county will agree on the former.

ISABELLA SENIOR CLASS TO PUBLISH UNIQUE NEWSPAPER

Copy for one of the most unique newspapers ever published in this county was brought to the News office Tuesday from the Senior Class of the Isabella High School, and work on printing it will start immediately.

This newspaper compiled by the students of the Isabella school will be of four pages, and not quite as large as the regular newspapers. Stories carried in it were taken from the story of "Silas Marner" which they have been studying in English Class, under the direction of Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin.

The name of "The Raveloe Herald" has been given the paper and only one publication will be made. The students of the Senior Class of the Isabella High School, and Miss Griffin are to be congratulated on publishing the paper. It will speak well of the school and those pupils taking part in it.

SHORT WORK IS MADE OF TWO FIRES HERE

Homes of Clay Marcus and H. Nelson Slightly Damaged By Fire Recently

The Volunteer Fire Department of Clanton received two calls here during the past few days, and made short work of both cases. The first call came Sunday morning at 9:30, when the home of Clay Marcus was endangered by fire said to have originated near a hot water tank in the kitchen. The second call came Monday about noon at the home of H. Nelson, just west of the Wilson Hotel.

The Marcus fire is believed to have been one of the quickest ever extinguished by the firemen. Fire Chief Loren Smith stated that it was estimated that within three minutes after the alarm was turned in, the fire was practically extinguished. Damage to fixtures in the home was estimated at one hundred dollars, and damage to the building at $250, according to Chief Loren Smith.

The Nelson fire did not amount to much. Fortunately two of the firemen were near the home when the alarm was given and only a short time was used in extinguishing the blaze. Damage was estimated at $25, it was stated. Apparently, a fire in Clanton, regardless of the hour, has very little chance to do a great deal of damage, with the fire department on the job with their modern truck and equipment, provided the alarm is given before the flames have gained too much headway. The firemen are to be commended for their splendid organization

POLK BROS. OFFERING REAL BARGAINS IN USED CARS

The Polk Brothers Motor Company are this week offering some mighty attractive prices on good used cars, according to an ad appearing elsewhere in this issue.

It is stated by the company, who are also well known Chevrolet dealers, that they believe the prices they have placed on used cars for their Spring Used Car Sale, are among the lowest, if not the lowest, they have ever offered the people of this section, and it would probably be advisable to those contemplating purchasing a used car to read the ad in this issue of the News.

IN MEMORY OF E. WILLIS TAYLOR

Whereas God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from us our beloved one. Elbert Willis Taylor, age 35 years and one month. He was taken from us Friday, Feb. 13, at noon. Gone to dwell with God eternally. Funeral services were held in the Clayton St Baptist church at Montgomery on Feb. 14, at ten o'clock with Bro. F. M. Barnes in charge, with interment in the Chestnut Creek cemetery at Coopers, Ala.

He was married to Miss Nan Robinson eleven years ago. To this union one little girl came to brighten the home, age ten years. He was faithful to God and his work here, giving his life to Him at an early age. His pastor said he often talked with him about his faith in Christ. He was always at Sunday school and prayer services. He taught a class of boys He has left budded roses to bloom He ministered to the sick, visiting the hospital often, and always with a cheerful word.

Dear husband, and father, we miss your presence, your voice is still, your chair is vacant. We are so lonely without you. Dear son, we miss you. You were so true to us. We miss you, dear brother. Oh, how we will miss you here, yet we know you live. We know you have laid down the cross and taken the crown. You will know no sorrow. We meekly bow in humble submission to the Father's will and we realize that our loss is His gain.

A man who was a kind and loving father, gentle and loving in his dealings with, not only his loved ones, but with all whom he came in contact. A man whom you always knew where to place on every moral, religious, social or political issue. A man abounding in the work of the Lord and exemplary in his deportment. A man who bore his suffering bravely to the end, having fought a good fight and finished his cares.

Softly his hands are folded at rest—
  The hands and the heart that have rendered their best.
Gently his hands have planted the seeds,
  That petaled their fulness in generous deeds;
Blossoming deep where memory lends
  Beauty and fragrance that ever ascends.
Softly his soul has traveled alone
  The valley of shadows so dark and unknown.
Softly his hands are folded at rest,
  While his soul with a smile that has ever caressed
The friends of his heart—
  There's a smile on his face—
Smiling at friends with a wistful regret
  The friends of his heart, there's a smile on his face.
Stalwart and brave was his generous heart,
  Smiling at friends whom death never can part,
For love is eternal and royalits role,
  Purple its garments and white is its soul.

Left to mourn him: His wife and daughter, Annie Myra, father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Tayolr, four sisters, Mrs. E. D. Hand, Clanton, Ala., Mrs. A. L. Taylor, Clanton, Ala., Mrs. Ira Smith, Haleyville, Ala., Miss Lucille Taylor, Coopers, Ala., three brothers, A. J. Taylor, Coopers, Ala., B. L. Taylor, Coopers, Ala., and L. MAIN STREET Looks at BROADWAY

Missing Little Misses—

From the hubbub at the disappearance and finding in New York of a missing heiress of a nearby city, comes the report of the Girls' Service League of America that 120 missing girls are yet to be located.

The director of the league says that in spite of the interest caused by this affair, this is an off season for runaways. Only 8 girls were docketed as such in the records of the association during January. Other years, the number has reached 18 for that month. Stories of breadlines and unemployment here are believed responsible for the decrease.

Sweet Sixteen—

The most popular time for running away from home is March, with its promise of warmer weather and the chances to hitch-hike. The second most popular month is September, before the opening of school. Sixteen is the average age. Next to New York City itself, most girls come from Pennsylvania. One girl has run away from a small mill town there three times.

Few runaways tell the truth about themselves, investigators say. They usually spin fantastic stories about the brutality of their parents, some claiming that their mothers are dead and that their fathers are either dead, drunken or abusive. Not many come to the league directly. It is when they find out for themselves that New York's streets are not paved with gold that they ask where to go for help. A surprising number ask taxi drivers for advice.

Fiery Words—

If the men under the new deputy fire chief, John J. McElligott, want to express strong emotion when they burn their fingers they must limit themselves to "shucks" and "durn." In extreme cases they may say "heck" and "jimminy crickets," but nothing stronger.

That is the chief's order, and he has over six feet of brawn to enforce it. He has never been known to fire a man for a few "natural expressions," but his men know that he doesn't approve of "cuss words," so they hold themselves down pretty well when he is within earshot.

He is a family man and a devout church member, and doesn't consider swearing a qualification for fire-fighting. He ought to know for he's been doing it for 24 years.

Silent Tribute—

Where applause for her skill and daring had echoed time and again, a throng at Madison Square Garden bowed their heads in silent tribute to Lillian Leitzel, the beloved aerial artist recently killed by a fall from a trapeze in Copenhagen.

The house was darkened as a spotlight played upon a white rope, the symbol of her art, which was slowly lowered from the roof. When the rope stopped moving, Joe Humphries, famous prize-fight announcer, pronounced the words, "To the memory of Lillian Leitzel. God rest her soul."

As the rope was drawn slowly up, a drum corps played the "long roll" which was always sounded at the finale of her act. Then the band played "Nearer, My God, To Thee," the lights flashed on, and the ceremony was over.

Auto Suggestion—

A problem before the city right now is what to do with 124 automobiles that nobody, not even their owners, seem to want.

The orphan autos are parked out on the Department of Street Cleaning pier, where they were towed when police had them removed from the streets for violation of parking laws. The owners could have reclaimed them by paying a fine of $10, but neither the money nor the owners have appeared.

The sanatation commissioner wants the pier, but he doesn't want the cars. He's willing to sell them or even push them into the East River, but he isn't sure if that's the proper thing to do in a case like this.

Any auto-suggestions?

More than 73,000 miles in a New Ford

THE substantial worth of the new Ford is reflected in its good performance, economy and reliability. Its stamina and endurance are particularly apparent in sections where bad roads and severe weather put a heavy extra burden on the automobile.

In less than a year a new Ford Tudor Sedan was driven more than seventy-three thousand miles over a difficult route. The operating cost per mile was very low and practically the only expense for repairs was for new piston rings and a new bearing for the generator.

The car carried an average load of 1200 pounds of mail and was driven 250 miles daily. "The Ford has never failed to go when I was ready," writes one of the three mail carriers operating the car. "The starter did the trick last winter even at 34 degrees below zero. The gas runs about 20 miles per gallon. At times I pull a trailer whenever I have a bulky load."

Many other Ford owners report the same satisfactory performance. Every part has been made to endure — to serve you faithfully and well for many thousands of miles.

WOOD ALCOHOL DANGER

Federal regulation of the sale of Methanol—wood alcohol— is proposed in a bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Bingham of Connecticut and in the House by Representative Goss of the same state.

These companion bills provide "that wood alcohol shall not be used in any article of food or drink, or in any medicinal or toilet preparation, or in any radiator anti-freeze compound," or sold for any purpose, except under a special permit from the Commisisoner of Industrial Alcohol

The bills also provide that all containers in which wood alcohol is sold have labels containing the words "Deadly Poison; Wood Alcohol" in red letters at least one half inch high, with the customary skull and crossbones used on poison labels, also in red. There must also be the following warning in letters at least one-eighth of an inch high:

"Warning: Wood alcohol is extremely poisonous and may cause blindness or death if it enters the body thru the mouth, by skin absorption or by inhalation of vapors."

According to its author, the bill is intended to prevent flooding the country with wood alcohol or methanol anti-freeze compound, which is said to have already caused more than 400 deaths and countless cases of blindness.

Many of the best medical and scientific minds agree that such legislative action, both state and national should be enacted, but other hundreds of deaths and cases of blindness may occur before the necessary restrictions on

My Best Girl

BY

KATHLEEN NORRIS

ELEVENTH INSTALLMENT

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter-carrier, her mother a lazy woman who has "seen better days," and her sister, a bootlegger's sweetheart who works in a beauty parlor, is stock girl in the "Mack" stores, the Five-and Ten of San Francisco. A boy whom she knows only as "Joe Grant," but who is really Joseph Grant MacKenzie Merrill, son of the owner of the Mack is learning the business by starting at the bottom. He doesn't like the job until he meets Maggie. And neither of them relaizes that they are falling in love with each other, at first. Joe is impressed, however, by Maggie's intelligence and goodheartedness, and gives her advice on the subject nearest her heart, how to live the ideal life. She makes a suggestion for a better way of selling certain lines. He tells his father, as if it were his own idea, greatly pleasing the old man. He finds that the girls he used to know don't interest him as much as Maggie does, and when Maggie discloses her love in a burst of jealously, he realizes that he loves her, too.

Joe is afraid that if Maggie finds out who he really is she will not have anything more to do with him. So he pretends that it is some other fellow's car when he takes her home in his big yellow roadster. And on the way they talk, at last, about marriage.

Joe that night reveals to his father for the first time that he has been working in the store under an assumed name, and tells him about Maggie.

Joe's mother has him invite Maggie to a fine dinner party at a fashionable restaurant. There Maggie gets her first intimation that he is something besides a boy in the store.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Quiet! He had never seen her so quiet. She had conquered her first suffocating rush of shyness, she was sitting erect now, and when he or his mother or father spoke, she answered.

Her look told him that he had betrayed her, delivered her, bound and helpless, to her enemies. "I trusted you—I loved you when you were a shabby, dirty errand clerk, beside me in a cheap store," said Maggie's eyes, "and all the time you were my empolyer's son, ready to make fun of me, ready to shame me—when your moment came!"

She helped herself, awkwardly, unfamiliarly, to food, when it was presented at her left elbow on the big platters. But he noted with a real pang of shame and concern that she hardly touched it.

"Would you ask the help if I could have some more water?" she said once. And Mrs. Merrill said quite audibly, if in an aside, "Oh, priceless "

Joe looked down, his face dark.

"Mother——" he murmured, choking.

A faint smile touched the older woman's painted mouth, and she said graciously: "I beg pardon?"

"Water to Miss Johnson," Mrs. Merrill said, annoyed. It was the waiter's business to see that the guest's glass was filled, but Mrs. Merrill felt illogically irritated with the guest who had to call attention to the omission.

"And a fork, please," Maggie added. She said it so low, with such embarrassment, that nobody heard it.

"And a fork please," Maggie repeated, audibly [illegible]

"A [illegible] dish," she said, clearing her throat. "And a fork—while you're up."

"While you're up " Mrs. Merrill's lips twitched, as if unwillingly. Her sardonic, triumphant glance, as it met Joe's wretched, defiant gaze, expressed a certain reluctance to laugh at his unfortunate little humble friend, but an inability to resist the tremendous temptation.

In such a situation as this to-night she could score. Not very clever, not really a gentlewoman, she was still enough of each to snub and suppress Maggie Johnson. She enjoyed the chance. To feel herself this girl's superior, to cut her easily and carelessly in a bored, beautiful, cultivated voice gave Lillian Merrill real satisfaction.

She had been, as a girl, of that miserable and superfluous class known as shabby genteel.

At twenty-five, Lillian was sharp, eager, beuatiful, hungry. She fell upon George Merrill with avidity; he was a commoner, but he was rich.

He was the first real man she had ever met, and to her own surprise and confusion she had come to like him very much, to feel a strange loyalty and admiration for the commoner. His indifference to her family's ideals and opinions was—well, simply breathtaking

In the more than twenty years of their marriage, George Merrill had changed her somewhat. He was a good, simple fellow, amazed at his own success, proud of his wife, adoring his boy.

It was at about this time, when by her brightened eyes and nervous voice, and by the two scarlet spots that blazed in her cheeks, Maggie began to show the effects of the surprise and the strain, that George Merrill suddenly took a hand in the conversation.

He had been an almost silent spectator, so far watching his wife and his son shrewdly, sending an occasional glance toward the girl.

"You work in the Stores, Miss Johnson?"

"In number seven—on Eighth. Yes, sir."

"How long have you been there? You don't look old enough to have been there very long?"

The kind, deliberate voice steadied her. She berathed easier, looked him in the eye.

"I'm eighteen. I went in nearly four years ago, when I finished Grammar. My father and mother had—considerable trouble."

"Your father's living, then?"

"My father's a postman."

George Merrill flushed with genuine concern; he had been trying to put her at her ease.

"Well" he said pleasantly, "I think I owe that store a debt of gratitude. My son, Joe, here, seems to have gotten a lot more out of it than he ever did out of college "

Maggie looked at him unemotionally.

"He didn't do very well there, for a while," she admitted quietly, "but now he is doing very well—good—" she changed it again, under her breath—"very well. They all like him."

"I'm proud to hear it," George Merrill said thankfully.

"Maggie," Joe began at this point uncomfortably, "thought that I was the dumbest thing she had ever gotten hold of(didn't you Maggie? She gave me my first start."

"I didn't know who he was," she explained, with a patient glance at his mother.

Something happened to Mrs. Merrill in that second.

"You had no idea who Joe was?"

"Nobody did," said Maggie.

"What did you call yourself, Joe?" his mother asked.

"Joe Grant."

There was an interruption. A dance had ended, and a girl and young man came up to the Merrill's table. Joe and his father stood up, and a waiter pulled up another chair, and the girl—perfumed and rouged and beautifully gowned—sat down negligently and easily and was introduced to Maggie Johnson. Miss Millicent Russell studied the other girl comfortably, insolently, as she talked.

"Joe, I hear you're going to Japan?"

"I may go."

"May go? Why, I thought—" said Millicent innocently, turning to Mrs. Merrill—"I thought you said something of a little good-bye dinner tonight, Mrs. Merrill? I thought he was going tomorrow?"

The color drained from Maggie's face. Mrs. Merrill laughed uneasily as she said:

"Well, I think it is practically settled, isn't it, Joe?"

Millicent, her bright, mischievous eyes reading all their faces, changed the subject tactfully and presently went on her way. Then Maggie, in the little pause that followed the other girl's chattering and laughing good-byes, said steadily:

"I'm going to ask you will you excuse me and let me go home now, Mrs. Merrill. I oughtn't to have come—I know that. But I didn't understand You and his father have been pretty well worried about me, maybe. But it was because I thought Joe was a poor boy—and that, if he loved her, he'd be glad to marry a girl as poor as me!—Don't speak to me, Joe. I'm done with you—to-night. I never would have come here, ma'am," she added, to Mrs. Merrill, "I never would have given you any worry—if I had known. We were working together, only this afternoon, and he asked me would I meet his folks—" She faltered for a second, went on. "I thought maybe you and Mr. Grant were like us—I thought it'd be some little place like we have. I might have known, I might have known Joe wasn't like the rest of us!"

"He'll go to Japan tomorrow," said Maggie, looking Joe full in the face, "and that's right—that's what he ought to do. And I promise you—I promise you that I'll never see him again!"

"I don't think he meant to hurt you, Miss Johnson," Mrs. Merrill said.

"That's all right," she said in a cold, nervous voice. I guess he didn't know how it would strike me. Will you please excuse me if I go home now?"

"Wait just a minute, won't you—Maggie?" George Merrill said.

And in his turn he laid an arresting hand upon her arm.

The voice, grave and sympathetic and distressed, shook her, as did the touch, and the somewhat haltingly pronounced name. For the first time, she showed signs of a break.

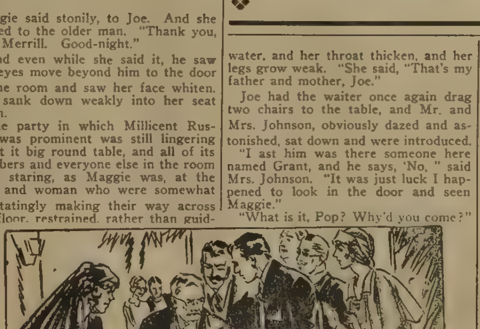
"Maggie," Joe said pleadingly, "you know what we had planned—you know I never meant to hurt you."

"I think, dear, that Miss Johnson feels nervous and tired, and your deceiving her about your name and who you are has upset her. I wouldn't say anything more about this just now, Joe."

"You don't have to come with me," Maggie said stonily, to Joe. And she turned to the older man. "Thank you, Mr. Merrill. Good-night."

And even while she said it, he saw her eyes move beyond him to the door of the room and saw her face whiten. She sank down weakly into her seat again.

The party in which Millicent Russell was prominent was still lingering about it big round table, and all of its members and everyone else in the room were staring, as Maggie was, at the man and woman who were somewhat hestitatingly making their way across the floor, restrained, rather than guided, by the scandalized headwaiter.



It was all like a horrible dream to Maggie, exhausted, confused, and wearied almost beyond bearing this fresh blow. The approaching couple were her father, diffident and bashful and frightened, and her mother, agitated and bold.

Pop's shabbly old suit, baggy and limp, Pop's searching rabbit eyes and bowed meek little shoulders, looked doubly pitiful here, and Ma, with the black veil falling impressively from the hat she had evidently assumed in great haste and the dark hair in untidy strings beneath it, and the voluminous black cape she wore to funerals bellying about her like a sail, was the target for all eyes: [illegible]

Maggie felt her mouth fill with salt water, and her throat thicken, and her legs grow weak. "She said, "That's my father and mother, Joe."

Joe had the waiter once again drag two chairs to the table, and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, obviously dazed and astonished, sat down and were introduced.

"I ast him was there someone here named Grant, and he says, 'No, " said Mrs. Johnson. "It was just luck I happened to look in the door and seen Maggie."

"What is it, Pop? Why'd you come?"

"Maggie, a cop just come to the house," her mother said abruptly. "That feller 'Lizabeth runs with has been arrested, and she's at the night court. Pop and me didn't know what to do! I give you my word that nothing like this has ever happened in our family before," Mrs. Johnson said, genteely, yet in a tone of shame, to Mrs. Merrill.

"What's the charge?" George Merrill asked sharply.

"They say they was speedin'," elucidated Maggie's mother, 'an' Chess—my daughter's friend [illegible] named Chess Rivers—had some hootch in the car."

"You'll want some money!" George Merrill said suddenly "How much have you?"

"It happens that I ain't got [illegible] than a quarter," Len Johnson said, in his reedy, troubled little voice.

"But we reely couldn't take it from you," Ma added. "I s'pose young folks will be young folks," she said to Mrs. Merrill, "and it ain't as if Liz had been stealing or anything like that. But I thought I would drop where I stood when that cop walked in. I'm not accustomed to having my daughter get into any trouble——"

"Ma," Maggie said. And Joe's father noted that she only touched the older woman on the arm. But her mother immediately began a sort of rotary curtesying in farewell.

"Maggie—Maggie—why do you go—why do you mix yourself up in this?" Joe said wretchedly and incoherently, trying to draw her aside, catching her by the arm.

Maggie was on her feet now, shepherding her father and mother away

Profiting Through Service

When merchants build new stores, add additional sales space, install new fixtures, improve their show windows, augment their sales forces, replenish their stocks with the best and newest, it is for the public. Of course they are in business for the purpose of making a living, but to make that living they must first give service, so their first objective is always "to serve and please."

"Fair exchange is no robbery" is a business phrase which has been handed down from generation to generation and now seems to have acquired immortality. The laborer exchanges his labor for his wage. The capitalist exchanges his money for his interest. The manufacturer exchanges his products for his cost of production plus profit, the professional man exchanges his services for his fees or his salary, the store keeper exchanges his goods for cost plus service charge. Everybody is in business for himself by being in business for somebody else. Like the public official, the merchant is in business for society and therefore every member of that society is his employer, his boss.

One of the compensations of business is that public recognition and appreciation come to none sooner than to the business man who really serves. A flourishing trade is synonymous with public trust and confidence. Service must ever precede success in business.

You farmers better forget about cotton for awhile, and plan to raise something that will bring you more money. It will be sometime before the flooded cotton markets will clear up again. Cotton dropped in price again recently. That means there is still too much of it.

o-o-o-o

If you think that George, or John or Joe, is going to cut his acreage, and you will plant a big crop of cotton, well, you are all wrong. Because George, John and Joe think the same thing about you, and first thing you know, you'll all be planting too much cotton again this year, and it'll drop in price so low it really won't be funny this time.

A Serious Problem

The financial problem now faced by the railroads of the country is becoming really serious, because of increasing competition by the automobile, the motor bus, the airplane, pipe lines and government barge lines.

This is a matter which should be of concern, not only to railroad executives, but to the public as well, because anything which tends to cripple the efficiency of our present excellent railway system can not fail to adversely affect our national progress and prosperity.

In addition to being deprived of traffic sorely needed, as a result of the competition mentioned, the railroads are also handicapped by a heavy tax burden and government regulation to a degree which is often oppressive. They pay three hundred and seventy-five millions annually in taxes, yet hungry government departments and bureaus clamor for more.

How long the roads can continue to operate efficiently under all these handicaps is a serious question. The prospect of a bankrupt national transportation system is not a pleasing one for either the railroads or the public. But the recent Seaboard receivership and the financial plight of several other roads indicate that such a situation is threatened if present conditions can not be relieved in some way.

Variation Is Spice

One may travel up and down a city and find no two houses exactly alike unless they be members of a row of dwellings.

The different makes and models of automobiles number into the hundreds.

Women insist that their dresses, coats and hats be exclusive, but neither will two men be found in identical habiliment.

What is true of houses, automobiles and clothes is also true of breakfast foods, furniture, shoes and virtually all of man's possessions.

The reason is obvious. No two people have identical tastes. That which one finds attractive repels another. The person whose discernment you criticise probably thinks even less of yours.

Life would be a monotonous existence but for this conflict of tastes. Nothing bores like uniformity. What interest would the world hold for humanity if every house was built alike, if the choice of the ten million was good enough for the world, if the wardrobe of the modern woman had as little variation as Eve's, if what one wanted everybody wanted?

If all humanity was of the same opinion on all things, the free-for-all argument would be as extinct as the Roc, but why live if you can't argue?

J. G. put forth a very, very good thought when he turned the above one loose. That thought would be a real good topic for a sermon, in my opinion, because contected with it are many many things pertaining to the faults of the majority of us humans.

And now the people of Clanton are beginning to receive invitations daily to dine with Matt's Lunch Shoppe, where they will be served in the best of style, so says Mr. Matt Ware, the high mogul of that place. Your name may be drawn any day, and if you will watch a little white card on the right hand window of Matt's you will see each day who is invited to be their guests. And, too, each Thursday in C. G. N., there is a special invitation to some one to dine with Matt's on the following Sunday as special guests. Just another way Matt has of showing the people how good the food is served at his place.

* * * *

And again, this week, I throw bouquets at our volunteer firemen. Two fires were recorded here in the past few days. Only small ones, but large fires begin with small ones. The boys showed some action that was action at the fire at Clay Marcus' home. Three minutes were all used in getting to the fire and having it out, so they tell me, and at the Nelson home fire, I understand that the truck and men were there even before the alarm ceased, making short work of that. Fine bunch of boys, if you ask me, and if my house ever catches fire, I know it won't amount to much, when "Our Boys" get wind of it.

* * * *

For recreation, I hear the Mayor and Councilmen have given the firemen a swell pool table to pass away leisure hours in friendly games of pool, and they have moved their meeting place to the office that was formerly used by the City Clerk. Members only are allowed inside its doors, unless special permission is granted. Loren Smith is making a very capable Fire Chief, and the cooperation given him by the other fifteen volunteers is commendable.

* * * *

The Clanton Cash Store is doing some spreading out so I see by C. G. N. on the front page this week. Putting in a modern meat department, equipped with new cooling system with display cases and all. Mr. Obie DeLoach said that they would be ready to furnish fresh meats, Western and local, by Saturday of this week, and would announce their formal opening day later. I understand they have something special planned for that day. Mr. Eli Moatts will put forth his very experienced efforts in operating this meat department for the Clanton Cash Store. A good market with a good marketeer, eh what?

* * * *

Was talking to the editor the other night and he appeared extremely pleased about something. After hanging around a while, through curiosity, I found he was busy looking over a stack of letters the News has been receiving from almost everywhere, congratulating the county and town and the News on that Booster Edition. Without a doubt, it went over in a big way, and the outside world has opened its eyes to Chilton County now, judging from some of the letters about it that the ed let me read. That was one time, the ed was in a good humor toward me, and I took advantage of it, too.

* * * *

And still, I hear some folks round town saying that business is on the bum, in spite of what some of the merchants have told me that they have noticed an increase in sales lately, and in spite of the fact that there is something being continually built in Clanton. Now up on the highway, near Bill's Garage, there is something new going on. Tiffin-Klinner Furniture Company had to move to large quarters. Clanton Cash Store is spreading out. A new filling station went up in West End lately. Another will probably be built in town soon. The county is putting the new home of the Educational Department in excellent condition, and on top of that the News, I see, has increased its floor space a bit, saying nothing of the many various jobs being done on repairing round town. And, too, I might say that the News published the largest issue two weeks ago, that I've seen in a long time. Does that sound like times are hard. I should smile and say No.

* * * *

But, gosh darn it all, things look bright as the dickens on one side and about that time I turn around and hear a wail from someone else. Now it is the schools that are causing some uneasiness. Of course I'm not blessed or otherwise, with any children, but yet I have that civic pride that goes to cause school troubles to hurt. There is plenty of food for thought on that subject, and I understand someone in Clanton has been giving it that thought too. I have a bit of faith in our Board, and they are to meet sometime this week for a special called conference, along with the teachers of the county. I'm waiting and praying that something good will come from that meeting. I wish I was capable of writing something about the school teachers of Chilton County. They are due worlds of credit, more than the majority of the people give them.

The "Back Yard"

In Europe, they call the space in the rear of a house, the "garden," and they raise lovely flowers there. In America they dump their tin cans there. Many families that used to raise flowers and vegetables there are now too busy stepping on the gas.

American travellers are laughed at in Europe, when they refer to such spots as "back yards." It seems to those folks to stamp these rear spaces as dumping areas, where anything goes.

We have too many back yards in Clanton, and not enough gardens. You can find physical health, as the nice spring weather comes on, in the active work of transforming a mussy spot into a scene of charm. Also you help tell the world that we have a fine residence town. Instead of traveling many miles, and spending a wad of money to find beauty in faraway scenes, why not produce it at your doorstep?

o-o-o

Coosa County and Chilton County are becoming almost related. We will be really closer, so far as time is concerned in the Spring than we have been in past months. The new road ought to be in fine condition then.

MORAL ECHOES

o

And it came to pass that a certain Bullfrog found for himself a puddle hole in the midst of the swamp. He hopped about this pond with joy, thinking that he was forever fixed. The spring drifted into summer, and one day the frog observed that his pond was growing dry. Every day there was a little less water for him to enjoy. He decided that the thing for him to do was to sit at the water's edge and croak every day because his pond was going dry. There he sat and croaked, and croaked. Not a hundred yards away there was a big lake of water, but this frog preferred to fill the air with his lamentations. How like some folks was this frog. They see that they have nothing and they croak, "Hard Times." We wonder why they do not bestir themselves, and produce something. When will people learn not to help the fellow who is doing nothing but sit down and croak?

o

The trees in front of the Court House have been trimmed. Not long since I passed a home where the lady of the house was out in her front yard trimming the rose bushes. She told me that the bushes would do much better when they were properly pruned. I am wondering if the people of Chilton County will not decide to give themselves a thorough trimming. Take the pruning knife of God's Word, and begin a close pruning of your life. There are many things in your character that need to be clipped off. Do not be afraid to cut to the quick. Break up those old ugly habits that have sapped your very life, and give room for new buds and new growth.

o

I met a man on the streets of Clanton. He gave me to understand that he lived in the country, but he often visited in our little city. That is the way many of our church members are doing. Of them it can be truly said, "They live in the world, and they visit the church." They feel that they are a stranger to the ideals of Zion. They have their source of conduct in the ways of the world. Their very life is the life of sin. How much better it would be for folks to live in the church. We should have our habitation in the church, and from her we should learn our ways of living.

o

A wealthy man sat by the casket of a daughter who had died. His business friend sat by his side. Suddenly the sorrowing man began to talk. Said he to his friend, "You and I have been living side by side for many years. We have worked hard during the week, and we have spent our Sundays motoring and in pleasure. We have made our clubs and our banking business first. Now my son has disgraced me and my daughter is dead. I tell you, my friend, there is only one place in this world to bring up a family, and that is in the Christian church." After saying this the poor fellow wept his sad bosom empty. Life was so empty to him and there was a hurt in his heart that would not heal. I want some of you Chilton county people to listen to me—there is no place in this world for you to bring up your family that is better than in the church of the living God. Better take your family and get linked up with the church.

o

Not many days ago I saw some boys gathering about a picture that was on the brick wall of a store. They were pointing out something on the picture. After they were gone I walked there to see for myself, and I can not write the expression that some vulgar mind had written there with his pencil. Of course I blotted it out. If there is a vulgar picture in a magazine it will attract our boys like filth will attract flies. We need some good strong laws, and we need them enforced, that will take the corrupt from before the public. Woe be unto any man or woman who will be a distributing center for the vulgar. Anyone who does this is doing more to destroy ideals and morality than the man who runs an open saloon.

Cotton Buyer Tells Of Chilton County Cotton

are offered much cheaper than ours on account of much cheaper labor and production costs.

So if we expect to regain our export trade, naturally we will have to produce better staple than the foreign growths.

To prove to you how short our staple really is, on one shipment of 100 bales straight gin run cotton that we made to one of our largest mills last fall, they received the cotton as being 9 bales of 7-8", 35 bales 13-16" and 56 bals 3-4" cotton. Naturally this mill finding our cotton to be of such poor staple withdrew from this market and therefore lessened our potential market just that much.

On another occasion we sent 24 samples straight run cotton to the Cotton States Arbitration Board of Atlanta to be officially stapled and they only passed 4 bales as being 7-8" staple.

As you are aware cotton under 7-8" staple is generally selling at a discount of 1c under the price of 7-8" staple.

Some think that the shippers and mills have now quit stapling the cotton, but this is a mistake for in all cases where they did not staple the cotton, it was because it was bought on a cheap basis and allowance was made in the price to allow for certain percent of short cotton.

If you see fit and think it will help the cause any, you may have this letter published.

Yours very truly,
—Polk Brothers,
By Geo. C. Polk.

DEATH OF LITTLE ELOISE HOLLEY

o

After a brief illness the spirit of little Eloise Holley passed away on Monday morning, February 16.

The patient was carried to a Clanton infirmary where she underwent an operation for abscessed lung, while there death relieved her of her pain.

The body of little Eloise was brought home, where it lay, surrounded by friends and loved ones until removal to its final resting place at Mt. Pisgah on Wednesday morning, February 17, at eleven o'clock. Funeral services were conducted by J. F. Limbrick.

She was the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Holley. She leaves to mourn after her, a father, mother, one sister and two brothers.

Weep not, dear ones, for we know she is at rest.

We want Chilton County High to come through this test having made use of every opportunity to show courtesy and general good will and fellowship to all our visitors.

Senior Two Class Presents "Wild Oats Boy" March 20

"The Wild Oats Boy," is a delightful comedy-drama full of "pep" and rich in humor. The plot is based on the actions of a wild young fellow named Eddie. The question is: Will Eddie come through the test laid down in his uncle's will, or will someone else inherit the $50,000?

The characters will produce spontaneous laughter with their humorous speech and actions. No one should miss hearing Trouts "idees" and seeing the masculine impersonation of the Irish woman. Come. March 20, 8:00 P. M. High School Auditorium.

Home Economics Department Extends Thanks for Materials Donated By People of Clanton

We, the girls of the home economics department, wish to extend our most hearty appreciation to the mothers who donated the many useful things for cooking purposes in our school. They have made our cooking classes possible for the rest of the year. We will begin regular cooking in the next few days. We are studying the principles involved in cooking at present. We have just completed our courses in clothing and have a fashion show in chapel. The dresses were made by the home economics and by the girls themselves. The show was repeated at the meeting of the P.-T. A. last Tuesday afternoon.

Splendid Progress Being Made By The High School Orchestra

Our school is proud of the activities Miss Burns has aroused among our pupils in developing a high school orchestra. A public program was given at the chapel period last Tuesday, in which splendid numbers were offered. The public is cordially invited to be with us Tuesday at 10:15 to enjoy our programs. The orchestra is to play at the Kiwanis Club luncheon at 12:30, March 26.

Circle Number Five, of the Clanton Baptist Church met at the home of Mrs. V. J. Gragg on last Monday afternoon, with a very interesting program carired out.

The devotional was led by Mrs. W. J. Billingsley. The subject for the afternoon meeting was "Forgotten Americans," and was carried out in an impressive manner. Following this program, a short business session was held by the Circle, for the purpose of forming plans for the following two weeks. There were ten members present.

Come to Play Day, March 13, 1931.

Isabella School News

—o—

The regular meeting of the F. F. A. was held Wednesday, March 4th. The chapter voted on the application of Parnell Ratliff. After the program, which consisted of two talks, "How To Select Good Laying Hens," by Luther Mims, and "Improvement of the Farm," by R. C. Veazey, the chapter completed the plans for the Father, Son, Mother and daughter banquet, which was held Friday night, March 6th.

A very large crowd attended the banquet. The tables were very attractive. Plates were prepared for one hundred and thirty-one. The Home Economics girls had charge of the food planning and preparation. The crowd assembled in a classroom of the school building and marched into the home economics department by a march played on the piano by Miss Betty Baldwin. Thanks were returned by Rev. Buford Lawrence. Marvin Durbin, president of the F. F. A. acted as toastmaster. He presided splendidly. The first thing on program was "My Home Project" by Glynder Oden. R. C. Veazey played the F. F. A. son on a harmonica. "Accomplishments of the Home Economics Department" by Dorothy Manning. Future Farmer's Creed, by Morris Keen. Duet, "Old Folks at Home" by Elsie Conway and Clara Mae Calfee. Both departments were very much pleased to have Mr. R. E. Commack and Supt. Lawrence present. They both made very good talks. Short talks were made by Mr. Howard Oden, Mr. J. D. Griffin, Mr. Earle Thomas and Miss Cora Bell Maddox. Other distinguished visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Watwood and Oliver Manning of Auburn. The latter is our ex-president of Isabella chapter and is ex-secretary of the state F. F. A. Everybody enjoyed the program.

The F. F. A. boys and Home Economics girls are very much pleased with the outcome of the banquet. It brings the parents closer to their children in their work at school. It kindles the child's desire to do better and greater work.

If all schools had these two departments added to them it would develop the ambition of many boys and girls for life's work. It would increase the interest of the parents in the child's work. It would inspire the boys and girls to do better work, and take more responsibility upon themselves. Because theer will surely come a time when these boys and girls will have to carry on the work that their fathers and mothers are doing now. They will have to take life's work on their own shoulders and carry it on. It will show them the importance of being prepared.

Evening School

An evening school is being taught at Isabella by Miss Maddox for the benefit of the women of this community and surrounding communities. This evening school is on "Home Making Education." The women chose the food unit for their course. All the women are interested in learning how to plan, prepare and serve meals. The balanced diet is being stressed, also labor-saving devices, saving of steps in the kitchen. A great deal of interest is being shown by the women's regular attendance on meeting nights. The school is held in the Home Economics Department from 7:00 o'clock to 9:30 o'clock on Monday and Thursday nights. An attendance of thirty-five women has marked our highest attendance on some nights. A great deal of fun and recreation is derived from the meetings as well as trying to practice the principles given at each lesson.

MT. PLEASANT WINS OVER THORSBY INSTITUTE 12 TO 8

—o—

The Mt. Pleasant Junior High school basketball team hung up another victory last Tuesday evening by defeating the swift Thorsby Institute quintet 12 to 8.

Littlejohn, the husky center for Mt. Pleasant, led his team mates in scoring by netting the ball for eight points; Curtis Traywick rung up the other four points by virtue of two nifty shots from the field. The Thorsby boys displayed some swift clever passing, but were unsuccessful in making their shots count.

The game was played with a strong west wind blowing over the court, and the first half was played in a light cold drizzling rain, all of which showed its effect upon the players of both teams.

This was Mt. Pleasant's seventh win this season out of thirteen games played.

A WARNING
by your Fertilizer Dealer
No. 3
in a Series appearing in this newspaper

THIS is no year to take chances. If you are tempted to use "any old" fertilizer because it costs less, don't do it! Most of all, your crops need nitrogen—natural nitrogen—and that means Chilean Nitrate.
I've arranged for a big supply of Chilean Nitrate in new 100 lb. bags. It's cheaper than it has been for years. Better get your order in now, so you won't be sorry later on.

Your Fertilizer Dealer

CHILEAN NITRATE is original "Soda"—the natural nitrogen fertilizer that has been used for a hundred years in the South with best results. It increases yield and quality of every crop you grow. It's indispensable as a side or top dressing to insure against loss. And when you order your fertilizer, be sure to say Chilean Nitrate to your dealer. That one word, "Chilean," is your protection and your dealer's too. Chilean means the real thing—the nitrate all crop champions use. Remember the two kinds—Original Chilean (Crystalline) and Champion Brand (Granulated) both natural nitrate.

Reduce the Acid

SICK stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips Milk of Magnesia; one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. For 50 years the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians have prescribed for 50 years.

V-C FERTILIZERS FILL EVERY ROW WITH PROFITS

Another generation . . .

"To the efficient producer, surplus has no terrors."—Silas Bent.

If farmers were to use the plant food recommended by the agricultural experiment stations and others, North Carolina would use a million tons a year more than it is using. The same conditions exist in South Carolina. Virginia would use more than one million tons instead of less than half a million tons.—National Fertilizer Assn.

"The really great profits have come from elimination of waste," says a famous merchant. The saying applies to farming. Farming makes a great profit when it eliminates waste work on many acres by concentrating all its work on a smaller number of acres, using V-C fertilizer and growing plenty of better crops that cost less.

"Hush yo' mouth, Black Boy, or I makes you eat yo' words!"

"Crack down! Chicken dumplin, fri—i—ed fish and hot biscuits! Watermelon!"—Exchange.

The most practical farm relief lies in increased operating efficiency and lowered unit crop costs. The use of fertilizer reduces cost of production.—The Guaranty Survey.

"One of the first essentials to success in agriculture is the adjustment of production to potential market requirements. For the most part, farmers have grown their crops blindly, each trying to produce the maximum without regard to the possible effect of overproduction at selling time."—Chairman Legge, Federal Farm Board.

It is better to produce a high and profitable yield on less acreage than an average yield on full acreage.*—U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

UP goes the big bag on strong, young shoulders: another generation wins to the manhood of farming! Two hundred full pounds of V-C fertilizer, with good, rich plant food in every pound . . . it takes a man!

Through all its years of welcoming new generations and initiating them into the ways of successful farming, V-C fertilizer has kept the faith of full weight and honest value. V-C has done even more: it has kept the fast pace of advances in agriculture. It is the standard-bearer not only of reliability but also of today's latest and best in soil management. V-C fertilizer belongs with good farming—with your farming.

• Load your own trucks with V-C this season. Be wise with your generation—for here comes another!

On land no better than that of neighboring farms making a quarter of a bale to the acre, Wesley Reid of Miller County, Ark., produced 495 pounds of lint cotton per acre with V-C 4-8-6.

"When properly organized, farming should be the most stable industry in the world."*
—Chairman Legge of Federal Farm Board.

"The fertilizer industry has been going through a gradual but distinct evolution. There has been an increasing use of inorganic materials, a tendency toward the elimination of low grades, and an increased use of synthetic salts. These changes are fundamental. The fertilizer industry is becoming a chemical industry."—Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture.

High yields usually cost less per unit to produce.—The Fertilizer Review.

An annual business of over a million dollars each is done by more than 200 farmer-owned cooperative associations, according to Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture.

There is often an opportunity to choose between materials that are very different in drilling qualities. It will pay well to choose the fertilizer that can be distributed best.—U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

Trouble comes when the crop costs more to produce than it brings when sold. The grower can't dictate selling price, but he can control cost of production. The growing cost of ten bales of cotton, for instance, grown on ten acres of good land with V-C fertilizers, is less than the growing cost of ten bales of cotton grown on twenty acres. And the same truth applies to any other crop.

"That tightwad wouldn't lend me two dollars! Would you believe there was such a miser in the world?"

"Oh, my, yes! Why, I'm just that mean, myself!"—Exchange.

On four acres, J. C. Boswell, Atkinson, N. C., raised 4,400 pounds of tobacco that sold for $1,286. Mr. Boswell used V-C Lion Brand 8-3-5. From five other acres he gathered 2,080 pounds of cotton, with V-C Fish Mixture 8-3-3. "I also made plenty of feed crops for my family and my stock," says Mr. Boswell. "And my fertilizer bill was $182.45."

The farmer who puts his farming operations on a business basis can face the future with confidence.*—National Fertilizer Assn.

Demand V-C, insist on V-C, buy and use no other fertilizer but "old reliable" V-C.

Make your ground rich, start your profit there and grow it big, with V-C fertilizer.

"There is no better fertilizer on the market than V-C," says J. W. French of Gordo, Ala. Mr. French has been selling V-C, and using it on his own farm, for a number of years. "It has given perfect satisfaction," he says.

RAT DAMAGE ENORMOUS

Damage by rats to produce and property amounts to 200 million dollars annually in the United States, according to an estimate by the secretary of agriculture of North Dakota, who recommends the waging of a constant and relentless campaign against this pest.

Measures recommended include the keeping of waste food and garbage in covered containers until destroyed: preventing accumulations of trash and refuse; making corn cribs and granaries rat-proof, and adopting any means whereby the supply of rat food may be reduced.

Among the means for destroying rats and most effective is poisoning, for which purpose government experts recommend powdered barium carbonate, which is inexpensive and has the added advantage of being odorless and tasteless. therefore more readily eaten by the rodents when it is applied to their bait. Care must be taken, of course, that it is not placed in the way of children or domestic animals. When poison can not be used, trapping is suggested as the next best method to be employed.

In addition to the property destruction they cause, rats tend to spread disease, and from every standpoint they are an unmitigated nuisance. A nation-wide rat extermination campaign might be considered as an aid to unemployment relief.

IN MEMORY

On the night of February 24, 1931, the grim reaper, death, took from our midst our beloved daughter and sister, Helen, aged 18 years. She had been a constant sufferer for the past ten years with heart trouble. She was confined to her bed a great part of the time. Despite her suffering she was always cheerful and ready with her bright smile to give her family courage. Her death was not unexpected, still we had hoped to keep her for a few years more. Her death adds only one more to the earth's countless millions who have gone down into the tomb.

We have God's promise, all that are in the grave shall hear the voice of "The Son of Man" and come forth. Then shall be fulfilled the promise, O, death, where is thy sting? O, grave where is thy victory?

When we see a precious blossom
That we tendered with such care
Rudely taken from our bosom,
How our aching hearts despair.
Round its little grave we linger
'Til the setting sun is low,
Feeling all our hopes have perished
With the flower we cherished so.

Yes, they sleep, but not forever,
In the lone and silent grave.
Blessed promise, they shall waken!
Jesus died the lost to save
In the dawning of the morning
When this troubled night is o'er
All these buds in beauty blooming
Will rejoice to see once more.

I Am Certainly Glad I Started Taking Ferrac

Mrs. Rose Belle Morris Says She Feels Almost Like A New Person Now

Taken from 20 feet beneath the surface of the earth and impregnated with chemicals given to it millions of years ago by volcanic eruption, Ferrac is the most mystifying compound ever offered ailing humanity. Without alcohol, opiates, erbs, barks or drugs of any kind, it is truly nature's prescription, at times embarking into such phenominal channels of relief as to be actually startling in character. Read the following statement recently made by Mrs. Rose Bell Morris, 906 Gordon Place, Birmingham.

"I certainly suffered with stomach trouble before I started Ferrac. I couldn't eat anything hardly without dreading the misery I knew would follow. I lost weight; was terribly nervous; slept poorly and was so weak and rundown that I felt like I couldn't stand it much longer. As no medicines I tried seemed to do me any lasting good, I decided to leave off drugs entirely and try Ferrac, and what blessed relief came to me I have gained about 12 pounds; have a perfectly wonderful appetite without a trace of my old stomach trouble and my whole system is built up and strengthened. I hardly know I have any nerves now and I sleep like a tired child. I will always thank the day I started this wonderful Ferrac."

Ferrac is on sale in all good drug stores, or if your druggist can not supply you send $1.00 to the Greenville Products Co., Greenville, Ala.—adv.

Notice To Poultrymen

The Poultry Department at Auburn, in recent communication with County Agent Stapp, has asked him to call to poultrymen's attention the value of sanitary porches for baby chicks.

Mr. Stapp advises that sanitary porches built ten feet wide by the length of the brooder house, floored with 1-4 inch hardware cloth and walled up and covered with 1-inch poultry netting, and same placed in front of brooder house so that the floor of the porch is of the same elevation as that of the brooder house, will give the chicks plenty range and keep them off the ground until they are ten to twelve weeks of age.

After chicks are ten to twelve weeks of age they are very resistant to cocidiosis and other diseases and parasites. Mr. Stapp advises that good sanitary porches can be built for a small amount of money and if properly built can be stored for use from year to year.

POULTRYMEN SHOULD BUY CHICKS OF HIGHEST QUALITY

Breeding this year will account above all other factors, if the poultry-raiser is to make a success of his business. Only good flocks will be able to show a profit, authorities are advising poultrymen of the United States. Flocks of inferior poultry are going to be driven hard during the next few months to bring a profit.

The reason for this is that the poultry business has hit the doldrums of low prices. During the last few years, eggs and poultry commanded such good prices that almost any flock cared for with any degree of intelligence would produce an annual profit. But now the picture has changed, temporarily.

Poultry-raisers and farmers who keep flocks as a side-line are being warned to steer clear of the trap of cheap chicks, purchased with low price as the deciding consideration. If it was ever business suicide to buy the cheapest instead of the best, it is this year, say leaders in the industry.

Instead, poultrymen should plan to buy chicks of the highest quality, rather than low-priced ones, of doubtful ancestry. It will be much more profitable and satisfactory next fall to own a fine flock of high quality pullets, bred in the purple. Every pullet of breeding and quality can be depended upon to deliver a profit during the coming fall and winter.

To insure profitable flocks, composed of birds bred for quality, and also to make certain fair business dealings, leading hatcheries of the United States are operating together under the slogan "Hatchery Chicks for Greater Profits." They are making it possible for the poultryman and farmer to raise a uniform flock, all birds being of the same age and breed and of known quality. The result is greater convenience, safety, certainty and economy and a sure profit at the end of the season.

Help the Railways to recover their Earning Capacity . . . .

The general public does not seem to realize, or fully appreciate, that the railroads are not earning what their investment calls for, or even what the law of the land permits them to earn.

Under this law they may earn 5¾ percent on the value of their property (there is no "guarantee"), but for the past ten years they have never reached this in any single year, and the average for these years has been only slightly above four percent—a return entirely inadequate for a vital industry. This has resulted notwithstanding the railroads have reduced their expenses by 22.7 percent.

Among the causes for this shortage have been reductions in freight rates (amounting to 15.6 percent) and a decline in traffic due to competing forms of transportation—pipe lines, waterways, highways—which are either subsidized by governmental aid or are not tied down by the same degree of restrictions as to regulation, supervision and taxation that the railroads are.

The public is entitled to the form of transportation it prefers, but that preference should be expressed only after all conditions are considered. At present the conditions are grossly inequitable.

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

The railroads, because of their large investments, their important payrolls, their heavy purchases, their enormous taxes, and their indispensible part in the development and progress of this country, have some claim to public patronage if they can give satisfactory service—which they are doing. They have a right to equal and fair treatment. They have a right to urge that competitors in the public transportation business shall not be unduly favored. They have a right to ask for equal conditions in the field of competition. This they are asking for—and nothing more.

You can help them by traveling and shipping by train, and by insisting that they be given fair and just treatment.

KIDS AID RED CROSS

Successful efforts of a group of eight children in Elizabeth, N. J., to raise money for the Red Cross were rewarded by a letter of congratulation from President Hoover a few days ago, in reply to one from Anne Warner-Burnham, 10-year-old leader of the group who wrote:

My Dear Mr. Hoover

I am writing to tell you about a play we gave for the benefit of the Red Cross, because I think you may tell other children about it. If lots of kids everywhere give plays they can get lots of money to help the poor people who need food and clothing. They do not need to be very old to do it, because I am only ten. Marilyn Whitlock, Ann Whittemore, Jane Kessler, Ann Cary, Ann McGregory, Robinson and Christine Mackey, who were in the play too, are all about ten. We gave a Punch and Judy show and movies, but the movies didn't work. We sold lemonade and fudge. We charged 2 cents admission and made $6.31. We gave the money to the American Red Cross chapter in Elizabeth.

Yours truly,
Anne Warner Burnham.

Such actions on the part of children can not be too strongly encouraged, not only because of the immediate benefits to those who are helped, but also for their value in developing a humane and chartiable spirit in the young people themselves

And if the present call of the unfortunate shall serve to foster such a spirit among both old and young, it will again illustrate Shakespeare's line, "sweet are the uses of adversity."

The Legislature and Its Grist

By Bob Vail

Representative Burns Parker who looks quite ably after the interests of Cleburne County in the State Legislature, is being widely heralded as a candidate for Congress from the revamped Fifth District in the 1932 campaign. Mr. Parker is one of the most popular men in the Lower House of the Alabama General Assembly, and is looked upon as not only one of the best debaters, but the wag of the House. Well versed in parliamentary procedure, and well informed on political subjects, he exerts considerable force in that body. Mr. Parker is a militant Democrat and made speeches in behalf of the party in both 1928 and 1930, in many sections of Alabama. His speeches left no doubt as to where he stood on the issues of the day. He is a lawyer and has served as solicitor. Mr. Parker is well equipped to serve Alabama in the Halls of Congress.

OLD FLOWER RECLAIMED IN VERBENA, ALA.

Mrs. Lila Sheppard Restoring Beauty To Grounds Of Old Verbena Home

As one passes through Verbena, Alabama on the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway, going south, they will have their eyes attracted to the left, just after passing through the town, by an old home, on a rise, with large oak trees shading it, and a small summer house at the foot of the hill in the foreground. Then still more in the foreground they will see a flower garden, neatly and attractively arranged.

This flower garden is the work done under the direction of Mrs. Lila W. Sheppard, who resides in the stately old home mentioned above and carrying the name of Hill Crest. Mrs. Sheppard is endeavoring to make that nest of flowers as much the same as it was something like thirty odd years ago, by her mother. Mrs. Sheppard was kind enough to send the News a poem for publication in regard to her flower garden. It is as follows:

While seated in the flower garden on a rock.
I had a most delightful shock
As my eyes slowly strayed across the ditch.
The sight I beheld would any eye bewitch
In a loamy mound, all billowy white
Was something I had looked for, with all my might.
Spirea, my mother planted, thirty years ago.
And. Oh! She did love it so!
First to bloom in the early spring.
Such a dainty, sweet, pretty thing.
If it could weep, I am sure it would shed tears
At the trouble it has had, all of these years.
Trying its best to keep alive,
Where honeysuckle, bramboo, and wisteria thrive.
Bulbs, I found in profusion, everywhere.
They blossomed away, and seemed not to care.
The roses stayed where they were planted,
Making for the birds a wilderness, enchanted.
The Tiger lily was rightly named,
All other plants in its path were maimed.
It even dared to cross the road,
Have given them away, by the load.
In the midst of this dear old flower garden I have a dove-cote for rent,
And when it is filled with bluebirds,
Then my heart will be content.
—Mrs. Lila W. Sheppard.

HOME-MAKING EDUCATION IN THE JEMISON HIGH SCHOOL

By Miss Leacy Newell, Teacher of Home Economics

The evolution of Home-Making Education is as interesting as the evolution of the scientific inventions of today. When the work was first put into the schools, only cooking and sewing were taught, that is, just the preparation of food and the fundamentals of sewing. Later the course was known as Domestic Science, and as the work grew and more phases of home making were added, it was given the name of Home Economics. The field has broadened, and today it includes all phases of home making. It is this home making course that Jemison High School offers its pupils.

Three years of Home Economics are offered to the students. The chief purpose of the first years' work is the personal development of the high school girl and the solving of her personal problems. This instruction is given in units on Personal Relationships, House, Clothing and Foods.

The second years work is based on the interest, ideals and skill developed during the first year. Family living and art applied to home and clothing are emphasized. The units offered this year are Health of the Family, Foods, Family Relationships, Applied Art, and Clothing.

The third year instruction given in the other two years is made use of with emphasis on organization and management problems of home making. The units are Home Management, Child Development, House, Clothing and Foods.

School instruction produces small results unless practical application is made. Home Economics has been criticized because the girls did not put into operation at home the knowledge that they were supposed to have gained at school.

It is through the home project work that interest in home work is stimulated. In this phase, a minimum of 90 hours is required of every girl taking vocational Home Making Education. One-half unit of credit may be given on the home project provided the girl does one hundred and fifty hours of high grade work, and that includes three phases of Home Economics in their projects. A girl must also be in good scholastic standing before she is allowed this extra credit in home work. Home projects help the teacher and the student. The teacher finds out if she is teaching material that may be used by the girl and the girl finds out how well she is understanding school instruction, and whether or not she is able to use it at home.

Last year (1929-'30) Jemison High School won first and second honors in home economic project work in the contest held at Alabama College, Montevallo, Alabama. The girls winning these honors for the school were Cuba Littleton and Doris Dennis.

Rooms and equipment are very important factors in teaching Home Making. Jemison High School has three rooms set apart for this purpose. One is used for a clothing laboratory; the second is the dining room; and the third is the foods laboratory. These rooms should be as attratcive, sanitary and convenient as possible. The foods laboratory is divided into unit kitchens. Each unit kitchen is equipped as a single kitchen in order that the girls may become experienced in preparing and serving food under as nearly the same conditions as she would at home.

Jemison High School began to equip their dining room last year. At present it has only a table, eight chairs, a minimum amount of china and community plate. The girls in the House classes have stained and waxed the dining room floor and have made curtains for the windows.

All students are interested in improving the entire department. In the future, they hope to add a buffet and serving table to the dining room suite, and to get a picture, rugs and wall hangings to enhance the beauty of the room.

The department has a library of 35 volumes and five monthly magazines related to different phases of the work are subscribed to by the department.

In connection with this school work the teacher of Home Economics teaches an Evening School in an adjoining community to the adult ladies. Adult classes consist of fifteen lessons on some phase of Home Economics. This year the class was taught in Pleasant Grove community. Twenty-three girls and ladies enrolled for the course. Lessons were taught in foods and Home Improvement.

Below are some stories related to Home Economics work as told by the girls:

IMPROVEMENT THROUGH PROJECT WORK

One of the most interesting features of a school girl's life is the probability of having a Home Economics Course. It is one that not only enables her to become better acquainted with the social and economic problems of every day life, but helps her in such a way whereas she will be better prepared to solve them, provided they should ever come her way.

This year quite a bit of interest and enthusiasm has been created in our school due to the fact that so many of the girls are doing home project work. This is a phase of Home Economics that may be considered as most outstanding for it is said that if skill is to be developed or a habit acquired, wheat we learn must be practiced in some place other than the inside of the school room. Quite a number of criticisms have previously been made regarding this fact, but, today, I think Home Economics has indeed proven itself to be a desirable and satisfactory course.

My projects for this year deal with Health, Home Improvement and Food. Two of these I have already completed, while the third, I'm just beginning. My object for home improvement was to repaint and re-arrange the furniture in my kitchen. To think of it one might consider it an easy task, but the style of furniture with which I had to deal, dates back to the time when my grandmother first began housekeeping. The stove was a large wood range. A non-painted safe answered for a cabinet. The linoleum on the floor had a worn, dirty appearance for the time of its attractiveness was a thing of the past. In rearranging the furniture, I substituted for the wood range an oil stove, and succeeded in making a rather attractive cabinet out of the safe. The color scheme that I used in painting was light cream and green. The linoleum, I painted green, bordered with cream, the safe, cream, lined inside with green, and the stove cream and green. I also painted the table cream and green, and I'm using light washable curtains, which harmonize with the color of the furniture.

For my mother and me the result of this work has been exceedingly great. It not only saves much time and labor, but has supplied us with a kitchen we will not feel ashamed of.

Franklin's Life And Activities Are Recalled And Reviewed

As Philosopher, Scientist, Statesman, Author and Patriot, Franklin's Achievements Were Hailed Throughout The World

Next to George Washington, Benjamin Franklin was the best known American of the 18th Century. He was renowned wherever civilized men gathered, in the circles of philosophy, science and politics as one of the foremost men of his time. His personality was so delightful that everyone who met him was charmed. His versatility seems to have known no bounds, but it was through his sound judgment, common sense and clear thinking that he was able to attain his striking success. So great and varied are his achievements that only a comprehensive work could do justice to his many accomplishments.

This great hero of the Revolutionary War and warm friend of Washington, was born in Boston, on January 17, 1706. The 225th anniversary of Franklin's birth is the occasion for a statement from the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission which pays tribute to the memory of the great American and calls upon all his countrymen to honor him. The service that Franklin rendered to his country during the struggle for liberty is invaluable. The aid which he obtained from France insured to the United States the lasting benefits of the victories which Washington won on the battlefield. In fact, if Franklin had not been able to persuade the French to come to the assistance of the colonies, perhaps Yorktown never would have taken place.

When young Benjamin was eight years old his father sent him to a grammar school and later to a somewhat technical institution in Boston where he learned arithmetic. This was the extent of the boy's schooling, for when he was ten his father set him to making candles. This was so distasteful to the lad that the elder Franklin became apprehensive lest he run away to sea. To forestall anything of this sort Benjamin was apprenticed to his half brother, James, who was a printer. Here his mind developed rapidly. At his brother's shop be came in contact with the liberal element of Boston and from his reading of Locke, Bunyan, Plutarch, Defoe and Mather he imbibed a broadening philsophy. "The New England Courant," published by James and Benjamin, was called the "first sensational newspaper in America."

But trouble was brewing, and, in 1723, the 17 year old Benjamin quarrelled with his brother and went to Philadelphia. Everyone is familiar with the story of Franklin's entrance into that city which has been pictured in school books to the great amusement of many young readers. As he walked down the street eating from a loaf of bread carried under his arm he must have presented an appearance far from suggestive of the famous man he was destined to become.

Obtaining employment in the Quaker City, Franklin soon attracted the attention of William Keith, the Governor of Pennsylvania, who persuaded him to go to London to study and to purchase equipment for a printing office. Keith promised the boy letters of introduction and credit, but when Franklin arrived in London he found that the Governor had not kept his word. Almost penniless and without friends in that city, his condition was acute, but he soon obtained employment and made many friends. One of these was a wealthy Quaker merchant named Denham who offered the youth a position in a store he was opening in Philadelphia. Accordingly, Franklin returned to that city in 1726 after having spent nearly two years in London. Within a short time Denham died, and Franklin found himself out of a job, but this may have been a good thing for the youth because his next step was an important one.

In 1728 Franklin established a printing house with Hugh Meredith, and in ten years made it the most successful business of its kind in America. At this time he also purchased the Pennsylvasia Gazette, a moribund newspaper which under his management gained a one of the most prominent papers in the country. Soon afterward he began to publish his famous "Poor Richard's Almanac" containing the pithy maxims which retain their popularity to this day, and from which he made his fortune. He also became public printer of Pennsylvania, which added to his prestige, and in 1730 he married Deborah Read with whom he had fallen in love some years before.

Durign the next twenty years Franklin's popularity and activity steadily increased. He organized and became prominent in the Leatherapron Club, which he called the Junto and in which he learned the essentials of leadership. He organized the first fire company in Philadelphia, founded the American Philosophical Society, became postmaster of Philadelphia, invented a stove, acquired interests in several of the Continental colonies and in Jamaica and became clerk of the Pennsylvania assembly.

In 1745 he began to experiment with a Leyden jar sent to him from England and his investigations in this field led to the discovery which made him famous as a scientist. Every schoolboy is familiar with Franklin's experiments with a kite and key by which he made the identiifcation of lightning and electricity, and which he was the first to prove. He also framed the theory of two kinds of electricity which he called negative and positive—a theory that still holds. With the lightning rod which he invented, he was able to overcome to some extent the devastating effects of lightning, and this made him the best known scientist of th day.

In the Pennsylvania assembly, he had been prominent in the fight to obtain taxes from the proprietary interests of the Penns, and in 1757 he was sent to England to lay the case before the throne. Here he was received cordially by his old friends and he made many new ones. After five years he returned to the colonies only to be sent back to England to protest the imposition of the Stamp Act. He was called to testify in a famous examination before the House of Commons in which his tact and ability was largely responsible in having the obnoxious act repealed. He became the best known American in Europe and was popular everywhere.

Franklin returned to America in time to attend the first Continental Congress as a delegate from Pennsylvania. As a member of that body he was appointed to the committee which drafted the Declaration of Independence. He was made postmaster general of the colonies, and soon afterward went to France to secure the aid of that nation. By the French he was received enthusiastically, and they regarded him as one of the four greatest men in all history. This popularity was so great that the British were irked by it, but it enabled him to obtain the much-needed money for the American treasury. When the war was over, he was called upon to act as one of the peace commissioners, and in framing the Treaty of Paris, Franklin's activities were most eminent and useful. In 1785 he returned to Philadelphia, but he had one more important service to perform for his country. This was his participation as a delegate from Pennsylvania, in the Constitutional Convention of 1787. He was then 81 years old and his age prevented him from taking part in the debates of that body. The influence he weilded in keeping the convention in order, however, is immeasurable.

On April 17, 1790, three years after he'd seen the government of his country firmly established, the life of Benjamin Franklin came to a close. Philosopher, statesman, philantropist, writer, patriot, and scientist, he was one of the most remarkable men of the age. He admired and loved Washington whose measure he seems to have accuartely taken, for in his will he wrote: "My fine crab-tree walking stick, with a gold head curiously wrought in the form of the cap of liberty, I give to my friend and the friend of mankind, General Washington. If it were a sceptre, he has merited it and would become it."

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

DON'T BUY SPECTACLES AND TINWARE TOGETHER

The things you can buy at the "five and ten" nowadays are simply wonderful. But Dr. Christmas Seal advises against picking out your own spectacles. Neither does he favor sending to a mail order house that guarantees a fit and offers wonderful values in genuine tortoise shell rims for $3.98. These supply houses may back up their guaranty so far as you know; but who is the judge of whether or not your eyes are fitted?

About nine in ten of those who do not wear spectacles in their youth have to take to them about age 45 because of a natural process of lessened elasticity in the crystalline lens of the eye. The people who guarantee glasses are taking a chance on that. But do you want to take a chance for the sake of a possible saving of five dollars. You expect to use your eyes half a lifetime yet. Go to an expert right in your home town or your county seat and make sure that the spectacles you buy are a genuine aid to your valuable eyes. Don't be content with "the best for the money," get the best that money can buy. Remember your eyes are the only eyes you will ever have.

"INSIDE" INFORMATION

Sirups left over from cooking fruits and from canned fruits may be used to sweeten punch and other fruit drinks.

Try a mock duck when you want a palatable, inexpensive, baked meat. It's really a flank steak, stuffed with a bread crumb dressing, rolled, tied, and baked. Be sure to roll lengthwise so that in carving the meat is cut across the muscles.

The reason it is better for a child to learn to eat cereals and fruits without sugar is that many sweet foods spoil the appetite for other foods that are needed, and by adding sugar to everything a taste for sweet foods is needlessly developed. Any candy or sweet foods should be given sparingly at the end of a meal.

The oil in "dustless" cloths may be renewed by applying a few drops of kerosene or light lubricating oil on one corner, rolling the cloth, and letting it stand until the oil has spread evenly. Or add a little oil to the rinsing water after washing the duster. One tablespoon of kerosene or one half tablespoon of light lubricating oil to one quart of water gives good results.

French toast is a breakfast or luncheon dish, sure to be popular with the family. Beat 2 eggs and add from one-half to three-fourths cup of milk, and a little salt. Cut well-baked, exen-textured, rather dry bread into uniform slices about one-fourth of an inch thick. Dip these into the egg mixture, until well penetrated, drain, and fry at once in butter or good-flavored fat in a heavy smooth skillet. Use moderate heat and let the toast become golden brown before turning. Serve at once with bacon or with sirup or some other sweet.

FILING TAX EXEMPT ON DROUTH LOAN MORTGAGES

The Alabama Legislature has passed and Gov. Miller has signed a bill exempting farmers from paying privilege tax for filing the mortgages they give to obtain relief loans from the Federal Government.

Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of Agriculture and Industries and chairman of the Alabama Drouth Relief Committee, has mailed copies of the bill to probate judges, county agents, and chairmen of Drouth Relief Committees of the State. The bill reads:

Be It Enacted by the Legislature of Alabama: Section 1. That no filing tax as required by Section 4 1-2 of Act No 172, approved August 2, 1923, shall be required or collected for filing for record any mortgage given to secure a loan or money to drouth, flood or storm suffers made under any act of Congress of the United States.

14,000 Veterans Apply For Loans

Lieut. Col. Everett J. Jackson, head of the local Veterans' Bureau, said Monday that approximately 14,000 World War veterans in Alabama had applied for loans under the new compensation act, according to information he has received from the district office in Birmingham.

The large number of applications received from the start, it was said, will delay the receipt of checks for about two weeks to 20 days from the date of the application.

Checks coming to each veteran will average about $400. There are from 65,000 to 80,000 ex-service men in Alabama.

LEGIONNAIRES TO PLAN FOR ANNUAL OUTING

Interesting Meeting Held In Clanton Last Monday Night

Chilton County Post No. 6 of the American Legion met in a call meeting Friday night, March 13th. There was a large crowd present, and the local post was assigned Judson Sneed as speaker for the meeting, but by some cause unknown to the post, he failed to come. Legionnaire Prof. L. C. Warr made a fine address to the post. Also, Prof Earl Thomas of the Isabella High School made an excellent address. Prof. Thomas gave some good reasons why he was a Legionnaire and reviews of the war time days in France. War Risk Insurance was explained by the local Commander, Joe N. Calloway.

Good music was enjoyed by all present, furnished by Chasteen and Culp Brother's string band. They have been playing at these meetings for some time and are greatly appreciated by the members. The question of organizing a Ladies' Auxiliary in connection with the local post was brought up for discussion among the members. It is hoped to have that unit working in this county in the very near future. All ex-soldiers of the World War are requested to be at the next meeting, which will be the first Monday night in April. Plans of the Annual Fish Fry on that date, to be held some time in April, will be made. All citizens of Chilton County have a hearty welcome to meet with the local post. They are trying to cooperate with all just and honorable causes tending their help as far as possible to all to make this county, state and nation a better place in which to live. This reprot is from V. C. McKee, Post Adjt., Chilton County Post No. 6.

From Clanton, it is fifteen miles to the river on this road, nine miles of which is paved, the remaining six miles a fine gravel highway, with a modern motorized ferry connecting the Chilton side with the Coosa side, which is in good condition now, and will be until a heavy rainfall.

One of Clanton oldest residents was rushed to the Central Alabama Hospital in Clanton last Sunday morning as the result of an automobile accident which occurred at the intersection on the Birmingham highway near the Texaco Filling Station. Wiley Ramsey received several severe cuts on the head when struck by glass from the windshield of the car in which he was riding, said to have been driven by W. A. Kemp.

The Kemp car was attempting to cross the highway, returning from church, when a car, said to have been driven by a Mr. Bennette, manager of the Exchange Hotel in Montgomery, was also passing on the highway. The cars collided, throwing Mr. Ramsey, an aged citizen of Clanton, against the wind-shield. SCHOOLS IN THIS COUNTY TO CONTINUE

County Teachers Commended On Act of Unselfishness To Aid In Problem

The school teachers of Chilton County are receiving a hearty commendation for their most unselfish move in agreeing to teach school in this county for the remainder of the regular school term, although their salaries will probably be late in arriving.

At a meeting held at the high school in Clanton last Friday immediately following the activities of the Field Day here, all teachers in this county and the board of education were present. The purpose of the meeting was to put before the teachers the problem that was facing the county on a short school term on account of a lack of funds to carry on.

The meeting was short and brief, as the teachers in a most unselfish and hearty response declared they would continue to give their time and efforts as usual to the schools and complete the unexpired school term this year, in view of the fact that they will have to wait for their salaries for the rest of the term, which is something like two months. They stated unanimously to this agreement, saying they believed in the State and that it would meet its obligations without fail. They also went further to say that they had rather give their time, than to have the schools of this county closed and the children deprived of their rights.

PUTTING CHILTON ON THE MAP IN A BIG WAY BY BOOSTING

Letters, Telephone Calls, Personal Calls And Comments Over The Entire Country Tell Of Effects Of Booster Edition

That Chilton County is now more on the map than ever before since the Chilton County News published the special Chilton County Booster Edition February 26, is evidenced by the letters, telephone calls, and editorial comments from many parts of the United States, speaking extremely favorably on this county.

For the past three weeks, since the publication of the Booster Edition, the News has been receiving by various methods some of the most encouraging and favorable comments on Chilton County that it has ever received before. The News has been given the reputation of putting Chilton County over in a big way as far as advertising is concerned, for the county. The News has long ago realized that, Chilton County has some of the most outstanding possibilities of any county in Alabama, and it was the idea of telling the outside world of these facts, that the special Booster Edition was published.

It was estimated at the time of the publication that copies would go into every state in the union, and at this time, the News believes it can truthfully say that that has occurred.

From Steamboat Springs, Colorado comes the following comment addressed to the News: "A friend of mine who lives in Clanton, sent me a copy of your Chilton County News Booster Edition and if I may, I want to say that I have never seen such a live paper for a town the size of Clanton. I am interested in the South and especially so in Alabama. I have lived in Colorado all my life and of course know nothing about the South except that which I have been told and what I have read. If nothing prevents, I intend to make Alabama my future home."

From Piave, Miss., cames the following: "Am sending thanks for the copy of the special edition of the News. You can not know just how much I enjoyed reading it. Really made me homesick to see Thorsby and all the folks again. Think the News puts out a wonderful newspaper, and long to be back in Chil-

THIRD HUSBAND IS VICTIM OF HIS THIRD WIFE

W. B. Harper Shot By Wife At His Home Near Mt. Creek Sunday

As the result of some domestic troubles, W. B. Harper, age 70 years, was shot and instantly killed by his wife at their home near Mountain Creek early last Sunday morning, according to information received here.

According to the story given the News, Harper had quarreled with his wife and was under the influence of liquor at the time, abusing a child in the home and threatening to "clean out the whole family." Harper is said to have started to get a gun, when Mrs. Harper secured a shotgun and shot him, the entire charge taking effect in his back, just between the shoulder blades, killing him instantly.

There was only one child, a boy, at home at the time, and he is said to have ran from the house when the father threatened the family. A coroner's inquest was held by Coroner J. Mell Martin and a verdict of justifiable homicide was rendered, according to the information. At the time of this writing, no charge has been placed against Mrs. Harper.

Funeral services for the victim of the quarrel were held Sunday afternoon at Mountain Creek. Harper had been married three times, as had Mrs. Harper.

The contest, with prizes totalling $1,000, the first prize being $500, was open to anyone. The entrants were to write a letter on the use of this Mennen Baby Oil and give three names that were suitable to this oil, since it was just being manufactured, and no name had been given it. The best letter, on the use of this oil would win the first prize, the next best would win second prize and so on. The contest took place in New York City and the judges were leading doctors.
